Blessed readers,

The commander-in-chief of the Vedantic army the great Adishankaracharya, in whose heart and tongue unremittingly resounded the eternal melody of Vedic scriptures in its entirety, has very humbly apologized to Shiva and Devi in two excellent hymns. viz., 'Śivāparādhakṣhamāpanastotram' and 'Devīparādhakṣhamāpanastotram' in two different ways. In the former he seeks pardon for not having remembered Shiva due to the very nature of the individual soul which is born human. In the latter he expresses his ignorance, inability and conviction, ignorance of the procedure of invoking the Divine Mother, inability to do so even after being initiated into the procedure, and conviction that devotion to the Divine Mother removes all pain and sorrow.

This admission of the great avatāra of Shiva has been the flight of all great masters of Spirituality and continues to be so even to this day. This is all the more true in the case of scientists and poets like Albert Einstein and Tagore who prefer to simply express their awe at the inexplicability and infinity of the origin of this phenomenal creation. The Upanishads too surrender helplessly and declare, "yato vāco nivartante aprāpya manogā saha", "from where words boomerang in helpless silence along with the mind." It is therefore justified that the Divine is perceived by many in altogether diverse forms and concepts. One such concept which is universally accepted as the most powerful one to establish the most loving, materially and spiritually fruitful bond with the unseen 'being' of the Divine is, the concept of God as 'the Divine Mother of the Universe - Jagannātha, Maa, Māthā or Devī'.

Among countless works dedicated to this form of God, ranging from the Vedas (including the Upanishads) and the Puranas, with special mention of the Śrīmaddevībhāgavatamahāpurāṇam and the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇam to the endless individually composed hymns in addition to the literary works by various authors like Kālidāsa, The Tripurā Rahasyam or Hanitāyanasamhitā stands out as an exhaustive and highly analytical treatise on the glory of the Divine Mother and Her unity with the 'Self' of all.

The term 'rahasyam' signifies 'a secret' and Tripurā denotes The Divine Mother presiding over all perceptions of the phenomenal Universe which are three-some in nature.

- ① The Trinity - Brahmā - Viṣṇu - Maheshwara
- ② Their powers - Creation - Preservation - Dissolution
- ③ The modes of nature - Sattva - Rajas - Tamas
(Sublime) - (Passionate) - (Nescient)
- ④ The states of being - Jāgrat - Swapnā - Susupti
(Waking) - (Dream) - (Deep Sleep)
- ⑤ The Shaktis or powers - Icchā - Jñāna - Kriyā (Desire) - (Knowledge) - (Action)

and so on.

It is well known that advanced spiritual practices have always been held 'secret' to ensure that the recipient is truly eligible (Yogya) for the 'treasure' he aspires to receive. This is expressed by Agastya Rishi to Lord Hanagreeva in the prelude to the Lalitāsahasranāmastotram when he implores Lord Hanagreeva to impart the same to him. He thereby enquires whether he had not yet been initiated into the chanting of this hymn because he was not eligible to receive the same. Sri Krishna too repeatedly mentions in the Ujita (4-3 & 9-1) that he is imparting a highly secret knowledge to Arjuna only because Arjuna has the requisite eligibility for the same.

By the Grace and Ordinance of The Divine Mother we have undertaken this task of translating this wonderful work into English for the benefit of all eligible aspirants who are comfortable with the English language.

Sri T.B. Lakshman Rao, who has several extempore compositions of hymns in classical Sanskrit to his credit and who is a recipient of the blessings of several saints and the grace of Divine Mother has not just translated the work into English but as a devout practitioner of Sri Vidya, extracted the essence of many verses like a bee drawing nectar from flowers.

Sri E. K. Das, professor of English, has been truly blessed by Sri Lalita Mahātripurasundarī to edit the entire translation not just as a proof reader but as an active co-translator by providing refined expressions to the translated content.

Special blessings and grace are due to Sri D. N. Anand, former Accountant General of Karnataka and Vice President, National Education Society, whose constant encouragement and active presence have been indispensable in the completion of the work.

The cover design by Sri B. Lakshman, Creative Concepts, Bangalore, the meticulous proof reading by Sri S. N. Prānēśa and the elegant printing by Sri B. N. Nataraj, Sri Nityamanda Printers have all added indelible lustre to the divine work, and thereby made the contributors eligible for the incessant grace of Divine Mother.

With overwhelming gratitude we offer this book traditionally into the 'vāmakarabala', left palm of Sri Rajarajeshvarī chanting guhyaṭiguhyagoptṛī tram grhaṇāsmakṛtam tepam siddhīrbhavaru vo devi tvaṭprasādātsureswari

'You are the protector of the most occult secrets, O Divine Mother! Accept this offering of ours. May we achieve the ultimate goal of life by Thy Grace."

We pray to Divine Mother Rajarajeshvari

We pray to Divine Mother Sri Jnanakshi
Rajarajeshvari Mahatripurasundari to reveal
Her Presence to every reader of every copy of this book, in all Her grandeur and grace them with experiential knowledge of Her Own Self.

Introduction

त्रिपुरां कुरुनिधिमीडेऽरुणश्रियं कामराजविद्धाङ्गीम् ।
त्रिगुणैर्देवैर्निनुतामैकान्तां बिन्दुगां महारम्भाम् ॥

— श्री भासुरानन्दनाथः

Śrī Tripurārahasyam is a magnificent text of Śākta tradition that extolls the Glory of Śrī Tripurāsundarī. This work is attributed to Sage Sumedha (Hārītāyana), who composed it as initiated and instructed by Śrī Paraśurāma. Originally Lord Mahādeva narrated it to Śrī Viṣṇu and Śrī Viṣṇu to Brahmā. On the earth it was narrated by Guru Dattātreya to Śrī Paraśurāma. Sage Sumedha, who was Alarka in his previous birth, blessed by Śrī Bālāmbikā, was bestowed to compose this work by virtue of his having addressed his mother as "Ai, Ai" (ऐ, ऐ), the seed letter of learning without the dot (bindu / anusvara).

Śrī Tripurārahasyam has three portions. Viz: Māhātmyakhaṇḍam, Tīrānakhaṇḍam and Charyākhaṇḍam. The Jñānakhāṇḍam explains lucidly the basics relating to the Absolute Reality, the unreality of the world and the Sādhana's necessary at various levels in order to attain the highest knowledge. The Charyākhaṇḍam, ^{which} is not traceable is said to contain the rules of ritual conduct. The Māhātmyakhāṇḍam, which is the major portion of Śrī Tripurārahasyam, not only includes the glory of the Śrī Māhātmyam and the grandeur of Śrī Lalitopākhyānam but also provides many legends and secrets that enable a clear understanding of the concepts of Śrīvidyā.

The immaculate functioning of the universe confirms the existence of a Transcendent Superpower which has no name, form or gender and which causes, cares and consumes this creation. To facilitate the ignorant to grasp the Transcendent which is Pure Consciousness and Bliss, the Seers have perceived by their penance several forms of the Almighty. The Śākta philosophy believes in the Motherly manifestation of the Supreme power. The Purāṇas and texts like Śrī Tripurārahasyam, through several anecdotes and allusions bring home the uniqueness of the Transcendental Cosmic Consciousness which is not different from the consciousness of the individual being. The method of realising the non-difference is elaborated in the sacred texts. The triumph of the divine over the demon is the fundamental issue tackled in all the scriptures. Lengthy descriptions of prolonged fierce battle, probably convey the message that it is a challenging task to subdue the demon in the individual.

The Transcendental Devi has sportively configured the creation combining three aspects such as Sattva, Rajas and Tamas; Sthūla, Sūkṣma and Kāraṇa; Ichhā, Jñāna and Kriyā and so on and She is the Empress controlling all. All activities fall under the domain of Ichhā (Desire), Jñāna (Knowledge) and Kriyā (Action). The desire to accomplish a task, invariably requires the necessary knowledge and its actualisation. In the Tripurārahasyam, the desire of Kāma, the Son of Devī Mahālakṣmī, to vanquish Lord Śiva was not accomplished till he acquired, by the blessings of Devī Tripurā, the knowledge of Soubhāgyavidyā. The Devī who controls these triad domains is called Tripurasundarī. The exposition of the Soubhāgya Aṣṭottara is an excellent boon to Her devotees. Similarly many anecdotes have a subtle message to the reader.

The detailed description of the Śrīnagara (Śrīchakra), which is the Abode of Devī is exquisite and enthralling. (See Chapter 56-58). Śrīchakra is the Supreme dynamic mystic diagram that represents both the microcosm and the macrocosm. It is synonymous with the Divine couple Śiva and Śakti. In its ramparts are situated different Saktis who are the embodiments of the various physical, mental and transmental tendencies in the universe and in the human being.

The central point (Bindu) which is the storehouse of the total universal energy, is the ultimate stage where the individual merges with the Devi. Śrī Ādi Śaṅkarācārya in his Tripurasundarī-Vedapādaśiva has categorically concluded the uniqueness of the Consciousness thus:

“साधकः सततं कुशदिक्ष्यं श्रीचक्रदेहयैः ।

तथा देव्यात्मनोरैक्यमेतावदनुशासनम् । stanza 90 ॥

The devotee has to identify his body with the Sri-chakra and his soul with the Devi.”

Bhaṇḍāsura, who represents the ugly individual ego, after enjoying the cravings of his senses, desperately longs for merger with Devi and is finally liberated. The esoteric implication in the concept of Devi is brought-out beyond doubt in the following stanzas of Śrī Tripurārahayam, chapter 46 - stanzas 21-23.

तदनु प्रचक्षाऽऽजौ चक्रराजमहारथः ॥ 21 ॥
 नवपर्वसमायुक्तौ ह्यणिमाद्याभिश्रुतः ।
 मुक्ताच्छत्रमहोन्नमः पद्मकैतुध्वजौच्छ्रयः ॥ 22 ॥
 नवरत्नसमाकीर्ण इन्द्रियात्माऽश्वयोजितः ।
 वाहयन्ती तं रथेन्द्रं महान्निपुरसुन्दरी ॥ 23 ॥

Devī Tripurasundarī is the charioteer of the human body drawn by the sensory horses.

The same message is in Bhagavadgītā, Chapter 18, śloka 61.

“ ईश्वरः सर्वभूतानां हृद्देशीऽर्जुन तिष्ठति ।
 भ्रामयन् सर्वभूतानि यन्त्रारूढानि मायया ॥ ”

The Tripurārahasyam contains many beautiful hymns on Devī. A study of this text is bound to elevate the soul to a level of merger with the Transcendent Reality.

However, the mode of worship, whether external or internal, has to be learnt from an adept in the path.

I consider myself as most fortunate to have had the opportunity to undertake the English translation of Śrī Tripurārahasyam, Mahātmyakhaṇḍam. I offer my humble praṇāmanas at the lotus feet of Mahā-maṇḍalesvara H. H. Śrī Śrī Jayendrajiwari Swāmī, peethadhipati of Kailāśāśrama Mahāsamsthānam, who has blessed, motivated and guided me in my task. I do not see any difference between His love and the grace of Devi Jñānakṣī Rājarājesvarī.

Our gratitude to Professor E.K. Das, who has imparted glitter to the translation by correcting the syntax and suggesting synonyms; to Śrī D. N. Ānand, a practical philosopher, for his continuous encouragement and involvement. Our thanks are also due to Vidvan S. N. Prāṇeśa for meticulously reading the proof of the Sanskrit verses and to Śrī B. Lakshman for developing a sublime cover design for the book. We thank Śrī B. N. Nataraj of Śrī Nityānanda printers and his staff for their excellent execution of the printing. The beauty of the book has been enhanced by many pictures of the Deities and we thank them all who provided them for publication.

We pray and surrender to Devi Śrī Mahātripuraseundarī to pardon the mistakes in the translation and bless one and all.

Publisher's Note

(Second Edition)

By the unbound Grace of Universal Mother Śrī Jñānākṣī Rājarājeśvarī, the benign Sri Shivapuri Baba, the unlimited compassion of His Holiness Parama Puja Sri Sri Sri Tiruchi Mahaswamigal and the consistent encouragement extended by His Holiness Sri Sri Sri Jayendra Puri Mahaswamiji, the second edition of the Māhātmyakhaṇḍa of Śrī Tripurā Rahasyam has reached you, dear devotee.

This second edition is just the tip of the iceberg of the unlimited saṅkalpa of His Holiness Sri Sri Sri Jayendra Puri Mahaswamiji to propagate the scriptural worship of the Divine Mother worldwide and thereby bring about universal wellbeing. This is in addition to the personal guidance which Mahaswamiji is giving to sādhakas and common man at large for universal unity and peace.

In this second edition, which is not different from the first one in basic content, it has been endeavoured meticulously to make the book free from typographical and other errors. The clarity of purport has been enhanced at certain places. This divine task has been executed with utmost devotion by Bhakta Kavi Sri T. B. Lakshmana Rao who had already rendered the original Sanskrit text into English. In addition to the excellent rendering of this work into English in the first edition, it is again Bhakta Kavi Sri T. B. Lakshmana Rao who has undertaken this divine task with the able assistance by Smt. Chandra Venkataramani, a proficient proofreader. May Jaganmātā Śrī Rājarājeśvarī shower Her choicest Grace upon both. Sri Nataraj of Sri Nithyananda Printers has earned Divine Mother's Grace in abundance and the choicest blessings of His Holiness Sri Sri Sri Jayendra Puri Mahaswamiji for the flawless printing of this second edition.

We re-present Śrī Tripurā Rahasyam Māhātmyakhaṇḍam to all devotees of Mother Divine.

श्री त्रिपुरारहस्यम् माहात्म्यखण्डम् Śrī Tripurārahasyam Māhātmyakhaṇḍam

गणेशं विघ्ननाशाय वाणीं वागर्थबुद्धये । गुरुं गूढार्थभानार्थं प्रणमामि सदा मुदा ॥

I incessantly prostrate with joy to Śrī Gaṇeśa to ward off obstacles; to Sarasvatī for obtaining a clear understanding of the word and its meaning; to the Guru to understand the secrets.

प्रथमोऽध्यायः

ॐ नमः कारणानन्दहृद्बीजाकाशगात्रिणे । यत्स्तीलालेशलसिता लोकालोकाण्डरेणवः ॥ १ ॥

Prostrations unto that Lord situated in the seat of the heart (Daharākāśa), who is the cause of creation; who is Bliss; who is Omkāra, and by a speck of whose sport shine the particles of the Universe. 1

यदक्षरं परं ब्रह्म जगन्मालामणिप्रभम् । सर्वं सर्वात्मकं सर्वसारं सर्वपदाश्रयम् ॥ २ ॥

Prostrations unto that Transcendent Lord who is the pendant-gem in the universal necklace; who is eternal and all, who is the soul and essence of all and who is the support of the universe. 2

यदेवाशेषसंसारदलबीजं शिवात्मकम् । शिवरूपं शक्तिरूपं ब्रह्मरूपस्वरूपकम् ॥ ३ ॥
त्रिपुरां परमेशानीं महाप्रलयसाक्षिणीम् । दग्धकामोज्जीवनाय सुधासारां नमाम्यहम् ॥ ४ ॥

Prostrations unto Tripurā the Transcendental Queen who is seed unto the petals of the entire auspicious world, who is Śiva the auspicious, who is Śakti the power, who is Brahma, who is the witness of the immense universal dissolution; who is nectar unto the resuscitation of burnt-up Kāma (the Lord of Love). 3, 4

In the South is the Malaya Mountain whose high peaks obstruct the transit of the Sun. 5

अनेकशृङ्गलीलात्तमहापुरुषवैभवः । स्वाङ्गव्याप्तिपराक्षिप्तमहामेरुमहीत्वकः ॥ ६ ॥

By its many peaks, demonstrating as it were the grandeur of the Great person (Mahāpuruṣa), the Malaya Mountain by its vastness looks despisingly at the great Meru Mountain. 6

नानावृक्षाङ्कुरप्रान्तविश्रान्तघनमण्डलः । मृदुप्रवालविलसच्छविक्षिप्तारुणप्रभः ॥ ७ ॥

On the Malaya Mountain, dense clouds rest at the roots of the trees, whose tender sprouts defame the redness of the Sun by their effulgence. 7

अमरीमृदुगीतात्तभृङ्गीरवसमश्रुतिः । श्रीगन्धगन्धसंरम्भजितनाव्यङ्गसौरभः ॥ ८ ॥

The Malaya Mountain is filled with the melodious music of divine damsels in tune with humming bees and the atmosphere atop rich with the fragrance of sandalwood conquers the perfume of the divine damsels. 8

एलालतापरिमलविलसद्बालमारुतः । अनेकपद्मिनीफुल्लपद्मसंस्थितहंसकः ॥ ९ ॥

The gentle breeze atop the Malaya mountain carries with it the sweet smell of the cardamom creepers. Swans play around the fully blossomed lotuses in the ponds. 9

प्रावृड्जलदसंस्पर्धिगन्धसिन्धुरमण्डलः । भिन्नसिन्धुरदानोद्यद्वासनाभरितान्तरः ॥ १० ॥

The interiors of the Malaya Mountain are filled with the odour of ichor oozing out of the inebriated herd of elephants that rival with rain bearing clouds. 10

सिंहव्याघ्रवराहौघशोभालसदधित्यकः । विस्तीर्णवनखण्डान्तराश्रमोद्यदुपत्यकः ॥ ११ ॥

Atop Malaya Mountain there are herds of lions, tigers, wild boars and below there are vast forests with many hermitages. 11

तापसान्तेवासिवेदघोषधुङ्गमितान्तरः। हुतगव्यघृतामोदपरिबृंहितमारुतः ॥ १२ ॥

The hermitages reverberate with the vedic chants of the disciples of the seers. The breeze there, carries the aroma of the oblations of ghee. 12

वायुकम्पितशाखाग्रबद्धचीरपताककः। क्वचित्तु तरुमूलेषु सुखासनसमाश्रयाः ॥ १३ ॥

The sacred robes of the seers tied to the branches of the trees flutter like flags in the breeze. Some seers are seated under trees. 13

तपस्विनो ध्यानपराश्चित्रार्पितनरा इव। क्वचिद्ब्रह्मपरं जप्यं जपन्तो ब्रह्मवादिनः ॥ १४ ॥

These meditating seers appear still, as in painted pictures. Elsewhere vedāntic seers repeat chants attributed to the Transcendental Being. 14

क्वचिदग्नीहूयमाना नित्यनैमित्तिकक्रमैः। क्वचिदध्यापयामासुर्वेदान् विप्रार्पकान्बुधाः ॥ १५ ॥

In some places seers invoke Agni according to their routine and special rituals. Elsewhere learned seers are engaged in teaching Vedas to the brahmin children. 15

क्वचित्सभायां शास्त्रेषु मीमांसन्ते परस्परम्। क्वचित्प्रवचनं चक्रुः पुराणानां कथाविदः ॥ १६ ॥

In some places seers mutually discuss the Vedas and other sacred texts. Elsewhere seers knowing the tales from the Purāṇas, discourse on them. 16 in the central portion of the hut made of leaves and grass is seated comfortably on a deer skin the son of Jamadagni, Śrī Paraśurāma. He is fair like camphor, wearing immaculate clothes and sacred thread, besmeared with Vibhūti (sacred ash) and always with triple lines of Vibhūti on his forehead, peaceful due to performance of religious rites, attractive, an incarnation of Viṣṇu, a joy for everyone; a devotee of Śiva. He has attained Self-knowledge by worshipping Dattātreyā, an incarnation of Viṣṇu. 18 to 21

पप्रच्छ प्राञ्जलिर्भूत्वा भक्तिश्रद्धासमन्वितः । राम दीनदयासिन्धो भक्तानुग्रहविग्रह ॥ २३ ॥

Once, when he was pleasantly disposed, his dear disciple by name Sumedha who was soaked in devotion and intent always on serving him asked the seer with folded hands:

“Oh! Paraśurāma! Ocean of compassion for the helpless! Protector of the devotees! 22, 23

पुरैकदा मया पृष्ठो भवान् भूरिविभावनः । किं दीनमानुषादीनां संसारक्लेशभागिनाम् ॥ २४ ॥

एतन्मे ब्रूहि विप्रेन्द्र श्रोतव्यं यदि मे भवेत् । अपि गोप्यं वदन्तीह गुरवो दीनवत्सलाः ॥ २६ ॥

Once, I had asked you, interested in the well-being of devotees who are afflicted and suffering in life, about what is the best remedy which is supreme that brings good merits and well-being. It is said that the compassionate Gurus reveal even the most secret knowledge.

Oh! Excellent Brahmin! Teach that to me if I deserve to receive it, 24 to 26

एवं मयाऽपि संपृष्ठो भवानीषत्स्मिताननः । वदामि कालक्रमतः प्रोक्तवानिति भार्गव ॥ २७ ॥

Asked by me thus, O Bhārgava! You said with a smile, ‘I will let you know in course of time’. 27

तस्याद्य षोडशसमा व्यतीयुस्तुटिलेशवत् । स एवार्थो मम स्वान्ते परिवर्तत्यहर्निशम् ॥ २८ ॥
वद मे तत्सुकृपया मय्यनन्यशरण्यके ।

“Sixteen years have passed like a fraction of a second after you said that to me. The same thoughts revolve in my heart day and night. Kindly tell that to me who has no other refuge.” 28

इति तद्वचनं श्रुत्वा भार्गवः परिचिन्तयन् ॥ २९ ॥

सस्मार तत्पुरा प्रोक्तं दत्तात्रेयेण विष्णुना । त्रिपुराया रहस्यं यत्साक्षाच्छिवमुखाच्छ्रुतम् ॥ ३० ॥

Hearing his words Bhārgava in the process of thinking recollected the secret of Tripurā which was told to him by Dattātreya who had heard the same directly from Śiva. 29, 30

विशुद्धहृदि संन्यस्तं तत्कालेन शिवाज्ञया । मयि संक्राम्य सर्वस्वं भक्तिज्ञानोपबृंहितम् ॥ ३१ ॥

"Commanded by Śiva in the course of time, Dattātreya transferred to me that entire knowledge containing Bhakti and Jñāna (Tripurārahasyam) which was embedded in his pure heart. 31

नास्तिकाय शठायपि नाम्ना भागैकलेशतः । भक्तानामपि चान्येषां वक्तव्यं न पुरस्त्वया ॥

This glorious text which is replete with divine lore, glory, devotion, ardour and which is supreme Tantra should not be given even partially to a stranger, an atheist or a cheat. Nor even should this be uttered in the presence of persons devoted to other deities. 32, 33

कारणात् परमेशस्य वाक्यार्थस्यापि गौरवात् । एकस्तव महाभक्तः सुमेधा हरितायनः ॥ ३४ ॥

संहितां पावनीं धन्यां तन्त्रसारसमन्वयाम् । ग्रन्थरूपां विधायाथ शिष्यान्ध्यापयिष्यति ॥ ३६ ॥

Since it deals with the secrets of Parameśvara, revealed by Him directly, you shall eventually give this knowledge to Sumedha-Hāritāyana, your devoted disciple who after listening to that will compile a text which will be a purifying blessed compendium of Tantra and preach it to other disciples." 34 to 36

इति स्मृत्वा गुरुवचः शिष्यं दृष्ट्वा कृताञ्जलिम् ।

Recollecting thus the words of his Guru, he saw the disciple who stood with folded palms. Having thought for long about the inviolable injunction of the Divine Power, he spoke to the disciple who was standing before him. "My boy, wait for the opportune time. Every thing happens in the course of time. 37, 38

श्वः पुष्ये शुभवेलायामुत्तरोपक्रमं भवेत्। एवं स्थिते समभवत्सन्ध्यामृदुकरो रविः ॥ ३९ ॥

Tomorrow at the auspicious time of Puṣya star you will get answers to your questions." As he was saying this, the mild-rayed Sun was setting. 39

Both of them performed the evening Sandhyā and recited the transcendent mantra (Gāyatrī). In the night meditating on their inherent power, they slept comfortably. 40

अथ प्रातः समुत्थाय कृताह्निकविधिं गुरुम्। दण्डवत्प्रणिपत्याथ बद्धाञ्जलिपुटो नतः ॥ ४१ ॥

Rising in the early morning Sumedha performed the ablutory rites and stood humbly with folded palms after prostrating to his guru. 41

तस्या वपुर्वाङ्मयं यत्तच्छिष्याय प्रदत्तवान्। साङ्गं पीठं समभ्यर्च्य नानाविभवहेतुभिः ॥ ४४ ॥

As the auspicious moment drew near, Śrī Paraśurāma with a sweet loving voice called Sumedha. Then he offered flowers to the Devī seated on an auspicious golden seat who is variously called as Bālā, Tripurā, Lalitā and Kumārī and gave to his disciple the Vāgrūpa Mantra which personifies Her. Then he worshipped the seat and Her paraphernalia with various worshipping articles. 42 to 44

मूर्धहन्मूलदेशेषु प्रसादविनियोजनम्। स्वात्माग्नावाहुतिं तत्त्वत्रयाणां क्रमशोऽब्रवीत् ॥ ४८ ॥

Then Paraśurāma bathed his disciple with the sanctified water from a pot. He cut off three types of bonds and made him sleep near the Devī. Then he made him comprehend the secrets of Devī worship based on three fundamentals with its ramifications of 12, 4 and 16 methods in the beginning, middle and end respectively. He taught the sacred methods of worship, the discipline, the symbols (mudra) of the triple Devī. He also taught him systematically the procedure of imbibing the grace of Devī at his head, heart and anus and offering the three truths to the Self-fire.

इति प्रोच्य समादिश्य तत्साधनविधौ ततः। वत्सैतद्ब्रह्म परमं साधयस्वाविलम्बितम् ॥ ४९ ॥

Having thus spoken and initiated, Paraśurāma addressed him "My child, practice that Supreme Truth. Soon I will grant you a fulfilled status". Thus receiving the entire secret, Hārītāyana circumambulating Paraśurāma three times and saluting him soon went to Śrīśailam where Devī Bhrāmārī stays permanently.

तस्याः सम्मुखतः स्वच्छां वातातपसहां कुटीम्। निर्माय तत्र कालेन साधनं समुपाक्रमत् ॥ ५२ ॥

In front of Her, he made a clean cottage protected from sun and wind and there started the Śrīvidyā practice.

लघुगात्राशनो दृष्टः पुष्टाष्टावयवः शुभः।

During his practice, he ate only fruits and he was determined and devoted with physical and mental control. Always happy and meditative with faith in the teachings of his Guru, he spent one year and five months as if in a moment and attained mastery over the practice.

During the penance he had a pure body and mind, sweet-voice and radiant eyes; light weight due to frugal eating but with healthy eight limbs that looked auspicious.

अथ स्वप्ने तस्य रात्रौ बाला श्रीपरमेश्वरी ॥ ५६ ॥

Oh! Devī! Devotion to your lotus feet is like a bunch of Cintāmaṇis (wish yielding gems) that would grant fruits greater than one's desire. Hence, Oh! Sundarī! The highest transcendental auspiciousness! Please tell me what cannot be achieved by those who have totally submitted their body and mind at Your lotus feet? 64

जगन्मालाजालाङ्कुरगणसुखीजैकवपुषा परानन्दाकारा परमशिवजीवस्थितिकरी ॥ ६६ ॥

Before the creation You were alone in the form of Supreme Consciousness filled with immense, infinite power. Transcendentally Blissful, You were bearing the seed of the garland of group of worlds and were giving auspicious individual identity to beings. 66

ततः संविद्रूपा तव सकलमेतद्विलसितं विभातं सद्रूपं तदितरवपुश्चापि सहसा ।

Oh! Pure Consciousness! Later Your shining existence was revealed and suddenly other beings, moving and non-moving, appeared. They are related to you like the waves related to the sea, like pots to the earth, and jewels to gold. 67

Therefore there is nothing in this universe that is separate from You. Being the soul of all beings You shine with Your great spatial form. Though of such form Your sport of assuming a form with hands and legs is due to Your compassion towards Your devotees. 68

Salutations to You whose feet are like Agastya unto the ocean of delusion; Salutations to you whose compassion is like Vajrāyudha (Thunder-bolt) unto a mountain of misery; Salutations to You, skillful in granting more than the desires of the devotees; Salutations to You, Oh! Bālāmbikā, the repository of the riches of Śiva the foe of Tripuras." 70

Thus praising the Great Devī with his heart full of love, he prostrated at Her feet. With tears of joy filled in his eyes, horripilated and heart filled with devotion he was unable to aspire anything from Her. 71, 72

When he was thus immersed in the ocean of love (devotion) and unable to see, speak and do any thing, Devī Tripurā with a beautiful smile on Her face and a dignified voice showering ambrosia addressed him as "My child" and placed her lotus hand on his head. 73, 74

Sumedha who was, due to the vision of Devī, already immersed in the ocean of joy got transformed into Absolute Bliss by the touch of Her hand. 75

Then the Universal Mother told Sumedha, "Get up quickly and soon go to your Guru, as you have attained perfection." 76

Saying so, She disappeared instantly like the thoughts of a person. Sumedha woke up at that time and thought about his dream as to what it was. 77

With a perturbed mind thinking repeatedly about the beautiful Devī and Her ambrosial words in his dream, he went to the river to bathe and thought he had spent millions of years to reach there. Thinking about the dream he forgot his morning rites and wondered about what he had seen within himself. He could not understand whether it was true or false, nor could he know the reason for it. 78 to 80

“Even then I shall not go. Let Devī pardon me.” Deciding thus, as Sumedha was engaged in his daily duties an incorporeal voice sweetly addressed him thus.

“Oh! Child! Shed your doubt in the words of Devī. It is not false but truth alone”. 83, 84

इति श्रुत्वाऽथ वचनमाकाशे निर्जनालये। प्रसन्नचित्तः साष्टाङ्गं ननाम भुवि सादरः ॥ ८५ ॥

Hearing that Śrī Bhārgava Rāma told his disciple with wonder, "My child! Blessed you are to see the Transcendental Tripurādevī in your dream. There is no one who is more blessed than you who have been blessed by the Transcendental Devī. Your dream was seen by me too." 87, 88

"Now you will attain everything by your yogic vision". Saying so, Paraśurāma the king among the yogis initiated at length the Śrīvidyā in accordance with the prescribed procedures, along with its main and accompanying details. Then to him who had received Śrīvidyā, Paraśurāma taught the most sacred, auspicious legend 'Tripurārahasyam' which is the essence of Tantra which he had heard from Śrī Dattātreya and which was told by Lord Śiva Himself. 89 to 91

"You should not tell Tripurārahasyam to atheists and non-devotees. After duly worshipping Tripurādevī and obtaining her grace, you compose the Tripurārahasyam text and teach it to deserving disciples. This is the command by my guru and it is no different from Truth." Saying so, Paraśurāma blessed his disciple who was saluting him. 93, 94

Meditating on Śrī Lalitā Devī, Sumedha spent five years. Once while meditating he saw within himself an auspicious person in camphor hue, matted hair, besmeared with ash and playing vīṇā. Wondering, he opened his eyes and saw Nārada before him. He stood up and offered a seat, duly prostrated and with humility and happiness spoke sweetly. 100 to 103

हारितायन वत्सैतत्त्वया प्रोक्तं महाऽद्भुतम्। अन्तः समीक्षित इति विदुषेवाऽतिबालवत् ॥ १ ॥

“Dear Hārītāyana, you have told me about your wonderful vision like an erudite person and not like a young boy. 1

During my roaming around the series of worlds I was variously questioned by the wise, dullards, women, low-born, helpless ones, but none questioned me like you. Explain to me clearly your question. You are learned as indicated by your name Sumedha. 2, 3

अन्तः समीक्षित इति यत्त्वयोक्तं वचः शुभम्।

किमन्तस्तत्र किं बाह्यं कस्मात् कस्य किमात्मकम् ॥ ४ ॥

Explain to me your good words that you saw me within you. What is within and what is without. With reference to what? What is its nature? 4

अन्तः शरीर इति तु नात्र वक्तुं क्षमं भवेत्। दृष्टोऽहं देशसंस्थानो महाकाशेन संवृतः ॥ ५ ॥

Here it is not apt to say as within your body. Standing on the earth you have seen me surrounded by great space. 5

Because the senses are a part of the body they are inert. Then, tell me how they can see external things? 10

सर्वं बहिर्गतं तत्र संस्थितं नेक्षितं कुतः। दृष्टश्चेदिन्द्रियेणाहं किं जातं तव तद्वद ॥ ११ ॥

Then, there or at that time, why were entire external things not seen? Assuming that the senses saw me, tell me of what avail was that to you? What happened to you? 11

आगतोऽहमब्जयोनेः सदनात्त्वां समीक्षितुम्। तत्राभूत्तव या वार्ता तां वदामि सखे शृणु ॥ १२ ॥

I came from Brahmāloka to see you. I will tell you what conversations were there about you. 12

In the assembly of Brahmā, the great sage Mārkaṇḍeya bowing humbly questioned him while others seated there were listening.

“Oh! Respectable Lord of the Universe, you are omniscient. Being the creator there is nothing not known to you. By your grace alone I attained long life. 13 to 15

साक्षाच्छिवाराधनतो जितं मृत्युपदं मया। सर्वशाल्माणि दृष्टानि सेतिहासागमानि च ॥ १६ ॥

“By worshipping Lord Śiva I conquered death. I read all scriptural injunctions along with legends and vedas; all ancient sacred books and the entire literature. If I am eligible to listen, tell me their essence. 16, 17

“I have a great doubt regarding this. You tell me about that essence. Regarding this I asked the Gods, sages and acclaimed yogis. But they told me according to their devotion and faith (in the matter). Since they are not omniscient, they told me what pleases them. Oh Lord! You are the creator, omniscient, the self of all, the knower of all and ocean of mercy. Tell me about what I have asked you.” 18 to 20

मार्कण्डेयवचः श्रुत्वा ब्रह्मा लोकपितामहः। क्षणं ध्यात्वा सुमनसा ननाम भुवि दण्डवत् ॥ २१ ॥

Hearing the words of Mārkaṇḍeya, Brahmā the creator meditated for a while with a pure mind and prostrated on the ground. 21

Happy having remembered the greatness of Parāśakti, Brahmā was horripilated and filled with tears of joy. He offered obeisance with folded hands to Tripurāmbikā the Universal cause and addressing the great sage started his narration. 22, 23

Oh! Hāritāyana (Sumedha)! Tell me what you know as an answer to my question. Listening to the words of Nārada and thinking thoroughly Hāritāyana could not get any answer. With shyness he told the sage Nārada thus. “Oh! Maharṣi! I do not know any answer to tell you.”

40, 41

You please tell me all that is auspicious. Just as you told me, my Guru Śrī Paraśurāma urged "Oh child, compose the Tripurārahasyam text". Then with concentration I heard every thing from him. Due to dullness of my mind I forgot the teaching. Oh! All powerful! Show mercy on me". Saying so, he fell prostrate at his feet and begged. 42 to 44

“This Sumedha will be the first to narrate and you Nārada will be the first to listen.” Saying so Brahmā disappeared duly worshipped by Nārada and Sumedha. Even Nārada worshipped by Sumedha, travelled in the direction of his liking playing his vīṇā. 86, 87

Remembering the task of writing the text, that Brāhmaṇa Hāritāyana started it with “Om Kāraṇānanda” and in an orderly manner ended it with “Sā Bhavet Tripuraiva Hrīm”. The work betwixt the Śiva and Śakti Praṇava is of the Śivaśakti Praṇava form. 90, 91

एवं विद्यस्तेन कृतो ब्रह्मणोक्तं यथा पुरा ।

Hāritāyana thus composed Tripurārahasyam text as told by Brahmā before.

इति श्रीत्रिपुरारहस्ये माहात्म्यखण्डे द्वितीयोऽध्यायः ॥

Māhātmyakhaṇḍam of Śrī Tripurārahasyam.

तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Chapter 3

आदिनाथो महेशानः सर्वकारणकारणम्। सर्वकर्ता विजयते सर्वात्मकतया स्थितः ॥ १ ॥

The primordial Lord Maheśa who is the cause of all causes, who is the creator of everything, who stays as the soul of everything is victorious. 1

श्रीविष्णोरंशयोगीशो दत्तात्रेयो महामुनिः। गूढचर्या चरन्लोके भक्तवत्सल एषते ॥ २ ॥

Dattātreya the great sage, who is an incarnation of Śrī Viṣṇu, who is fond of His devotees, who travels secretly in this world is prosperous. 2

जमदग्न्यरणेर्जातः क्षत्रेभ्यमहानलः। रामोऽभ्युदेति भक्तान्तरज्ञानध्वान्तनाशकः ॥ ३ ॥

Born from the fire generating wood named Jamadagni, Paraśurāma the great fire unto the wood named Kṣatriya and who is the dispeller of the dark inner ignorance of his devotees is prosperous. 3

एवं ध्यात्वा गुरुन् स्वर्णपद्मिनीरोधसि स्थितः। पितामहोक्तविधिना षट्त्रिंशद्विषैः कृतम् ॥ ४ ॥
इतिहासं भागवतं तन्त्रसारमखण्डितम्। वैराग्यभक्तिमाहात्म्यक्रियाज्ञानसमन्वितम् ॥ ५ ॥

Thus praying the Gurus, Sumedha seated on the banks of the pond with golden lotuses wrote in 36 days the Tripurārahasyam containing the essence of the Tantra of Bhagavatī which is everlasting with aspects of detachment and devotion in three portions viz., mātmya, kriyā and jñāna. 4, 5

नानाख्यानकथाचित्रं त्रिपुराया रहस्यकम्। पठतां पापशमनं शृण्वतां क्लेशनाशनम् ॥ ६ ॥
विचारितं स्वात्मलाभजननं मोक्षसाधनम्। पूजितं त्रिपुराभक्तिकरं दृष्टं शुभोदयम् ॥ ७ ॥

This Tripurārahasyam, containing many wonderful stories, alleviates the sins of its reader, destroys the distress of its listener, creates Self-knowledge in its inquirer, grants liberation, imbibes devotion to Tripurā in its worshipper, brings forth auspiciousness on the onlooker. 6, 7

विद्याप्रदं सुलिखितं सेवितं वाञ्छितार्थदम्। यत्र श्रीत्रिपुरादेव्याः कथाविभवकीर्तनम् ॥ ८ ॥

ज्ञानवैराग्यभक्त्याद्यं नारदाष्टैः श्रुतं च यत् । तत्र किं दुर्लभतरं चिन्तामणिरिव स्थितम् ॥ ९ ॥

It grants erudition when well-written, grants desires when worshipped. Where the story and glory of Śrī Devī Tripurā which is abundant with Knowledge, Detachment and Devotion, which is listened to by Nārada and others, is sung, what is not achievable? It is like a wish-yielding gem Cintāmaṇi. 8, 9

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे तत्र प्राप्तो देवर्षिसन्तपः । वल्लकीं वादयन् रम्यामानन्दाप्लुतमानसः ॥ १० ॥

At that juncture the greatest among Divine seers Nārada reached there playing on his attractive Vallakī (vīṇā) with his mind soaked in bliss. 10

सुमेधा अपि तं दृष्ट्वा सहस्रोत्थाय सुस्मितः । संपूज्यासनपादाष्टैः कृताङ्गुलिरिभाषत ॥ ११ ॥

Even Sumedha seeing Nārada, quickly stood up with a smile and spoke with folded hands after worshipping him with water, seat and so on. 11

देवर्षे त्वत्प्रसादेन जातं सम्यग्यथार्थतः । प्रगुणाञ्जनयोगेन प्रज्ञाचक्षुरिवाखिलम् ॥ १२ ॥

Oh! Divine Seer! By your grace everything was known meaningfully just as an intuitive eye smeared by a special collyrium. 12

पितामहोक्तं संपन्नं रचितं तद्रहस्यकम् । आज्ञापयाग्रे शिष्यं यां प्रवतः किं करोम्यहम् ॥ १३ ॥

As told by Brahmā, the Tripurārahasyam has been written. Tell me, your disciple, what service should I render to you next? 13

अद्य सर्वाणि शास्त्राणि छन्दासि विविधानि च ।

सर्वे लोका दिशः कालाः सेन्द्रियाश्च निरिन्द्रियाः ॥ १४ ॥

ज्ञाताः करस्थितस्वच्छवैकान्तमणिखण्डवत् । नमस्ते ब्रह्मपुत्राय नारदाय महात्मने ॥ १५ ॥

यत्कृपायोगतः सम्यक् ज्ञातं सर्वं परापरम् । इत्युक्त्वा पदयोस्तस्य दण्डवन्निपपात इ ॥ १६ ॥

Now the entire scriptures, varieties of prosody, all worlds, all directions, all times, those with senses and without senses are known to me like a piece of pure Vaikrānta Gem (a gem slightly inferior to diamond) in my palm. Salutations to you Oh! great Nārada! the son of Brahmā. By your grace I understood very well the knowledge of the immanent and the transcendent. Saying so Sumedha fell at the feet of Nārada. 14 to 16

नारदोऽथ तमुत्थाप्य वक्षसाऽपीड्य तं मुनिम्। आसने संनिवेश्याऽथो मधुरं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥

Then Nārada lifted that sage and embraced him. After seating him, spoke sweet words. 17

हारितायन धन्योऽसि त्वत्समो नैव विद्यते। यस्यैवं त्रिपुरापादभक्त्या संपत्तिरुद्भूता ॥ १८ ॥

“Oh! Hārītāyana! You are blessed. There is no one equal to you, who has acquired such wealth due to devotion to the feet of Tripurā. 18

यत्त्वया त्रिपुरादेव्या रहस्यं रचितं शुभम्। तच्छुश्रूषुरहं प्राप्तस्त्वच्छ्रयं ब्रह्मवाक्यतः ॥ १९ ॥

“As advised by Brahmā, I have come with a desire to listen to the auspicious Tripurārahasyam from you, which has been composed by you. 19

श्रद्धावतो ममाग्रे तत्सर्वं वद सुविस्तृतम्। इति तद्वाक्यमाकर्ण्य प्राञ्जलिर्हृष्टमानसः ॥ २० ॥

आनन्दाश्रुकलापूर्णविकसन्नेत्रपङ्कजः। त्रिपुरास्मृतिसञ्जातरोमाञ्चद्विगुणाङ्गकः ॥ २१ ॥

अवदन्नारदं वाक्यं मधुनिष्यन्दसुन्दरम्।

“Tell all that in great detail to me in person who has faith.” Listening to his words, Hārītāyana with his fully blown lotus-like eyes filled with tears of joy, with a happy mind, with swollen body from the horripilation induced by the remembrance of Tripurā, folded his palms and with beautiful words dripping honey, addressed Nārada. 20, 21

उपपन्नं तवैवेदं ब्रह्मपुत्र महामुने ॥ २२ ॥

यच्छिष्यभूतात्मतत्त्वं शुश्रूषस्यखिलं विदन्। नैसर्गिकस्वभावोऽयं सतां सुमहतां भवेत् ॥ २३ ॥

Oh! Great sage! Oh! Son of Brahmā! By your grace alone this text has been composed. Knowing everything you wish to listen to it from me, your disciple. It is the natural tendency of great good beings. 22, 23

अमत्सरा अवरतोऽप्यल्पं शृण्वन्ति सज्जनाः। नैतच्चित्रं परादेव्याश्चारित्र्यममृतोपमम् ॥ २४ ॥

It is no wonder that good men who know everything listen to without envy, the ambrosial story of the Transcendental Devī, even though a short one. 24

न तु द्राक्षाफले भेदो लोष्टस्थे मणिपात्रगे। समं स्वभावमधुरं न पात्राद्भिद्यते रसः ॥ २५ ॥

Grape fruit will be the same whether placed in an earthen pot or a gem-studded jar. The natural sweet taste of it will never change with the container. 25

तवाज्ञां शिरसा धृत्वा विधात्राज्ञामनुस्मरन्। वदाम्यतिविचित्रं तद्ब्रह्मस्य परमाप्तम् ॥ २६ ॥
आवयोः संवादरूपं समाहितमतिः शृणु।

Placing your order on my head and remembering the instructions of Brahmā, I will tell you the most wonderful extremely ambrosial Tripurārahasyam, in the form of a dialogue between you and me. Listen to it with concentration. 26

आसीद्ब्रह्मसुतः श्रीमान् भृगुर्मुनिगणोडितः ॥ २७ ॥

There was the son of Brahmā the glorious sage Bhṛgu praised by a host of sages. 27

तत्पुत्रः च्यवनः साक्षाद्ब्रह्मणा सदृशो भुवि। सुकन्या यस्य चारित्र्यात्पित्रा दत्ता महात्मने ॥
येन सोमग्रहो दत्तो जित्वाऽश्विभ्यां शतक्रतुम्। ऋचीकस्तस्य तनयो महात्मा च्यवनोपमः ॥ २९

His son was Cyavana who was verily like Brahmā on earth. Sukanyā was given in wedding by her father to this great person owing to his conduct. Cyavana conquered Indra and gave the scarificial soma offerings to the Aśvini gods. He begot a son named Ṛcika who was great and equal to Cyavana. 28, 29

तस्मै दत्ता स्वतनया गाधिना पुत्रमिच्छता। सेवया तोषितः सोऽपि वरं पत्न्यै प्रदत्तवान् ॥ ३० ॥

Gādhī, with a desire of having a son gave his daughter to Ṛcika. Pleased by her service Ṛcika gave a boon to his wife. 30

सा वव्रे भ्रातरं पुत्रं क्षत्रं ब्रह्मकुलोत्तरम्।

She desired a warrior brother as well as a Brahmin son. 31

अथ सर्वं क्षत्रवीर्यं ब्रह्मवीर्यं स वीर्यवान् ॥ ३१ ॥

आक्षिप्य निर्ममे तत्र पायसद्वयमुत्तमम्। तत्पुंसवनयुग्मं स हुत्वाऽग्नेः सम्भृतं तदा ॥ ३२ ॥

Then the valorous Ṛcika prepared two puddings by his heroic and brahminical strength and offered them along with oblations to fire-god at the time of puṁsavana—the time of bearing a male baby. 31, 32

एकं पत्न्यै परं तस्या मात्रे दत्तं महात्मना ।

That great person gave one to his wife and another to her mother.

अथ गाधिमहाराज्ञो महिषी विपरीततः

॥ ३३ ॥

कन्याया अधिकं मत्वा बुभुजे लक्षिता तया । कन्यया वञ्चयित्वा तां तज्ज्ञात्वा मुनिरब्रवीत् ॥

Then the wife of the king Gādhī, by a wrong understanding that the pudding of her daughter was superior, ate it secretly by deceiving her. Knowing this the sage spoke thus: 33, 34

किं कृतं हे वरारोहे हतं कार्यं तवाधुना । वञ्चिताऽसि जनन्या त्वं चरुव्यत्ययहेतुतः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Oh! Auspicious lady! What did you do? You have spoiled the plan. You have been cheated by your mother because of exchanging the pudding. 35

भविता तनयो भद्रे कालान्तकसमो नृपः । भ्राता साक्षाद्ब्रह्ममयो दैवमत्र परायणम् ॥ ३६ ॥

Oh! Auspicious lady! You will beget a kingly son equal to the destroyer of death. Your brother will be really of the nature of Brahmā. God only should save the situation.” 36

तच्छ्रुत्वा घोरसङ्काशं वचनं साऽन्वतप्यत । प्रार्थयामास भर्तारं नत्वा साध्वी पुनः पुनः ॥ ३७ ॥

Hearing those terrible words, that noble lady with sorrow repeatedly prayed to her husband duly bowing before him. 37

Oh! Brahman! Excuse my mistake and be kind to me. I am the wife of a peace loving brahmin. 38

न भूयादीदृशः पुत्रः प्रसादं कुरु सर्वथा । तच्छ्रुत्वाऽहं महाभागः श्रूयतां मद्बचः शिवे ॥ ३९ ॥

Let not such a son be born. Be graceful to me. Hearing her the great one told her “Oh good lady! Listen to me. 39

पायसं मन्त्रसंभूतममोघं तत्कथं भवेत्। न तद्व्यर्थं भवेदद्य किं तु मद्भुवनं शृणु ॥ ४० ॥

शान्तस्तव सुतो भूयात्तत्सुतस्तादृशो भवेत्। सर्वक्षत्रान्तकृत्साक्षाद्विष्णोरंशो महाबलः ॥ ४१ ॥

ब्राह्मणो भविता सोऽपि क्षत्रवीर्येण सम्भूतः। इति श्रुत्वा भृगुवचोऽप्रसन्ना साऽभवत्तदा ॥ ४२ ॥

“That infallible pudding prepared with the power of Mantra cannot go waste. Now listen to my words. Your son will be a peaceful person. His valiant son will be born of the aspect of Viṣṇu and will destroy the entire warrior clan. Even though born as a brahmin, he will possess heroic might.” Listening to the words of Bhṛgu, she was perturbed. 40 to 42

अथ कालेन सुषुवे जमदर्गिन् सुतं सती। सः ब्राह्मणः सुशान्तात्मा ब्रह्मभूतः शुचिव्रतः ॥ ४३ ॥

After some time the devoted lady delivered a son named Jamadagni. This brahmin boy was peaceful, possessed vedic knowledge and was of pure conduct. 43

तस्य कालेन सञ्जातो रेणुकायां शुभेक्षणः। क्षत्रनीहारमिहिरो महाबलपराक्रमः ॥ ४४ ॥

Later from him through Renukā was born the mighty auspicious-eyed Paraśurāma who was like a Sun unto the mist of Kṣatriyas. 44

स कदाचित् पितृवधक्रोधात्सन्तोष्य शङ्करम्। प्राप्तवान्परशुं तस्मादमोघं चापमेव च ॥ ४५ ॥

Once being angry about the killing of his father, he propitiated Lord Śaṅkara and obtained from him the invincible axe and bow. 45

त्रिः सप्तकृत्वः पृथिवीं निःक्षत्रां करवाण्यहम्। इति तत्र प्रतिज्ञाय पितृघातसुमन्युना ॥ ४६ ॥

Going round the earth 21 times with the anger of the killing of his father he vowed to eradicate the warrior clan. 46

निःक्षत्रां पृथिवीं कृत्वा कश्यपायाऽखिलां भुवम् ॥ ४७ ॥

दत्त्वा प्रत्यक्समुद्रात्तु भूमिं जित्वा महोजसा। सम्प्रार्थितो ऋषिवरैर्विरतः क्षत्रघातनात् ॥ ४८ ॥

Taking the divine axe, the destroyer of the warrior clan made the earth empty of the warriors and handed over the entire earth to Kaśyapa. Then he conquered the land near the western sea with his power and retired from the killing of warriors at the request of the sages. 47, 48

तप आतिष्ठदुग्रं सः प्रकृत्या चण्डकोपनः । क्रोधं शान्त्यनले हुत्वा तपसैवातिभूयसा ॥ ४९ ॥

जिताः समस्तपुण्यानां लोकाः तेन महात्मना ।

Fiercely angry by nature, he took to severe penance and offered his anger as oblation to the fire of serenity. Thus, all valuable worlds were conquered by this great person. 49

अथ कालेन महता रामः सत्यपराक्रमः ॥ ५० ॥

रावणस्य वधार्थाय स्वांशेनाऽवततार ह । तेन मैथिलभूपालगृहविन्यस्तशाङ्करम् ॥ ५१ ॥

धनुः समारोप्य तदा वीर्यशुल्कामुपावहत् । आरोप्यमाणं तद्गगनं धनुः शैवं महोत्खणम् ॥ ५२ ॥

After quite a long time, the truthful, valiant Paraśurāma incarnated with his greatness as Śrī Rāma, to kill Rāvaṇa. Śrī Rāma twanged the bow of Śaṅkara that was placed in the court of the king of Mithilā and wedded Sītā. During tying, the fierce bow of Śaṅkara broke. 50 to 52

तत्कर्षं सर्वलोकानां श्लाघ्यमासीत् महान्नुतम् । एतच्छ्रुत्वा जामदग्न्यो वैमानिकमुखात्तदा ॥ ५३ ॥

असहन् क्षत्रियाणां तच्छ्लाघनां भार्गवस्तदा । गाढानलसुसम्पर्कजातोत्सेकपयो यथा ॥ ५४ ॥

That wonderful act of Śrī Rāma was universally appreciated. Paraśurāma heard that from divine beings travelling in the sky. Hearing that unbearable repute of the warriors (Kṣatriyas) Paraśurāma the embodiment of anger, 53, 54

क्रोधारुणितनेत्रान्तरागाग्निज्वालाया जगत् । दहन्निव क्रोधमूर्तिः प्रलयाग्निरिव ज्वलन् ॥ ५५ ॥

आक्षत्रबन्धोरद्याहमपनेष्यामि वै मदम् । आरोप्य परशुं स्कन्धे वामेनादाय वैष्णवम् ॥ ५६ ॥

चापं वदन्निति ततः प्रचक्षाल निजालयात् ।

like boiling water from excessive heat, with anger in his reddened eyes burning like the fire of dissolution, looked as if burning the universe. "Let it be so, I will today subdue the pride of the warrior community"—saying so, he moved out of his abode with the axe on the right shoulder and the Vaiṣṇava bow on his left. 55, 56

देवर्षयोऽथ तं दृष्ट्वा भार्गवं मन्युना वृतम् ॥ ५७ ॥

ऊचुरद्य पुनः क्षोणीं क्षत्रहीनां करिष्यति ।

Seeing Paraśurāma wrapped in anger, the gods and sages said "Once again he will empty the earth of Kṣatriyas." 57

क्रोधेन तस्य महता चकम्पे वसुधा भूशम् ॥ ५८ ॥
 हतप्रभो दिवानाथो धूलीधूसरितं नभः । वेलातिलिङ्घिनो जाताः समुद्राः प्रलये यथा ॥ ५९ ॥

By his immense anger, the earth trembled severely, the Sun got dim, the sky was filled with dust, the seas broke the shores as if it was the time for final destruction. 58, 59

एवं स निर्गतः स्थानान्तर्गे सेनासमावृतम् । राघवं रामभासाद्य कृतवैवाहिकोत्सवम् ॥ ६० ॥

Setting out thus from his abode, he met on the way Raghukula Rāma who was returning along with his army after getting married. 60

“Oh! Rāma of Kṣātra clan! Imbued with valour you are stupid. You have done a prohibited act thinking that you are powerful. Did you not know till today that I am Yama unto the race of warriors? Without knowing the existence of Paraśurāma, you have committed an error from arrogance. Even now the edge of my axe that kills warriors is not blunt. You will suffer punishment for your act today.” 61 to 63

अद्य मे परशोर्धारा पारणं प्रविधास्यति । बहुकालेन ते कण्ठच्छेदोष्णरुधिरेण वै ॥ ६४ ॥

“After a long time my axe will indeed be satiated today with the warm blood of your severed head. 64

“The wicked should not be pardoned. Similarly, a disease ignored on its onset will eventually bring death like a snake fed with milk. 65

कथं सहेत शान्तोऽपि गुरोरपमर्तिं कृताम् । समर्थे मादृशस्तत्र पादाक्रान्त इवानलः ॥ ६६ ॥

“How can even a calm person bear the insult to the guru—the teacher—which is like a burn in the foot by fire. More so a mighty person like me. 66

यद्यि जीवति चापस्य गुरोः कैलासवासिनः । क्षत्रियापसदेनाभूद्दालेन परिभावनम् ॥ ६७ ॥

“Even when I am alive, the bow of my guru, the dweller on the Kailās mountain has been humiliated by a young inferior Kṣatriya. 67

पादयोः प्रणिपत्याथ सभाजनमकल्पयत् । सात्वपूर्वं क्षमस्वेति भूयो रामः कृताञ्जलिः ॥ ६९ ॥

Alas! The time has changed. Now patience will be of no avail.” As Paraśurāma was speaking thus, the lotus eyed Śrī Rāma prostrated before him and worshipped him. Śrī Rāma with folded palms calmly requested to be pardoned. 68, 69

ब्राह्मण्यो नम्रभावेन क्षमापनमथाकरोत् । यदा न क्षमते सोऽपि भूयोऽधिकक्षेपतत्परः ॥ ७० ॥

तदैव क्रोधताप्राक्षो वाक्यमेतदुवाच ह । राम त्वं ब्राह्मणोऽसीति युज्यते क्षान्तिरत्र मे ॥ ७१ ॥

He humbly requested to be excused. But when the brahmin did not excuse him and began abusing him even more, Śrī Rāma with eyes red with anger said thus “Oh! Paraśurāma! Since you are a brahmin, I should be calm. 70, 71

राघवाणां ब्राह्मणेषु शस्त्रधारा सुकुण्ठिता । अयं कण्ठः कुठारेण छिद्यतां मे यथासुखम् ॥ ७२ ॥

“The weapons of Raghus are blunt in respect of brahmins. May you sever my head with your axe if it pleases you. 72

सर्वथा ब्राह्मणा गावः पूज्या नो रघुजन्मनाम् ।

“Brahmins and cows are venerable to us who are born in Raghu dynasty.”

As Śrī Rāma was saying so, Paraśurāma blazed like the sacrificial fire sprinkled with water during oblations with ghee. Then he addressed Śrī Rāma, the scion of Raghukula thus, “Oh wicked one!

You are a shameless inferior Ksatriya. You are taking me to be an ordinary Brahmin. How come you are not aware that I am the death unto the clan of warriors?"

अथावदब्रुवुरो वेषि त्वां रेणुकासुतम् । नाहं नृपस्तथा भूतो ये हता ब्रह्मजन्तवः ॥ ७६ ॥
न चाहं रेणुकासुतस्यः स्थितोऽस्मि पुरतस्तव । ब्राह्मण्यं वा क्षत्रपादं सन्नयजाऽन्यतरद् द्रुतम् ॥

Then the excellent among Raghus said "I know you are the son of Reṇukā. I am not like the kings killed by you, a brahmin. And I am not standing before you like your mother. Discard either your brahminhood or your warriorship at once."

काकुत्स्थ एवं वदति रुषा विषिषिगिति ब्रुवन् । स्वकरे संस्थितं चापं वैष्णवं प्रददौ द्रुतम् ॥

As Śrī Rāma was speaking thus, Parasurāma, uttering words of despise with anger, quickly gave to Śrī Rāma the Vaiṣṇava bow which he was holding in his hand.

तस्मै प्रोवाच संकुद्धः कथ्यन् किं युथा तव । माहेक्षरं जीर्णघनुर्भग्नं दैवेन तत् त्वया ॥ ७९ ॥
इदं वैष्णवमारोप्य यत्समक्षं स्थिरीभव । ततो मया हनुयुद्धे विप्रदस्त्वं भविष्यसि ॥ ८० ॥

Again with great anger he addressed Rāma thus "Your boasting is futile. You broke the worn-out bow of Śiva by good fortune. Tie the string to this Vaiṣṇava bow and stand boldly in front of me. Then you will shed your arrogance in a combat with me"

79, 80

Hearing the words thus spoken, Śrī Rāma took the great Vaiṣṇava bow and sportively tied its string in half a minute. Then placing a sharp arrow from his quiver and drawing the string up to his ears, Rāghava demonstrated his valour to Parasurāma and spoke angrily

राम शीघ्रं वदामोघः बाणः क्व विनियत्यताम् । उपेक्षणीयस्त्वं यस्माद्ब्राह्मणो भार्गवोद्वजः ॥

"Oh Parasurāma! Tell me quickly where this unfailing arrow should fall. You have to be left out since you are a brahmin born to Bhārgava.

मत्वाऽतिमानुषं साक्षात्परमात्मानमव्ययम्। प्रणम्य दण्डवद्भूमौ स्तुत्वा प्रोवाच भार्गवः ॥ ८६ ॥

Hearing the words of Rāghava and seeing his wonderful valour, Bhārgava realising him to be actually the Superhuman Eternal Absolute Self, praising him fell prostrate and spoke. 85, 86

जानामि त्वां परात्मानं पुरुषं प्रकृतेः परम्। जगद्रक्षाविधानार्थं जातो नटनरोपमः ॥ ८७ ॥

आसादिता मया पुण्यलोका बहुतपोगणैः। तत्सर्वं शरलक्ष्यार्थं दत्त्वा जीवामि राघव ॥ ८८ ॥

I know you, as the Transcendent Self beyond the causal concept, who is born as a human being to enact the protection of the Universe. Oh Rāghava! I shall offer the entire array of my merits acquired through several performances of austerities as a target to your arrow and save myself. 87, 88

Then Rāma discharged the fierce arrow saying “Be it so”. Then he addressed Bhārgava the brahmin thus. “Oh Bhārgava Rāma! My salutations to you. Pardon me for my angry words. A Brahmin is always my Guru”. 89, 90

Listening to his words, Bhārgava filled with shame went back after offering circumambulatory obeisance to Śrī Rāma. 90

चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Chapter 4

अथ मार्गे जामदग्न्योऽत्यन्तनिर्वेदमाप्तवान्। परिभावित एवं स चिन्तयानो जगाम ह ॥ १ ॥

Enroute Paraśurāma was filled with extreme repentance. Humiliated he proceeded with following thoughts. 1

नूनं मया कश्यपाय दत्त्वा क्षोणीं प्रतिश्रुतम्। नाऽतः परं हेतिहस्तः क्रुध्यामि नृपजन्मसु ॥ २ ॥

“Giving the earth to Kaśyapa I indeed promised that henceforth I will not in anger wield the weapon on kings. 2

अहो मे चित्तसम्मोहः किं वदामीदृशोऽभवम्। क्रोधेनाऽत्यन्तरिपुणा पातितो मोहखातके ॥ ३ ॥

Lamentable is my mental delusion. What can I say about my change? By the mighty foe called anger I have fallen into an abyss of delusion. 3

क्रोध एव तपोमृत्युः क्रोधान्नश्यति वै तपः। क्रुद्धस्य दूरतो याति विचारः सत्त्वबुद्धिजः ॥ ४ ॥

Anger, really kills askesis. Askesis verily gets destroyed by Anger. Thoughts generated by the pious mind stay away from the angry man. 4

तस्य स्पर्शोऽपि न भवेद्विटं दृष्ट्वा सती यथा।

कथं क्रुद्धे विचारः स्याच्छ्वित्रे सौन्दर्यवत्किल

Just as a loyal wife stays away from a paramour, good thoughts do not even touch me. How can an angry person possess reflection, even so beauty with vitiligo? 5

क्रुद्धो न कुर्यात्किं कर्म गर्ह्यं घोरं पिशाचवत्। नान्तरं लेशतोऽप्यस्ति पिशाचक्रुद्धयोर्भुवि ॥

What will a terrible, reproachable act an angry person not do like a goblin? There is not the slightest difference between the angry person and the devil on this earth. 6

उभयोरीक्षितं पुत्रप्रियादिपरिपीडनम्। क्रुद्धो न हन्यात्कं को वा क्रुद्धो हन्ति गुरूनपि ॥ ७ ॥

In both—the angry one and the devil—is seen the torturing of children and loved ones. An angry person kills anyone. He kills even his preceptor, Guru. 7

क्रोध एव महान् शत्रुरीदृशेन कृतस्त्वहम्। क्रोधान्मया पुरा क्षत्रस्तनन्धयगणा हताः ॥ ८ ॥
आच्छिद्याच्छिद्य जननीहस्ताभ्यां पुक्कसो यथा। अहो मे निर्दयं स्वान्तं किं कृतं क्षत्रपोतकैः ॥

Anger alone is the great enemy by which I have reached this state. In the past, like a low-born brute, I killed many infants of Kṣatriyas by snatching them from their mother's hands. Pitiabale was my cruelty. What offence to me was done by the Kṣatriya infants? 8, 9

हिंसिताः कोटिशो बालाः सदृशा अदृशा अपि। नूनं क्रोधो येन नैव जितस्तस्य कथं तपः ॥
प्रवृद्धशत्रोर्नृपते राज्यसौख्यं यथा तथा। केन मे निहतस्तातः के हता नृपराशयः ॥ ११ ॥

Children, crores in number, visible or distant had been tortured by me. The askesis of a person who has not conquered anger is similar to the joy of a king whose enemy is growing in strength. My father was killed by only one. But I killed the entire lot of kings. 10, 11

पुरुषादेनेव मया कृतं कर्म सुगर्हितम्। अभिमानः क्रोधमूलो यस्माद्धेतुवशादहम् ॥ १२ ॥
निगीर्णः क्रोधसर्पेण प्रबलाजगरात्मना।

My action like a man-eating devil is highly reproachable. My arrogance is the root cause of my anger. Because of that, I am swallowed by the mighty python, the serpent of anger." 12

एवं चिन्तयता तेन मार्गे कश्चन पुरुषः ॥ १३ ॥
दृष्टस्तेजोराशिमयो ज्वलदग्निगिरिर्यथा। पुष्टमुन्दरसर्वाङ्गः फुल्लपङ्कजलोचनः ॥ १४ ॥
मलिनाङ्गो मुक्तकेशः उन्मत्तचरितोऽपि यः। महापुरुषवददृष्टो महात्मा मुनिराद् कविः ॥ १५ ॥

As he was thinking so Paraśurāma saw a great person, who was like a mass of effulgence, a burning mountain, who had a beautiful well-built body, fully blossomed lotus-like eyes. Though that persons' body was dirty, his hair dishevelled, his behaviour mad, he looked like a great soul, a king among sages, a learned person. 13 to 15

दृष्ट्वैवं भार्गवो विप्रं त्यक्तलिङ्गाश्रमादिकम्। दिगंबरं पङ्कदिग्धं गन्धसिन्धुरवत्स्थितम् ॥ १६ ॥

Paraśurāma saw that noble person who had taken to abstinence and abandoned religious life and its codes, who was standing naked, dirty, exuding ichor like an inebriated elephant. 16

तं दृष्ट्वा जामदग्न्योऽथ परं संशयमागतः। कोऽयं विलक्षणाचारः सदसल्लिङ्गसंयुतः ॥ १७ ॥

Seeing him, Paraśurāma became very doubtful. "Who is this person with conflicting behavior exhibiting good and bad signs? 17

किं महापुरुषो वाऽथाऽप्रमत्तो वाऽपि कश्चन। अत्र बुद्धिर्नान्तमेति यथा वेषान्तरे नटे ॥ १८ ॥

Is he a great person? Or is he a learned one? Or is he some one else? Regarding this the mind cannot conclude as regarding an actor differently dressed. 18

प्रमत्तश्चेत्कथमयं तेजोराशिपदं भवेत्। भूयः पश्याम्ययं मार्गं दूषयत्यपि नो सताम् ॥ १९ ॥

If he were to be insane, how could he possess effulgence? However, he looks very much like a person who does not disregard the path of righteousness. 19

तस्मादयं कोऽपि महापुरुषो गूहिताकृतिः। परीक्षणीयः किञ्चिन्मे यत्नेनेत्यभिचिन्तयन् ॥ २० ॥

Hence he should be some great person in disguise. He should be examined somehow." Thus thought Paraśurāma. 20

तमुवाच हसन् रामः कस्त्वं पुरुषसत्तम। महापुरुषवद्भासि स्थितिस्ते कीदृशी वद ॥ २१ ॥

With a smile, Paraśurāma asked him: "Oh exalted one! Who are you? You appear like a great person. What is this state of yours? Tell me all this." 21

इति तद्वाक्यमाकर्ण्य पलायनपरोऽभवत्। क्षिपन्पाषाणखण्डांश्च हसन्नुच्चैर्मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ २२ ॥

Hearing the words of Paraśurāma, that person started running away hurling pieces of stones and repeatedly laughing loudly. 22

विप्रलापं तथा कुर्वन् बहुधोन्मत्तचेष्टितः। एवं विषं भार्गवस्तं करे जग्राह सत्वरः ॥ २३ ॥

Talking madly, that person displayed great insanity. While he was behaving like this, Paraśurāma quickly caught hold of him. 23

गृहीत्वा चिन्तयामास नायं मे विदितोऽभवत् । भूय एवं परीक्ष्याऽथ व्रजाम्यहमपीप्सितम् ॥ १४

Holding him, Paraśurāma thought thus—“This person has not understood me. I will test him once more and then go my own way”. 24

इति निश्चित्य भूयस्तमधिकेष्टेण प्रचक्रमे । अधिक्षिप्तोऽपि बहुधा परिभूतोऽपि न स्थितेः ॥ २५ ॥

Deciding thus, Paraśurāma started abusing him very much. Even very much abused he was unaffected. 25

प्रच्युतो मुखवैवर्ण्यमपीषन्नोपलक्षितम् । महापुरुष एवेति तदा निश्चित्य भार्गवः ॥ २६ ॥

There was not even a slightest change in his countenance. Then Bhārgava concluded that he must be a great person. 26

तत्पादयोर्निपतितः प्रार्थयामास तं मुनिम् । अथ सोऽपि प्रसन्नात्मा जामदग्न्येऽनुकम्पयन् ॥ २७ ॥

Falling at the feet of that sage, Paraśurāma adored him. That sage was then happy and filled with compassion towards Bhārgava. 27

बभ्राषे सस्मितं वाक्यं बहुसन्दर्भगुम्फितम् । कस्त्वमित्यहमापृष्टस्त्वया तच्छृणु भार्गव ॥ २८ ॥

Then the sage, with a smile, spoke words full of many truths. “Oh Bhārgava! You asked me who I am? Listen to this. 28

त्वमित्यवगते प्रश्नः पिष्टपेषणवद्वृथा । त्वया नावगतश्चेत्वमिति वाक्स्थान्निरर्थिका ॥ २९ ॥

If you have understood the word “Tvam” (you), your question is useless like grinding the flour. If you have not understood the meaning of the word “Tvam”, then again that phrase is useless. 29

केनचिद्वपुषा ज्ञात इति चेत्तद्वदस्व मे । न ज्ञातस्ते चिदात्मा तदज्ञेयत्वात्तथाविधः ॥ ३० ॥

If you have understood that through somebody, then tell me that. You have not cognised the Conscious-Self because it is not cognisable. 30

अन्नं चेदं त्वया दृष्टं साक्षादेव न संशयः । यस्मात्पर्यनुयोगस्ते संज्ञायां सुव्यवस्थितः ॥ ३१ ॥

You have seen the physical body. There is no doubt in that. Because your inquiry is well based on appellation. 31

ज्ञातं करणमप्येवं तस्मात् संज्ञैव न त्वया । ज्ञाता सा न स्वतः सिद्धा कल्पिता बहुधापि सा ॥

Thus you know what is sensory through its designation. You have not known that which is not self revealing and severally imagined. 32

न संस्थिता साध्येकत्र सङ्घातस्याऽश्रयत्वतः । तस्मादहं त्वया राम सम्यक्पृष्टो वदामि ते ॥ ३३ ॥

It—the consciousness—is not confined to a single space because of its association with the body. Therefore, Oh Rāma! I will answer you if you ask your doubt clearly.” 33

एवं तद्वचनं श्रुत्वा स्तब्धवाग्बुद्धिपौरुषः । लज्जितः प्राह योगीशं नत्वा प्रार्थनपूर्वकः ॥ ३४ ॥

Hearing the words of the sage, Paraśurāma's speech, intellect and valour were stupefied. Then with shyness, he addressed the yogi with prayer and prostration. 34

महापुरुष न ज्ञातमुत्तरं तत्र तत्त्वया । ज्ञात्वाऽहं बोधनीयो वै शिष्यभूतमकल्मषम् ॥ ३५ ॥

“Oh! Great person! I do not know the answer to that. Indeed teach me by taking me as your disciple free from sin.” 35

इत्युक्तस्तेन रामेण सोऽनुकम्पितमानसः । वक्तुं स्ववृत्तभारेभे गिरा मधुरया तदा ॥ ३६ ॥

Thus told by Paraśurāma, the sage with compassion started to narrate sweetly his story. 36

भार्गवाऽऽङ्गिरसं त्वं मां जानीह्यवरजं गुरोः । संवर्त इति विख्यातं त्रिलोक्यां प्रथितं गुणैः ॥

“Oh Bhārgava! I belong to Āṅgīrasa lineage. I am the disciple of my brother. With great qualities, I am well-known in the three worlds as Samvarta. 37

स्थितिं वक्ष्यामि मे राम शृणु संयतमानसः । पुरा मे गुरुणा भ्रात्रा विद्वेषस्समजायत ॥ ३८ ॥

“I will tell you about me. Listen with attention. Sometime ago, I developed enmity to my brother who was my preceptor. 38

तेनाऽहं प्राप्त निर्वेदः प्राप्त एतां स्थितिं किल । दत्तात्रेयेण गुरुणा सुसम्यग्नुबोधितः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Thereby I became disgusted and attained this condition indeed. Later, I was suitably instructed by the Guru Dattātreya. 39

सञ्चराम्यचलस्थानः सूत्रपाञ्चालिका यथा।

“Understanding that everything is Self (consciousness) and all this is its sport, I am treading the path of fearlessness, free from flashes of doubts and bound firmly as a puppet to the string.” 40

इत्युपाकर्ण्य तद्वाक्यं प्राह प्राञ्जलिरास्थितः ॥ ४१ ॥

रामः प्राह मुनिं वाक्यं संप्रार्थनगिरा तदा। महापुरुष मां दीनं संसारभयपीडितम् ॥ ४२ ॥

अनुगृह्य शुभं मार्गमधिरोहय निर्भयम्।

Listening to his words, Paraśurāma with folded palms and prayerful voice addressed the sage thus: “Oh great soul! Bless me who is distressed by this worldly life by putting me on the fearless auspicious path.”

41 to 43

इत्युक्तः स पुनः प्राह दयार्द्रहृदयो मुनिः ॥ ४३ ॥

शृणु वत्स मया प्रोक्तं सारं सर्वार्थसंग्रहम्। यस्मिन्मार्गे त्वमासीनः स भीमो बह्वनर्थदः ॥ ४४ ॥

Being addressed thus, the merciful sage spoke again. “My child! Listen to my words, the essence of all knowledge. The path pursued by you presently is dreadful and highly harmful.” 43, 44

यथा कश्चित्त्वचिद्रच्छन्नभयं दैवमोहितः। मार्गं दस्युसमाकीर्णमाश्रितो याति निर्भयः ॥ ४५ ॥

अज्ञानादथ तन्मार्गे क्लिश्यन्निष्पन्नपदे। क्षेमप्राप्त्याशया याति तथा संसृतिवर्त्मनि ॥ ४६ ॥

“It is like some one deluded by fate fearlessly and ignorantly wandering aimlessly in an unknown path which is filled with enemies and suffers frequently, expecting comfort. Similar is the journey in the worldly life.” 45, 46

अथ केनाऽपि मार्गज्ञपुङ्गवेन प्रबोधितः। सुमार्गमाश्रितो याति दुर्मार्गस्थान्दहसन्त्यथा ॥ ४७ ॥

“Then, awakened by some great person he proceeds in the right path ridiculing those in the wrong path.” 47

तथाऽहं नाथ सम्प्रोक्तसुमार्गस्थोऽति निर्वृतः। हसन्नन्यान्कुर्मार्गस्थाश्चिरं गच्छामि सर्वतः ॥ ४८ ॥

“Similarly, initiated by my Guru, I am happily going all over on the right path ridiculing those on the wrong path.” 48

तत्र संसृतिमार्गस्तु विपरीतो विषूचिकः । तत्राऽतिक्लेशभाजोऽपि न जानन्ति विमोहिताः ॥ ४९

“The path of worldly life is contradictory and painful. Though suffering in life, the deluded do not realise this. 49

विश्रब्धाः क्लेशजालेषु सुखबुद्ध्याऽति पामराः ।

ये तेषां दुर्लभो मार्गो योऽस्मद्विद्यनिवेदितः

॥ ५० ॥

“Foolish persons are confined to the web of misery with a notional happiness. To them, the path that we sages travel is difficult to access. 50

तस्मात्स्वमार्गसंस्थानं ज्ञात्वा तत्र विरक्तधीः । गुरूपदिष्टमार्गेण स्वात्मशक्तिं महेश्वरीम् ॥ ५१ ॥

“Therefore, by understanding the nature of Self-knowledge, with detachment, worship Maheśvarī, the inner strength, as taught by the Guru. Then with a little of Her grace, attain oneness with the Self which is equanimous with everything. Knowing other than that Self to be a reflection/semblance of that Śakti, which is none other than yourself, through a universal Guru, you move around freely like me, without doubt, fear and disturbance. 51 to 54

स्वात्मानं सर्वभावस्थं स्वात्मस्थं सर्वभावकम् । पिण्डाहंभावमुन्मूल्य वेत्तुभावासनस्थितः ॥ ५५ ॥

“For a person who has the feeling as a knower, who has eradicated the feeling that he is the physical body, who experiences everything within him, who experiences himself in every thing, who always concentrates as a knower on what is to be known by keeping awake, there is no action to be done in the path of worldly life. Further more, to begin with, one should know the defects in the path of worldly life. By that he will quickly develop indifference to the world followed by righteous characteristics. 55 to 57

एतन्मयोक्तं संक्षेपात्सारं मर्त्यः सदाभ्यसन्। अचिरेणैव संयाति शुभं मार्गं परात्परम् ॥ ५८ ॥

“A human being, by constantly practising this quintessence that has been told by me will very soon attain the auspicious supreme path.” 58

एवमुक्तं तस्य वचो दुर्विभाव्यमतीन्द्रियम्। मत्वाऽथ भार्गवः प्राह भूयः कलुषितान्तरः ॥ ५९ ॥

Thinking that the words told by Samvarta are unimaginable and beyond sensory comprehension, Bhārgava with turbid mind said again to Samvarta. 59

महापुरुष यत्प्रोक्तं त्वया सारतरं वचः। तस्याऽतिगहनत्वाद् न सम्यग्विदितं मया ॥ ६० ॥

“Oh great one! I have not clearly understood your words containing the best essence of knowledge because of their great depth. 60

तथा मे वद सर्वज्ञ रक्ष मां शरणागतम्।

“My doubt is because of its brevity. Oh! Omniscient! Kindly tell me in detail, so that I can understand. Protect me who is seeking your succour.” 61

इति तद्वचनं श्रुत्वा संवर्तो ध्यानमास्थितः ॥ ६२ ॥

ज्ञात्वा तस्याखिलं भावी प्रोवाच मधुरं वचः। शृणु राम मयोक्तं त्वं नायं मार्गोऽतिगोचरः ॥

Listening to the words of Bhārgava, Samvarta meditated and came to know the future of Bhārgava, and spoke sweet words. “Oh Rāma! The path told by me is not shrouded. 62, 63

मलीमसधियां पुंसां न सुज्ञेयमिदं भवेत्। ऊर्ध्वमार्गस्थितेः सूक्ष्मभावात्कलुषितात्मनाम् ॥ ६४ ॥

नीतिसुज्ञेयमेतद् वक्तुं न सुलभं तथा। अतिलौकिकवृत्तित्वात् दुर्लभं चैतदुच्यते ॥ ६५ ॥

“Because of its subtle transcendental nature, this knowledge cannot be grasped by persons with polluted minds. Since this knowledge can be known only by practice, it is difficult to be told easily. Because of its non-worldly nature it is said to be difficult to acquire. 64, 65

त्रिपुराम्बापादसेवामन्तरा नैव लभ्यते। साऽपि श्रीगुरुनाथस्य कृपाद्वारैव नान्यथा ॥ ६६ ॥

“That knowledge cannot be got without serving the feet of Śrī Tripurāmbikā and that service is not possible by any other means other than the grace of the Gurunātha. 66

On his way, Paraśurāma thought within himself about the nature of worldly affairs. "All these days I never thought about important matters. 2

यथा चामिषलोभेन झषो बडिशवेधितः। कस्य किं तत्सुखं जातं हतसंसारवर्त्मनि ॥ ७ ॥

"Just like a fish greedy about meat gets caught in a fish-hook, persons greedy about small imaginary pleasures end up in difficulties. What happiness has anyone got in this cruel worldly journey? 7 “Starting from an insect to an out-caste person every being is continuously striving for happiness.

“The pleasure of a king of the three worlds is similar to the pleasure experienced by a worm in the urine and excreta, in respect of taste and copulation.

“Everything is desired indeed for the sake of the body born out of the five elements. 8, 9

“People take this body which ceaselessly throws out liquid, which smells of dirt and filth, which is filled with excreta, urine and phlegm, which is full of hair, skin and blood, to be supremely good and dear, and decorate it with scent and aromatic flowers, and ignorantly feel happy about the decorated body. 13 to 15

“This body is being consumed by old age and is defiled by diseases. It spreads foul smell by the oozing marrow of the wound. Sweating and lacking lustre, it is inauspicious being eaten up by a host of worms. It is dirty with filth. Seeing such a body of another in this condition, the ignorant thinks of his body as always young and permanent. 17 to 19

एवं विधेऽतिबीभत्से नारीदेहे नृदेहे । परस्परस्य सौन्दर्यं दृष्ट्वात्यन्तसुमोहिताः ॥ २० ॥

“It is a wonder that extremely infatuated persons, because of delusion, see and desire for beauty in this body which stinks like a corpse which is highly reproachable, which is perishable, which causes pain, which is short lived and which causes fear. What special difference could be in a woman's body other than atoms, than in the body of a man, which by its beauteous look, increases desire in lustful persons? “People acquire wealth through continuous physical and mental difficulties. Once they become rich, even friends turn enemies. One's own son, loved wife, mother, father, dear friend and all look upon these people with hate and suspicion, like a crow. 38, 39

Moving along with such thoughts, desiring happiness and total self-protection, Paraśurāma then saw a great mountain. 53

एवं शोभापवेक्षन्स प्राप्तवानन्तिकं गिरेः। गन्धमादनसंज्ञस्य गीर्वाणाऽवसतेस्तदा ॥ ५९ ॥

The mountain before him had shining sky-scraping peaks; clusters of clouds were resting on the peaks. The central portion of it was reverberating with the music of divine damsels.

It was filled with the tinkling resonance of the anklets of dancing Apsaras. It appeared beautiful by the group of Siddha women playing on the swing. Its caves were filled with the sports of intoxicated Yaksha women. Its interior was suffused with fragrance from Kadamba flowers. It bore a gentle breeze spreading the aroma of scented flowers.

The lotuses in the ponds were glittering with swans, ruddy geese, cranes surrounding them. Its creepers were filled with the music of female bees.

Witnessing such a grandeur, Paraśurāma approached the mountain named Gandhamādana the dwelling of gods. 54 to 59

As Paraśurāma was thinking thus, he saw the hermitage of Dattātreyā Muni that he was longing for. 61

"It is a wonder that fortune will dawn on people in the course of time. Today I will see his lotus feet that destroy the heat of the worldly conflagration and shower nectar." Thinking so, Paraśurāma approached the doors of the hermitage. 63, 64

दृष्टवान् द्वारदेशस्थं ब्राह्मणं ध्यानतत्परम् । तद्ध्यानभङ्गभीत्याऽथ संस्थितो दूरतः क्षणम् ॥ ६५ ॥

Near the door, he saw a brahmin who was engrossed in meditation. Then fearing to disturb his meditation, Paraśurāma stood for a while at a distance. 65

After a while the brahmin opened his eyes and saw Paraśurāma who moved towards him and started asking questions after prostrating at his feet. 66

इति तद्वचनं श्रुत्वा ब्राह्मणः शान्तमानसः। वाक्यं मधुरसासारमाह स स्मितपूर्वकम् ॥ ६९ ॥

Listening to Paraśurāma, that peaceful brahmin with a smile spoke words like the sweet essence of honey. 69

Hearing the words of that Brahmin, Paraśurāma spoke with folded palms. “Oh great sage! I am born in the Bhṛgu lineage as son of Jamadagni. Well-known as Paraśurāma, I have come here with some motive ordered by the compassionate sage Samvarta. 71, 72

“Later you will come to know everything about me. Just like a thirsty person wandering in the desert-like forest scorched with heat will not be happy with any thing other than getting cool water, nothing would interest me other than the sight of my Guru’s feet. 74, 75

“Hence, you make me known to him who destroys the misery of his disciples.” Listening to Paraśurāma, the brahmin with a smile replied sweetly. “Oh! Paraśurāma! Due to the power obtained by serving the great Guru, I know clearly the purpose of your visit here. 76, 77

गच्छाऽन्तराऽऽस्ते मुनिराद् सर्वलोकसुहृत्तमः। इत्युक्तस्तेन मुनिना शालाऽन्तः प्रविवेश ह॥

“Go inside. The great sage who is the friend of the Universe is there.” Thus addressed by the Muni, Paraśurāma entered the hermitage. 78

There Paraśurāma saw the leader of the ascetic clan being served by eminent yogis of great merit. Prostrating at his lotus feet, Paraśurāma stood nearby with folded palms looking at the posture of Guru Dattātreya. 79, 80

यतिवेषधरं मिश्रलिङ्गिनं शङ्कितोऽभवत्। किमेतदकुतं वृत्तं मुनेरस्य महात्मनः ॥ १० ॥

Seeing such an ascetic who was embraced by some young beautiful woman equalling Lakṣmī, with reddish eyes rolling due to intoxication and with a wine pitcher in front, exhibiting contradictory signs, Paraśurāma became suspicious. "What is this wonderful behaviour of this great sage?" 8 to 10

विषसम्पुक्तमाध्वीकमिव पश्यामि चेष्टितम्। अहो महात्मनां लोके गतिरत्यन्तचित्रिता ॥ ११ ॥

I see his conduct like wine mixed with poison. Alas! In this world the manner of great persons is extremely surprising. 11

क्वचिद्वाह्यसमीचीना क्वचिदान्तरसौभगा। अचिन्त्यवृत्तयो लोके योगिनः खलु मादृशाम् ॥

Sometimes they exhibit external goodness. Sometimes they display inner beauty. In this world, for persons like me, the behaviour of yogis is indeed incomprehensible. 12

न ह्यसारं स संवर्तो मह्यमादिशति क्वचित्। द्वारेऽप्येष महाशान्तः संश्रयेत्प्राकृतं कथम् ॥

अत्रापि परितः सर्वे निषण्णाः सात्त्विकर्षभाः। तस्मात्रैतद्यथादृश्यमन्यदेवास्ति किञ्चन ॥ १४ ॥

That sage Samvarta would not tell me something that is useless. Also, how will such a tranquil person (the brahmin) seek shelter at the doors of the hermitage? Again, many pious persons are sitting around him. Therefore what I am seeing is not the reality which is something else. 13, 14

यथा तथा वा भवतु गुरुर्मेऽयं सनातनः। मनःकल्पितमेवेह सदसद्भेदभेदनम् ॥ १५ ॥

Whatever it may be, this ancient person is my Guru. Differences like good and bad are mental formations." 15

इति निश्चित्य मेधावी सुचित्तस्तत्र तस्थिवान्।

Deciding thus, the intelligent Paraśurāma stood there with a calm mind.

तं समालोक्य स गुरुर्विनीतं भार्गवं ततः ॥ १६ ॥

प्रोवाच मधुरं वाक्यं विचित्रार्थसमन्वितम्। स्वागतं भार्गव तव कच्चित्ते कुशलं स्थितम् ॥

Seeing the polite Bhārgava, the Guru spoke sweet words carrying wonderful meaning. "Oh! Paraśurāma! Welcome to you. Are you fine?"

आश्रमे तव गोविप्रतृणवीरुन्महीरुहाम्। कच्चिदध्यागतं चार्णि काले शुश्रूषसि क्रमात् ॥ १८ ॥

In your hermitage, are the brahmins, cows, grass, creepers and trees doing well? Are you serving your visitors properly? Are oblations to fire suitably given? 18

काले काले स्वाध्ययनात्कच्चित्ते ब्रह्म सन्धृतम्।

अकाण्डेषूत्थितान्देहजाताऽरीन् जयसि ह्यरम्

Oh! Brahmarṣi! Are the Vedas being studied from time to time? Are you without delay keeping under control the untimely upsurge of the enemies in the body viz., the senses. 19

तपसा ते जिता लोका बहवः पुण्यसंश्रयाः। त्वया भार्गववंशो वै नीतोऽत्युच्चपदं परम् ॥ २० ॥

तपसा विद्यया शक्त्या ब्रह्मचर्येण तेजसा।

By the merits of your penance, you have conquered many worthy worlds. The Bhārgava lineage has indeed risen to the acme by your penance, erudition, power, continence and lustre. 20

वदाऽऽगमनकार्यं ते मादृशा न सदाश्रयाः

॥ २१ ॥

Tell me why you have come. Persons like me are not to be sought by sacred men. 21

लोकेऽक्षगोचरजयः पुरुषार्थैककारणम्। पुरुषार्थस्य सम्पत्तिः परो लाभ इह स्मृतः ॥ २२ ॥

In this world, conquering the senses is responsible for attaining the four goals. Attainment of the four goals is considered to be the highest gain in this world. 22

अलब्धपुरुषार्था ये तत्रार्थेनैव चोद्यताः। पुरुषास्ते न जीवन्ति जीवत्कुणपसंज्ञकाः ॥ २३ ॥

Those persons, without reaching the four goals, who are engaged in mercenary activities are like breathing dead bodies. 23

इति बह्वर्थनिःश्वासाः स्वार्थघ्नाः काष्ठपुरुषाः। सूत्रपाञ्चालिकेवेह व्यर्थचेष्टापरा नराः ॥ २४ ॥

Thus those men who are interested in wealth, who are selfish, are like wooden puppets engaged in futile activities. 24

अहं पुराऽतिवैराग्याश्रयस्तसर्वक्रियोऽभवम् । द्वयं तत्रातिबलवदिन्द्रियेष्चात्मशत्रुषु ॥ २५ ॥
 रसनोपस्थयुगलं बहवस्तेन पातिताः । द्वयं येन जितं सम्यक्तेन सर्वं जितं भवेत् ॥ २६ ॥

Earlier due to utter dispassion, I discarded all action. Among the enemies of the self, the tongue and the procreative organ are powerful. Many have been degraded by them. He who has conquered these two has truly conquered everything. 25, 26

अहमित्थंभूत आभ्यां जातो नूनं विनिन्दितः । न संश्रयन्ति मां सन्तो निषिद्धपथसेविनम् ॥ २७ ॥

I am really despicable for I have both such weaknesses. Pious persons do not follow me who has taken to the forbidden path. 27

बुद्धिभ्रंशकरी चेयं सुरा सज्जनगर्हिता । तादृशी वारयोषाऽपि मयैतदुभयं श्रितम् ॥ २८ ॥

This wine which causes mental disorder is reproached by the pious, similarly a courtesan. I have taken to both these. 28

अतो यत्सङ्गतिं प्रायस्त्यक्त्वा सन्त इतो गताः । तस्मादेवंविधस्येह स्थाने त्वं कथमागतः ॥ २९ ॥

Therefore pious persons have perhaps gone away from my company. Hence, how have you come to such a place like this? 29

वद भार्गव तथ्यं तद्येन शुद्ध्येत मन्मनः । इति पृष्ठो जामदग्न्यो रामः प्राह सुविस्मितः ॥ ३० ॥

Oh! Bhārgava! Tell me the truth by which my mind gets clarified." Thus addressed by Dattātreyā, Paraśurāma the son of Jamadagni spoke with astonishment. 30

संवर्तचरितं तच्च पूर्वदृष्टमनुस्मरन् । नूनं स्वरूपगुप्त्यै नो मुनिराहेदृशं वचः ॥ ३१ ॥

Recollecting the past deeds of Samvarta, Paraśurāma thought that Dattātreyā has said this to conceal his real form (identity). 31

उद्विग्नो मादृशां सङ्गात्कामिनां हतचेतसाम् । न प्राकृतं वदेन्मह्यं संवर्तोऽतिदयापरः ॥ ३२ ॥

It may be due to affliction caused by association with bad lustful persons like me, the compassionate Samvarta would not tell me the truth. 32

इति व्यवस्य नत्वा तमाहाऽत्यन्तशुभं वचः । भगवन्नार्हसि मयि शङ्कितुं शरणागते ॥ ३३ ॥

Deciding thus and prostrating before him, Parasurāma spoke very auspicious words. "Oh Lord! Do not suspect me, who is seeking your shelter. 33

अनन्यगतिरहं त्वां दयापीयूषवारिधिम् । दीनः संसृतिकान्तारदुर्गभ्रमणकातरः ॥ ३४ ॥
दुःखदावाग्निजटिलज्वालामालाऽऽकुलाऽऽशयः । वाञ्छामध्याह्नतरणिकरणैः परितापितः ॥
देवात्संवर्त्तसन्मार्गं प्राप्याऽऽसादितवानहम् ।

Destined to roam in the impenetrable forest of worldly life, which is engulfed with the conflagration of sorrow, I am scorched by the mid-day rays of the Sun of desire. Directed by Samvarta due to my good-fortune, I have, today, with no other protection, come to you who are an ocean of compassion. 34, 35

स्रवच्छीतलपीयूषमकरन्दाऽऽलवालकम् ॥ ३६ ॥

भवामि न चिरादेव संवर्त्तोक्तिमहत्त्वतः । नाहं विशङ्कनीयः स्यामनन्यशरणागतः ॥ ३८ ॥

By the power in the words of Samvarta having come to you who are like the wish-yielding tree with its basin filled with dripping cool ambrosia, who are worthy of worship, who are attended by a swarm of servants, who are great, who are pure, I will very soon gain your grace. I who have come to you as the sole refuge, should not be suspected 36 to 38

भवान्मया सुविदितो निश्चितश्चाऽपि मे गुरुः । सद्वाऽसद्वा स एवास्तु पन्थास्तो सद्गुरोर्यम ॥ ३९ ॥

I have clearly understood you. You are truly my Guru. Good or bad, may I follow your path who are my Guru. 39

गुरुः साक्षात्परशिवः सर्वेषामात्मदो मतः । अनात्मदैरसद्भिः किं को लाभस्तत्समागमात् ॥ ४० ॥

Guru is really Paraśiva who imparts Self-knowledge. What benefit can be had by associating with bad persons who cannot give Self-knowledge. 40

घनैः पुत्रैर्गृहैः स्त्रीभिर्ग्रांथैरखिलभूषणैः । प्राप्तेरनात्मपुत्रैस्तेरप्राप्ताऽऽत्मफलस्य किम् ॥ ४१ ॥

What is the use of possessions like wealth, progeny, mantles, wife, territories and land which cannot give Self-knowledge? 41

हतात्मनः सुखं कस्मान्नवेदखिलवैभवैः । जात्यन्धस्येव दीपानां सहस्रैरिव नो फलम् ॥ ४२ ॥

How can an unwise person derive happiness from immense wealth? It is similar to the benefit that a person born blind can have from thousands of lamps. 42

तस्मान्मयि कृपासिन्धो भगवन् दीनवत्सल । कृपा कर्तुं समुचिता शुद्धोऽहं त्वत्पदाऽऽश्रितः ॥

Therefore, Oh! Ocean of mercy! Adorable! Protector of the pitiable! It behoves you to be compassionate towards me, who is pure due to my surrender at your feet." 43

इत्येवं तस्य वचनं श्रुत्वा दीनदयापरः । प्रसन्नवदनः प्राह दत्तात्रेयो महामुनिः ॥ ४४ ॥

Listening to the words of Paraśurāma, the great sage Dattātreya, the protector of the deprived, spoke with a pleased face. 44

साधु वत्स जामदग्न्य सम्यग्व्यवसितं त्वया । स्वाऽऽत्मनः पदवी श्रेष्ठा दुर्लभा परिमार्गिता ॥

"Oh! Son of Jamadagni! My child! You have rightly decided. Attainment of Self-knowledge is pre-eminent which is difficult to get by searching. 45

नैतदल्पफलं ज्ञेयं यदात्मपदमार्गणम् । आश्चर्योऽत्र नरो लोके स्वात्मलोकाऽनुचिन्तकः ॥ ४६ ॥

It is a wonder that in this world man thinks about Self-realisation. The search for Self-knowledge is not to be thought as a small benefit. 46

एतावदत्र नृत्तनौ सारभूतं महाफलम् । शाश्वतप्रापकं सत्यं यदात्मपदमार्गणम् ॥ ४७ ॥

Attainment of Self-knowledge is the essence and the great benefit that is truly ever-lasting in this human life. 47

नूनं जना गोचरेषु संघृताक्षाशयाः सदा । इन्द्रजालनिभेष्वद्धा समीहन्ते पदे पदे ॥ ४८ ॥

Verily, people continuously long for pleasures obtained through sense-organs, that are truly magical in nature. 48

अलब्ध्वा तत्र विश्रान्तिं कालपाशेन पाशिताः । देहादेहान्तरं यान्ति चाऽसङ्ख्येयपरिक्रमैः ॥

Not finding solace in sense pleasures, people bound by the noose of death go from one body to another in myriad cycles. 49

चक्राऽऽन्दोलनयन्त्रस्थजना इव मुधा सदा । ऊर्ध्वाऽधो मध्यगमनं यान्ति तत्तद्गतिक्रमात् ॥ ५० ॥

People always experience high, low and middle states that are futile accordingly, as if trapped in the cog-wheel. 50

कृताञ्जलिर्मधुरया गिरा सूनृतया तदा ।

Hearing the words of Dattātreyā, the happy Paraśurāma humbly prostrated and after taking a seat spoke sweetly to him with folded palms. 52

महाराज गुरो स्वामिन् त्वयि तुष्टे महेश्वरे ॥ ५३ ॥

किमलभ्यमिहास्त्यन्यदिहलोके परत्र च । रत्नेच्छस्येव संप्राप्तरोहणस्य महात्मनः ॥ ५४ ॥

“Oh! Eminent Guru! Oh Lord! When you are pleased what is there that is not attainable here and hereafter? Just like a person desiring a diamond got to a mountain of gems, I have come to a great one like you. 53, 54

नूनं मया बहुतिथं संसृतेर्वर्त्म संश्रितम् । तत्र भ्रमन् न विश्रान्तिं लब्धवान् लेशतः क्वचित् ॥

अन्तः शीतलता लब्धा न मया कुत्रचित्क्वचित् ।

Oh Guru! For a long time roaming in the worldly life I never gained even a little solace. Caught and burnt in the blazing fire of desire and anger, I have spent a long time. I never felt any inner cool anywhere. 55, 56

लोके सर्वे नरा नार्यो मृगा यादो विहङ्गमाः ॥ ५७ ॥

सर्पा नागा यातुधाना इन्द्रचन्द्रादयोऽपि च । दन्दह्यमाना एवैते सदा काममहाऽग्निना ॥ ५९ ॥

In this world all men, women, animals, creatures of the sea, birds, the wealthy, the poor, kings, emperors, monarchs, Gandharvas, Yakṣas (demi-gods), siddhas, Vidyādhara, serpents, snakes, demons, Indra, Moon and the like are always being burnt by the great fire of desire.

तस्माद्यथाऽहमनिशं भवेयं सर्वशीतलः । दह्यमाने वने गङ्गामध्यस्थ इव सिन्धुरः ॥ ६० ॥

Therefore make me remain always cool like the elephant in the middle of the Gaṅgā while the forest is on fire. 60

तथाऽहं भवतः सम्यग्बोधितः स्यामिति प्रभो ।

Oh Lord! Similarly let me be suitably instructed by you."

इति तद्वाक्यमाकर्ण्य दत्तात्रेयो महामुनिः ॥ ६१ ॥

अवदत्सुशुभां वाणीं हर्षयन्मार्गवं मुनिम् । राम संशृणु मद्वाक्यं यदुक्तं भवताऽनघ ॥ ६२ ॥

अत्यन्तश्रेयसो मूलमेतत्ते वाञ्छितं शुभम् । नूनं त्वयि कृपा सम्यग्भगवत्या समाहिता ॥ ६३ ॥

Hearing his words, the great sage Dattātreya uttered auspicious words that pleased Paraśurāma. "Oh! Rāma! Listen carefully to my words. The good desire that has been expressed by you who are pure, is the root of auspiciousness. Truly you have gathered the grace of the Devī.

अनेकप्राग्जन्मकृतं सुकर्म फलितं तव । न ह्यल्पकर्मभिर्जातु शुभमेवं प्रजायते ॥ ६४ ॥

Your good deeds of many past births have borne fruits. This type of grace is never acquired by small deeds. 64

महाफलं व्यवसितमारात्ते हि फलोदयः । शृणु मद्बचनं राम सावधानेन चेतसा ॥ ६५ ॥

The fruits of your good deeds in the past are really supreme. Oh Rāma! Listen to me with oneness of the mind. 65

आत्यन्तिकं तु यत् क्षेमं तत्तेऽभीष्टतमं मतम् । तद्विना ज्ञानयोगेन न सिद्ध्यति कदाचन ॥ ६६ ॥

Your desire is most comforting. It cannot be realised anytime without wisdom. 66

सर्वेषां प्राणिनामात्मा साक्षादेव परः शिवः । स्वमायावैभववशात्स्वात्मानमविदन् परम् ॥ ६७ ॥

सङ्कोचे सर्वशक्तीनां स्वयं सङ्कुचितस्ततः । नैतावदिह सत्यं स्याद्भाति रिक्तमपि क्वचित् ॥

Truly Paraśiva is the Self of all creatures. The individual soul under the influence of Māyā does not understand the Supreme. It remains shrunk due to the shrinking of all powers. This is the Truth here. Nothing else shines. 67, 68

तथा तथा भासनात्तु विना किञ्चिन्न विद्यते ।

Other than the shining Self nothing else is there.

भासनं भानमेवेह न भानाद्भासनं पृथक्

भानशक्तिर्भासनं हि भानात्मा परमः शिवः । स एवाऽत्यच्छया शक्त्या स्वयमेकः सनातनः ॥
भासते विविधाकारो विचित्रत्वेन सर्वतः । स एवाऽऽत्मा तु सर्वेषां लोकानां नित्यसत्प्रभः ॥

Self-luminance is what is seen as Self. There is no difference between them. The power of the Self is really the illumination. The shining Self is Paramaśiva. He alone who is eternal by His pure power shines everywhere in multiple wonderful forms. He who shines always is the Self of the entire universe. 69 to 71

अभात इव भातोऽपि सदा मोहेन मन्यते । तस्मात्तत्प्रत्यभिज्ञानात् मोहनाशे सति द्रुतम् ॥ ७२ ॥
अन्तर्बहिः सर्वतश्च गङ्गाऽन्तर्द्वीपगो यथा । शीतलं भावमभ्येति नाऽन्यथा यत्नकोटिभिः ॥ ७३ ॥

Though He is Self-luminous, he appears to be dull because of delusion. Once He is known, the delusion disappears and He shines in and out like an island in the Gaṅgā that is very cool. By no other crores of means other than Self-knowledge can one attain cool serenity. 72, 73

तज्ज्ञानं दुर्लभं लोके दुर्लक्ष्यं विषयाऽऽत्मभिः । विना पराशक्तिकृपां नैव लभ्यं कदाचन ॥

Self-knowledge is difficult to obtain in this world and is invisible to persons engaged in sensual pursuits. Without the Grace of Parāśakti, Self-knowledge cannot be had any time. 74

अत आदौ सर्वजनैः सेव्या सा त्रिपुराम्बिका । सेवनं तु विना भक्त्या दुर्लभा जन्मकोटिभिः ॥

So, everyone should, to begin with, worship Tripurāmbikā. And that service to Her is impossible through crores of births but for devotion to Her. 75

साऽपि तस्याः सुमहिमाऽऽकर्णनेन विना तथा।

And devotion to Her is achieved only through listening to Her glory.

तस्मात्प्रयत्नेन जनैः सदा सुश्रद्धया युतैः

श्रोतव्या कीर्तितव्या च त्रिपुरायाः परा कथा। शृण्वतोऽनुदिनं सैव दृढां भक्तिं प्रयच्छति ॥

Therefore people should with perseverance and faith listen to and sing the transcendental glories of Tripurāmbikā. By this process Devī Herself will grant unswerving devotion towards Her. 76, 77

यथाऽसाद्य परां सेवां समाप्नोत्यभयं पदम्। नान्यः पन्था तस्य भवेत्यदस्य प्रापणो क्वचित् ॥

By such devoted supreme service one attains the state of fearlessness. There is no other path at all to reach that state. 78

अत आदौ पराश्रद्धा कर्तव्या महिमश्रुतौ। सैव कल्पतरुर्नृणां वाञ्छितार्थप्रसाधने ॥ ७९ ॥

Hence, to begin with, one should listen to Her glories with utmost faith. This alone confers all wants like a Kalpataru." 79

इति श्रुत्वा गुरोर्वाक्यं भार्गवः प्रीतमानसः । पुनराह शुभं वाक्यं मधुराक्षरमुस्वरम् ॥ १ ॥

Pleased by hearing the words of the Guru, Bhārgava spoke sweet auspicious words. 1

श्रीगुरो या त्वया प्रोक्ता त्रिपुरेति पराम्बिका ।

कीदृशी सा कथं भूता किं स्वभावा किमाश्रिता ॥ २ ॥

“Oh! Auspicious Guru! What is the form of the transcendental Tripurāmbikā who has been mentioned by you? What is Her origin? What is Her nature? 2

वद मे करुणासिन्धो सविस्तरतयाऽधुना ।

Oh! Ocean of Mercy! Tell me now about Her in great detail.”

इति पर्यनुयुक्तस्तु प्रोवाच ललितं वचः ॥ ३ ॥

त्रिपुरामहिमासिन्धुमग्नाऽन्तःकरणो मुनिः । ध्यात्वा प्रणम्य परमां ध्यानजाऽऽनन्दसंप्लुतः ॥ ४ ॥

Thus questioned, Dattātreyā who was immersed in the ocean of the Glory of Tripurāmbikā, meditated and prostrated before the Supreme and spoke enchanting words by virtue of his drowning in the bliss of meditation. 3, 4

शृणुराम पराशक्तेर्महिमा केन वर्ण्यते । लोकेऽश्वरैर्विघात्राऽऽद्यैः सर्वज्ञैः सर्वशक्तिकैः ॥ ५ ॥
अद्याऽपि सा न विज्ञाता केयं कुत्र स्थितेत्यपि । न सा वर्णयितुं शक्या ईदृशीति यथार्थतः ॥

“Oh! Rāma! Listen. Who can describe the glory of Parāśakti? Even today the all-knowing, all-powerful Lords starting from Brahmā, do not know who She is or where She resides. It is not possible to describe Her exactly. 5, 6

वेदाः शास्त्राणि तन्त्राणि वक्तुं न प्रभवन्ति वै । प्रत्यक्षादिप्रमाणानि पराक्संस्थानि सर्वदा ॥ ७ ॥
विश्रान्तानि मेयपदे नाऽऽक्रमन्ति तु तत्पदम् । वैश्वानरस्य ज्वालेव नान्तर्गच्छति कुत्रचित् ॥ ८ ॥

The Vedas, Spiritual injunctions, Tantras are really unable to describe Her. External evidences that are direct and inferential remain away from the Truth that is to be known, just like the flame which gets nowhere inside. 7, 8

सा शक्तिमर्तृसाम्यास्त्यसङ्कटपदवीं श्रिता । न तर्केण युक्त्या वा ज्ञातुं योग्या कदाचन ॥ ९ ॥

That power—Śakti—is Motherly, who is situated in an unrivalled position. She can never be known through logic or inventive skill. 9

अस्मीत्यवगमादन्यन्नोपलभ्येत कुत्रचित् । सा लीलाऽऽत्ततनुः शास्त्रैर्वेदाद्यैश्च निरूप्यते ॥ १० ॥

Other than through experience of the existence of the Self, She cannot be found. The scriptures, the Veda and other literature acknowledge Her as having a form by way of Her sport. 10

प्रमाणानां प्रमात्री सा चिच्छक्तिरिति शब्द्यते ।

लीलाऽऽत्तवपुषोऽप्यस्या नान्तोऽस्ति महिमाऽम्बुधेः

॥ ११ ॥

She is the ultimate in evidence. She is called the Power of Consciousness. Though She has assumed a form for Her sport, the ocean of Her glory is boundless. 11

शक्या गणयितुं सम्यक्पार्थिवाः परमाणवः । नान्तोऽस्ति महिमाराशेरस्याश्चित्रतनोः क्वचित् ॥

It is possible to count the number of atoms in the earth. There is no end whatsoever to the wonderful multitude of Her glory. 12

तथाऽपि सारतो लेशं त्रिपुराचरितस्य ते । अभिधास्यामि तद्राम सावधानमनाः शृणु ॥ १३ ॥

Even so, I will tell you a part of the essence of the story of Tripurā. Listen to it with attention. 13

पुरा क्षीराम्बुधिप्रान्ते शयानः फणितल्पके । आदिनारायणः साक्षात्तस्याः सत्त्वतनुर्हरिः ॥ १४ ॥
श्रिया लालितपादाब्जयुगलाऽतिविराजितः । भिन्ननीलमणिस्तोमकान्तिकान्ताऽङ्गसुप्रभः ॥ १५ ॥

In former times, Śrī Hari the primordial Nārāyaṇa, whose form is the absolutely pure satva aspect of Tripurā, reclined on the serpent bed. His shining lotus feet are served by Śrī Lakṣmī—the Devī of wealth. His body is effulgent like the glow from a bunch of broken Sapphire. 14, 15

प्रावृषेण्यथोवाहमध्यप्रोद्यत्तडित्प्रभम् । पीताम्बरं यस्य कटितटे संराजते स्फुटम् ॥ १६ ॥

His waist shines conspicuously with the yellow silk-cloth like a lightning amidst rain-bearing clouds. 16

श्रीवत्सशोभिपृथुलपीनवक्षस्थलाञ्जितः । वनमालातुलसिकागन्धाऽऽहृतमधुव्रतैः ॥ १७ ॥

अङ्गात्कान्तिच्छटेवेह निर्गता लक्ष्यते बहिः । पीनदीर्घचतुर्बाहुनालपद्मतलान्वितः ॥ १८ ॥

He has a well-built chest that is charming with the Śrīvatsa mark. The bees attracted by the fragrance of the garlands and the garland of Tulasī, appear as though the dark blue lustre of His body has come out. His long and stout arms end in lotus like palms. 17, 18

करसंयुतशङ्खारिगदापद्मविराजितः । राकेन्दुप्रतिमानाऽऽस्यो बिम्बोष्ठश्चारुनासिकः ॥ १९ ॥

He is magnificent holding the Conch, the Discus, the Mace, and the Lotus in His hands. His face is like the full Moon. His lips are red like the cherry fruit. He has a beautiful nose. 19

कर्णोल्लसत्सुमकरकुण्डलद्वयशोभितः । विकसत्पद्मयुगलपरिभाविशुभेक्षणः ॥ २० ॥

He is charming with a pair of earrings that resembles crocodiles. His auspicious eyes humble a pair of fully blossomed lotus. 20

भृङ्गाऽऽवलिनिभस्निग्धदीर्घकेशालिमण्डितः । नूत्नरत्नावलिप्रोद्यच्चारुकोटीरमस्तकः ॥ २१ ॥

His glossy bunch of hair is like a swarm of bees. His head carries a beautiful crown bedecked with an array of strange gems. 21

प्रेमावलोकनिष्यन्दैरभिषिञ्चद्भ्रमां मुहुः । भक्तैः प्रह्लादमुख्यैस्तु सेव्यमानोऽन्वहं हरिः ॥ २२ ॥

By His endearing glances, He is always bathing Śrī Lakṣmī. He is Hari who is incessantly served by devotees like Prahlāda and others 22

आस्ते समस्तजगतीरक्षणदक्षिणः सदा ।

He is always interested in the protection of the Universe.

कदाचित् तत्र लोकानां स्रष्टा गच्छन् पितामहः ॥ २३ ॥

दण्डवत्प्रणिपत्याऽथो कृताञ्जलिपुटो विधिः । स्तुत्वा बहुविधैः स्तोत्रैः स्थितः संप्राप्तविष्टरः ॥

Once Brahmā the creator arrived there, the abode of Hari.

He prostrated with folded hands and praised the Lord through many prayers and took his seat. 23, 24

अथ देवाः शतमुखमुखाः सम्मुखतो हरेः। आजग्मुर्विवदन्तो वै क्रुद्धाः संवत्तलोचनाः॥ २५॥

Afterwards Indra and other gods with their eyes red with anger after debate, approached Śrī Hari. 25

प्रणिपत्य विद्यातारं हरिं च कमलापतिम्। उपविष्टाः क्रमात्तत्र सम्प्राप्ताऽऽज्ञा मधुद्विषः॥ २६॥

Prostrating Hari the Lord of Lakṣmī and Brahmā, they took their respective seats after obtaining the orders from the Foe of Madhu—Madhusūdana. 26

तत्र पार्षदमुख्येन सुनन्देन प्रचोदितः। शतक्रतुरुपक्रामद्वक्तुं वृत्तं निजं कलेः॥ २७॥

Then Indra prodded by his chief assistant Sunanda started to talk about the quarrel among themselves. 27

भगवन् कमलाकान्त पुराणपुरुषाऽव्यय। विवदामो वयं सर्वे यत्रार्थं तन्निशामय॥ २८॥

Oh! Lord! The consort of Kamalā, Oh! Viṣṇu! The Immutable, listen to why we are all debating. 28

अहं शतक्रतुर्देवराजस्त्रिभुवनेश्वरः। मयोक्तं देवसदसि प्रसङ्गात्सकलं जगत्॥ २९॥

मयाऽधिष्ठितमेवाऽऽस्ते यज्ञानामप्यहं पतिः। पर्जन्योऽग्निस्तथा वायुः सर्वे मम वशंवदाः॥ ३०॥

तस्मादहं सर्वतस्तु श्रेष्ठो नान्यस्तु कश्चन।

Once in the assembly of gods, I, Indra the lord of gods and the three worlds, occasioned to mention that the entire world comes under my control and that I am the lord of religious sacrifices and all including Varuṇa, Agni, Air are under my rule and hence I am the supreme and none else. 29, 30

इति मद्बुधेन श्रुत्वा प्राह वैश्वानरस्ततः॥ ३१॥

माऽभिमानं वृथा कारीरिन्द्र त्वं भूढभावतः। किन्न पश्यसि मां सर्वलोकश्रेष्ठं सुरोत्तमम्॥ ३१॥

Hearing my words, Agni spoke thus. "Oh Indra! Do not be proud in vain due to ignorance. Are you not able to cognize me, the best among gods and best in the entire Universe? 31, 32

अहं मुखं त्वत्पुरोगदेवानामस्मि वासव। यूयं भुञ्जथ मद्दत्तं हविस्सर्वमखे पुनः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Oh! Indra! I am the foremost among gods led by you. All of you partake the oblations of all sacrifices that are brought to you by me. 33

न स्यामहं यदि भुवि न यज्ञाः स्युः कदाचन। अहं रुद्रस्य नेत्रात्मा संहराम्यखिलं जगत् ॥ ३४ ॥

“If I were not there, there will be no yajña-sacrifices—on earth. I am the third eye of Rudra who can destroy the world. 34

सेनानीर्मत्तनूजो वै तेन दैत्यजिगीषवः।

My son Śaṇmukha is the chief of the army and through him you have defeated the demons.

तस्माद्वृथा मोहमिमं त्यक्त्वा देवगणैः वृतः। मां समाराधय क्षिप्रं नो चेत्त्वं न भविष्यसि ॥ ३५ ॥

“Hence discarding your useless ignorance, worship me soon or else you will perish.” 35

श्रुत्वैतत्सोम आहाऽथ मा मोहं प्रतिपद्यथ। जीवन्त्यन्नेन वै लोकाः तत्रैव मदनुग्रहः ॥ ३६ ॥

After hearing this, the Moon said, “Do not be ignorant. The creation lives on food which comes from my blessing. 36

यद्यहं विमुखो भूयां तर्हि सस्यं विना जगत्। अवसीदेत क्षणेनैव मदङ्गजनितामृतैः ॥ ३७ ॥

वासावाग्निमुखा देवा जीवन्त्यनुदिनं ननु। वृथाऽभिमानेन यूयं मा विनाशमुपैष्यथ ॥ ३८ ॥

“If I were to withdraw, the world will be destroyed for want of vegetation. Indra, Agni and other gods are really sustained by the ambrosia that I generate. By needless pride, all of you should not meet peril.” 37, 38

एतद्वाक्यं समाकर्ण्य जगत्प्राणश्रुकोप ह। सोम किं कथ्यसे वृथा क्षणेनाहमिदं जगत् ॥ ३९ ॥

सोमाऽग्निवासवयुतं सदेवासुरमानुषम्। कीर्तिशेषं करिष्यामि नन्वहं सर्वनाशनः ॥ ४० ॥

Listening to these words the wind god became really furious. “Oh Moon! You are boasting in vain. Am I not the annihilator who can in a moment reduce the entire world, consisting of Indra, Moon, Fire, Gods, Men and demons to a state of memory of the past? 39, 40

दह्यमानेऽपराधात्ते न सोमो न च वासवः। न ब्रह्मविष्णुरुद्रा वा तदाऽऽसन्नितरे कुतः ॥ ४१ ॥

“Due to your offensiveness, if I were to destroy the world, there could then be no Moon, nor Indra, nor Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra. How can the others remain? 41

तदाऽयं मत्सखा ह्यग्निर्ब्रह्माण्डमखिलं मया। प्रैधितो दहति क्षिप्रं ततोऽहं वेगवान्बली ॥ ४२ ॥

“Then my friend Agni, supported by me, will in no time burn the entire universe. Therefore I am the fastest and strongest. 42

शून्याऽऽत्मकं करोम्यग्ने सद्वितीयस्तदा त्वहम्। यदि मेऽनुग्रहो न स्यात्तत्र स्पन्देत किं वद ॥

“Oh Agni! Having you as my junior I will reduce everything to a naught. Tell me if anything can move without my grace. 43

अहमेकः सर्वमहान्तः स्पन्दति वै जगत्।

“I alone am the supreme and the world is active because of me.”

इत्येवं कलहे प्राप्ते सभायां स्वर्गवासिनः ॥ ४४ ॥

अग्निपक्षाऽऽश्रिताः केचित्सोमपक्षाऽनुगाः परे। अन्ये मारुतपक्षास्थुश्चान्ये मत्पदवृत्तयः ॥ ४५ ॥

Thus a quarrel started in the assembly in heaven. Some gods supported Agni, some others supported Moon. A few followed the wind god and the remaining joined my side. 44, 45

एवं परस्परं वादैर्जाति वादैकतत्परे। क्रुद्धे दैवगणे स्वस्वशस्त्राऽऽदानपरे तदा ॥ ४६ ॥

वाचस्पतिः सुराचार्यः प्राह सान्त्वनपूर्वकम्। मा नाशमापद्यथ बुधा मद्वाक्यं शृणुताऽऽदरात् ॥

During such an argument, the angry gods involved in that, raised their weapons. Then their preceptor Brhaspati pacified them with his words. “Oh Gods! Do not get destroyed. Listen to me with love. 46, 47

अत्राऽन्तमभिजानाति जलशायी जनार्दनः। तत्र गत्वा क्षीरनिधिप्रान्ते ते पुरुषोत्तमम् ॥ ४८ ॥

नत्वा तन्मुखतो ज्ञात्वा शान्तिं भजथ सत्वरम्। तद्वयं समनुप्राप्तास्तव पादाम्बुजं ततः ॥ ४९ ॥

“Janārdana who sleeps on the ocean knows the reality about your debate. Therefore you go quickly to the milky ocean and fall at the feet of the Puruṣottama the great Cosmic Being and calmly become aware of the truth from Him.” Hence we have come to your lotus feet. 48, 49

संशयं छिन्दि भगवन् त्वं गतिर्देवताऽऽपदि ।

Oh Lord! Destroy our doubt. You are the refuge to gods during distress.

इति संप्रार्थितो विष्णुः शतक्रतुमुखैर्बुधैः ॥ ५० ॥

विचार्य देवकलहशान्त्युपायं चिरं तदा । नैते मद्वाक्यविस्रब्धाः स्वस्वपक्षदृढाऽऽशयाः ॥ ५१ ॥

नात्र शान्तिर्मया शक्या विधातुमिति चिन्तयन् । कपर्दिनं महादेवं दध्यौ हृदि जनार्दनः ॥ ५२ ॥

Thus requested by the gods led by Indra, Viṣṇu thought for a long time about a plan to pacify them. He thought that these gods who had firm belief in their own coteries would not repose faith in Him and He would not be able to bring about peace among them. So, He meditated on the great God Kapardi (Śiva), in His heart. 50 to 52

ध्यानाऽऽहूतस्तदा शम्भुराविरासीत्सभाभुवि ॥ ५३ ॥

Thus invited through meditation, Śiva appeared in their assembly.

वृषाऽऽरूढोऽम्बिकापार्श्वः शुद्धस्फटिकसन्निभः । बालशीतकरप्रोद्यत्कपर्दमुकुटोज्ज्वलः ॥ ५४ ॥

Śiva with a crystal-clear hue was seated on the Bull with Ambikā by his side. He was shining with matted hair, crown and crescent moon on his head. 54

मालतीमालिकाऽऽकारस्वर्धुनीशोभिमस्तकः । फालनेत्रोज्ज्वलत्कीलज्वालाज्वालितदिवत्तटः ॥

His head was bright with the Celestial River Gaṅgā, looking like a garland of Mālātī—a kind of jasmine flowers. He illuminated the quarters by the flame burning in His eye on His forehead. 55

भस्मत्रिपुण्ड्रलसितफालदेशाऽतिमुन्दरः । कुण्डलीकृतनागेन्द्रमूर्धरत्नत्विषाऽरुणा ॥ ५६ ॥

माणिक्यमुकुराऽऽभासा गण्डभूमिर्विराजते । प्रणयाऽवलोकसुधाधाराभिः प्लावयन्सतीम् ॥ ५७ ॥

His forehead was extremely beautiful with the bright mark of the three lines of ash. His mirror-like cheeks were shining from the reflection of the ruby on the hood of the ornamental serpents in His ears. With the ambrosia of His loving glances, He was showering Satī Gaurī.

वहनूद्राक्षमालानामावलिं पृथुलोरसि। हरिणं परशुं बिभ्रद्ब्रूयाभीतिं कराऽम्बुजैः ॥ ५८ ॥

On His well-built chest appeared rows of Rudrākṣa garlands. In His lotus-like palms He bore the deer, the axe, the signs of boon and protection. 58

व्याघ्रत्वक्पटसंराजत्कटीतटलसद्भुः। इभचर्मोत्तरीयाद्यभस्मोद्भूतितविग्रहः ॥ ५९ ॥

His beautiful body was glittering with the Tiger's skin tied around His waist. His upper garment was the skin of an Elephant. His body was smeared with ash. 59

कर्पूराऽचलवद्राजदुक्षोपरिविराजते। नवरत्नप्रोद्यमानमहार्सिहासने स्थितः ॥ ६० ॥

Shining on His luminous bull that was like a mountain of camphor, He was seated in a great Simhāsana which was made of nine types of gems. 60

पद्माऽऽसनसुपद्माऽऽभयपद्माऽतिशोभनः। प्रमथाद्यैः पार्षदैश्च बाणाद्यैर्भक्तशेखरैः ॥ ६१ ॥

नन्दीभृङ्गीप्रभृतिभिर्गणैः संसेवितो भवः। तमोमूर्तिः पराशक्तेस्त्रिपुराया महेश्वरः ॥ ६२ ॥

देवाधिदेवो जगती संहाराऽऽचारतत्परः।

He was beautiful in His padmāsana posture of his lotus-like feet. He was attended by the Pramathas, eminent devotees like Bāṇa, Nandi, Bhṛṅgi.

The illusory aspect of Parāśakti Tripurā, He, the Maheśvara, the foremost Lord engaged in the act of destruction, appeared before the gods. 61, 62

निरीक्ष्य तं विष्णुमुखाः प्रोत्थिता विबुधेश्वराः ॥ ६३ ॥

साष्टाङ्गं प्रणिपत्याऽथो सपर्या समकल्पयन्। स भाजितो हरिमुखैर्भवो विष्णुं रमापतिम्॥ ६४ ॥

अवरुद्ध वृषश्रेष्ठात्परिष्वज्य ससम्भ्रमम्। स्वाऽऽसनेऽथ समाविष्टो जनार्दनमुखैर्बुधैः ॥ ६५ ॥

Seeing Him, the gods led by Viṣṇu prostrated and worshipped Him. Thus worshipped by them, Bhava-Śiva alighted from his admirable bull and embraced with happiness, Viṣṇu the Lord of Lakṣmī. Then along with the gods and Janārdana, He took His seat. 63 to 65

मुरारेरिङ्कितं ज्ञात्वा दृष्ट्वा देवानपीश्वरः। कलिना मन्युना ग्रस्तान् जगतां स्वस्तये ततः॥ ६६ ॥

त्रिपुरां जगतां धात्रीं प्रार्थयामास शङ्करः ।

Knowing the mind of Murāri Viṣṇu and looking at the gods overpowered by quarrel and hatred, Śiva, for the welfare of the world, prayed to Tripurāmbikā the creatrix of the world. 66

शङ्करस्य व्यवसितं ज्ञात्वा विधिहरी ततः ॥ ६७ ॥

नत्वा स्मृतिपरौ तस्या जातौ शुद्धाऽऽत्मना युतौ । कारणैः पुरुषैरेवं संस्मृता सा परात्परा ॥ ६८

जगद्रक्षावितानाय प्रादुरासीत्पराम्बिका ।

Understanding the act of Śaṅkara, Viṣṇu and Brahmā bowed and meditated on Her, with a pure mind. Remembered thus by the three causal persons, the Trans-transcendental Great Mother manifested Herself in order to protect the Universe. 67, 68

महाशब्दः समभवद्वज्रनिष्पेषनिष्ठुरः ॥ ६९ ॥

तेन शब्देन महता ब्रह्माण्डान्तरमायता । लेशीकृतमहावज्रप्रपातौघमहास्वनः ॥ ७० ॥

At that time arose a great sound like the severe striking of a thunderbolt. That mighty sound which enveloped the Universe rendered trivial, the sound from the striking thunderbolt. 69, 70

प्रज्ज्वालाऽतितरसा तथा प्रागुत्तरा हि दिक् । द्योतनाकोटितडितां युगपत्तु यथा तथा ॥ ७१ ॥

Then soon the north-eastern quarter blazed as if the brilliance of crores of lightnings occurred at the same time. 71

तत्तेजसा च शब्देन बुधाः सेन्द्राग्निवायवः । अन्धीभूताश्च बधिरिकृताः सन्नासवेपिताः ॥ ७२ ॥

By that sound and luminance the gods including Indra, Agni and Vāyu became blind and deaf and trembled with fear. 72

मूर्च्छिताः पतिता भूमौ छिन्नमूला इव द्रुमाः । विसंज्ञाः स्रस्तवसना भ्रष्टकोटीरभूषणाः ॥ ७३ ॥

Fainting, they fell on the ground like uprooted trees. They were unconscious of dislodged clothes, fallen crowns and ornaments. 73

विक्षिप्तबाहुचरणाः समासाद्येतेतरम् । संघशः पतिताः केचित्केचिद्विरलतो बुधाः ॥ ७४ ॥

With their limbs stretched on each other, some gods fell in groups, some here and there. 74

एवं भूते देवगणे विधिविष्णुमहेश्वराः । दृष्ट्वा महाप्रकाशैकस्तोमं व्याप्तदिगन्तरम् ॥ ७५ ॥
तत्तेजसो न मूर्धानं न मध्यं नाऽन्तमेव च । लक्षितं तैस्तदा सर्वलोकं व्याप्य व्यवस्थितम् ॥ ७६ ॥

When the gods were in such a state, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Maheśvara saw the magnificent brilliance pervading the directions. They could not perceive the beginning, middle or end of that unique effulgence which embraced the Universe. 75, 76

आपातालादाद्युमूर्ध्नः प्रकाशैकघनं महत् । खद्योतीकृतमार्तन्दकोटिकोटिमहद्युति ॥ ७७ ॥
ज्ञात्वा पराशक्तिलीलाविभवं कारणेश्वराः । दण्डवत्पतिता भूमौ भक्त्या तां शरणं गताः ॥ ७८ ॥

Cognising that great unparalleled brilliance, which had spread from the nether world to the boundaries of heaven, as the grandeur of the sport of Parāśakti, the causal lords fell prostrate on the ground and surrendered to Her with devotion. 77, 78

भूयो भूयः प्रणमुस्ते दृष्ट्वा तत्प्रभवाद्भुतम् । कृताञ्जलिपुटाः स्तोतुं प्रवृत्ता जगदम्बिकाम् ॥ ७९ ॥

Witnessing that wonderful manifestation, they again and again bowed. Then with folded palms set out in prayer to the Universal Mother.

इति श्रीत्रिपुरारहस्ये माहात्म्यखण्डे सप्तमोऽध्यायः ॥

End of the seventh chapter of the Māhātmyakhaṇḍam of Śrī Tripurārahasyam.

अष्टमोऽध्यायः

Chapter 8

स स्तवं कर्तुमुद्युक्तो ब्रह्मा लोकपितामहः। भक्तिसन्ततवाग्धैरानन्दभरितान्तरः ॥ १ ॥

The creator Brahmā blissfully started to pray with words reaching the heights of devotion. 1

जय जय मातर्जगतां जय जय सर्वाधिके महेशानि।

जय जय भक्ताऽऽर्तिहरे जय जय सर्वाऽन्तरस्थचिद्रूपे ॥ २ ॥

“Victory to Mother of the Universe. Victory to the Supreme, the consort of Maheśa. Victory to the dispeller of the distress of the devotees. Victory to the Intelligent Form—Consciousness situated in all beings. 2

जगतां जनिमुखरचना यदभ्रूलीलाविलासतः कुर्मः।

विधिहरिरुद्रेशाऽऽद्या वयं महेशीं नमामि तां देवीम् ॥ ३ ॥

“We, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśāna and others, carry out, by the sportive movements of whose eyebrows, the act of creation, protection and destruction of the world, to that great Devī, I salute. 3

स्रष्टाऽस्म्यहं मुरारिः पालयिता चैष नाशको रुद्रः।

ईशस्तिरोधिमूलं सर्वं त्वच्छक्तिलेशतः सिद्धम् ॥ ४ ॥

“I create, Murāri protects, Rudra destroys, Īśa conceals this world. All this happens by a trifle of Your strength. 4

सर्वाऽनुग्रहमूलं सदाशिवोऽप्येष तावकपदाब्जम्।

संश्रित्यैव प्रभवति तस्मात् त्वं सर्वसेवनीयाऽसि ॥ ५ ॥

“And Sadāśiva who is the cause of grace does so only by seeking shelter under Your lotus feet. Hence You are adorable by one and all. 5

वामाज्येष्ठारौद्रीरूपेणाऽस्मान् स्थिताऽसि संस्थाप्य।

यर्हि वयं तर्हि तथा भूता तुर्यं तथाऽम्बिकावपुषा ॥ ६ ॥

“By Your forms (manifestation) as Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī, You have placed us in our present positions and in the form of Ambikā You occupy the fourth transcendental state. 6

संहृत्य तावदाकाशं स्वस्थाने संस्थितासि यदि जननि।

तर्हि वयं प्रथिताख्याः पञ्चमहाप्रेतसंज्ञया जगति

“If You were to involute the space and stay at Your own abode, then the five of us would remain in this creation as well-known five great corpses. 7

अखिलाऽऽपत्समयेष्वप्यस्माकं त्वं विचित्रतनुविभवा।

रक्षापरा यथा स्वे जनयित्री दारके जगन्मातः

“Oh! Universal Mother! Assuming many wonderful forms, You are our utmost protector, just like a mother protects her child. 8

लोकानां सकलानां त्वद्गुणजाता वयं त्रयस्त्वाद्याः।

अस्मभ्यमपि त्रिभ्यः पुरा स्थितेस्त्वं प्रकीर्तिता त्रिपुरा

“We three, born out of Your characteristics, precede the entire creation. Because of your existence prior to three of us, You are known as Tripurā.” 9

इति संस्तुत्य लोकानां स्रष्टा भक्त्यैकनिर्भरः।

दण्डवत् पतितो भूमौ ध्यायन् हृदि पराऽम्बिकाम्

॥ १० ॥

Thus praising the Supreme Mother, the creator filled with devotion fell prostrate on the ground meditating on Her. 10

अथ पीताम्बरो भक्त्या गद्गदस्वरतो हरिः। अस्तौषीदतिचातुर्यप्रकरोक्तिप्रगुम्फनैः

॥ ११ ॥

Then Hari wearing the yellow garment, with a voice choked with devotion, praised Her skillfully with many dignified words. 11

श्रीमातर्वयमिह ते गुणप्रभूतास्त्वच्छास्ति सततमतीव जागरूकाः।

कुर्मस्तज्जननि पदाम्बुजैकभक्तिं वाञ्छामो भवतु तदेव सर्वदा नः ॥ १२ ॥

“Oh! Auspicious Mother! We, who are born out of Your characteristics, always cautiously carry out Your instructions. Let us be always devoted to Your lotus feet alone as cherished by us. 12

देवेशि त्वयि सति सर्वभाववर्गः तत्तद्रूपगुणप्रभेदभिन्नगात्राः ।

नानाशक्तिविभववशतो विभानो नोचेहेवि किमपि नैव भावितः स्यात् ॥ १३ ॥

“Oh! Great Devī! Because of You, all beings shine according to their different forms from their tendencies and various powers. If not, there would be nothing existing. 13

भूरापोऽनलचरखानि जङ्गमानि भूतानि स्थिरविभवानि चाऽपि माता ।

दिक्कालौ सदसदपीह सर्वमेतत्त्वद्रूपं न लेशतस्त्वदन्यत् ॥ १४ ॥

“Oh! Mother! Earth, Water, Air, Fire, Space, Moving and Non-moving forms, Directions, Time, Manifest and Non-manifest and all are Your Manifestations. Other than You, there is not even an iota of existence. 14

लोकेषु प्रथितमहाप्रभावयुक्ता ब्रह्माद्या वयमिह लोकनाथनाथाः ।

त्वत्पीठप्रपदनिकेतना हि जाताः सेवाऽतस्तव पदपद्मयोर्ममस्ते ॥ १५ ॥

“We, starting from Brahmā, the lords of the world, have become famous by our grandeur having secured a place at the base of Your seat because of our service to Your lotus feet. Salutation to You. 15

रूपं ते परममतीन्द्रियं श्रुतीनां मूर्धानोऽप्यतिचकिता वदन्ति नैव ।

त्वन्मायाविभवपराकृताऽन्तरङ्गा ये ते त्वां कथमिह तादृशीं विदन्ति ॥ १६ ॥

“The Upaniṣads severely tremble and fail to describe Your form which is trans-sensory. How can they, overpowered by Your mighty Māyā, understand You of such greatness? 16

भूयस्त्वत्पदसरसीरुहैकसेवाऽन्यभूताऽखिलमलदोषसङ्गयुक्तः ।

श्रीनाथोऽमृतवचसा सुशुद्धचित्तो वेत्ति त्वां परमशिवात्मरूपिणीं सः ॥ १७ ॥

“The Lord of Lakṣmī having discarded the heap of impurities by constant single-minded service to Your lotus feet and gaining a pure mind by ambrosial prayers to You, has understood You as the embodied Self of Paramaśiva. 17

सर्वज्ञोऽप्यजनितवाङ्मयो हि वेदः त्वद्रूपं वदति गुणप्रभेदभासम् ।

तस्मात्त्वं परकृपया विभर्षि चैतत्तेजोधात्मकवपुरेतदस्मदर्थम् ॥ १८ ॥

“The omniscient Veda proclaims that the three tendencies (Guṇas), cause Your seeming form. Hence out of extreme compassion You have assumed this brilliant form for our sake. 18

रूपं चैतदपि महाप्रकाशमात्रं त्वत्सेवाविभवत एव लक्षितं नः ।

देवेन्द्राद्यखिलसुरौघदोषशान्त्यै मातस्ते भवतु समीहितस्वरूपम्

॥ १९ ॥

“We are seeing this, Your most effulgent form, only due to our great service to You. Oh Mother! Let Your desirable form pacify the multitude of defects of gods lead by Indra.” 19

एवं मुरारिः संस्तुत्य त्रिपुरां परमेश्वरीम् । भक्तिपीयूषवारिधिमग्नो नैक्षत किञ्चन

॥ २० ॥

Murāri, praying thus to the great Devī Tripurā, was immersed in the ambrosial ocean of devotion and did not see anything else. 20

अथ स्तोतुं पशुपतिः समारम्भे कृताञ्जलिः । भक्तिनिर्भरसंराजत्सुकोमलवचोगणैः

॥ २१ ॥

Next, Īśvara with joined palms started praying the Devī with soft words glowing with devotion. 21

नमामि परमेश्वरि त्वमिह सर्वदेवोत्तमैः विद्यातृहरिशङ्करैः परमपूरुषैः पूजिता ।

अतस्त्वदधिकः कथं भवति कोऽपि देवाऽभिधः त्वमेव सकलोत्तमा भवसि राजराजेश्वरी ॥

“Oh! Parameśvarī! Salutation to You. You are worshipped by the supreme beings Brahmā, Hari and Śaṅkara—who are foremost among gods. Therefore, who can be greater than You? Oh! Rājarājeśvarī! You are the only one excelling all else. 22

धिगस्तु मनुजाऽभिधान्नरपशून् विमूढान् हि तान् विहाय परमेश्वरीं परशिवां समस्तोत्तमाम् ।

मुधा हि विबुधाऽधिपान् परिचरन्ति ये कामिनो विहाय सुरशाखिनं मृतकरीरवृक्षाऽऽश्रयान् ॥

“Fie upon those passionate ignorant animal like human beings, who neglecting the most excellent Parameśvarī, the Parāśaktī, serve other lords of gods just like neglecting the Divine Tree Kalpavṛkṣa and seeking a dry thorny tree. 23

जगज्जननि तावके चरणपङ्कजे मे सदा स्थिरीभवतु मानसं विषयवासनानिर्गतम् ।

त्वदीयपरिसेवने सततमस्तु पाणिद्वयं वचो भवतु कीर्तने गुणगणाऽमृताब्धेः शिवे

॥ २४ ॥

“Oh! Auspicious Universal Mother! Let my mind, purged of sense pursuit, be constantly fixed on Your lotus feet. Let my hands be always engaged in Your service. Let my speech sing the ocean of Your many glories. 24

विधातृहरिशङ्करप्रियतमाः सतीः शारदारमागिरिसुताऽभिधास्तव कलाः सुमुख्या वयम्।
मुखे हृदि निजार्धके वपुषि धारयन्तः सदा जगद्विस्तृतिधारणप्रलयकर्मसु प्रोद्यताः ॥ २५ ॥

By always keeping Your partial incarnations known as Śārādā, Ramā, Girijā, who are respectively the consorts of Brahmā, Hari and Śaṅkara in our mouth, heart and left half of the body, we are engaged in the task of creation, protection and destruction of the universe. 25

त्वमेव विस्तृतिर्विधौ स्थितिर्हीशिपर्यङ्कके मयि प्रलयनं शिवे गुणविलापना चेशके।
अनुग्रहकृतिः शिवे परतरे परब्रह्मणि स्थिता परशिवाऽऽत्मना सहजचित्प्रकाशाऽऽत्मिका ॥ २६ ॥

“Oh! Auspicious Devī! You are the creatrix in Brahmā, the protector in Viṣṇu who reclines on the serpent, the destroyer in me (Śiva), the concealer of attributes in Īśāna, the aspect of grace in Sadāśiva. You are Parāśakti in the transcendental Para-Brahmā. You are by nature the glowing Intelligence. 26

भुवः कठिनता यथा रस इवाऽप्सु रूपं शुचेर्यथा च मरुतो गतिर्भवति शून्यता खे यथा।
यथा भवति चोष्मता दिनकृतस्तथा त्वं शिवे शिवादिवसुधान्तके परशिवे च साराऽऽत्मिका ॥

“Oh Paraśive! Just like the hardness in earth, the taste in water, the form in fire, the movement in air, the vacuum in space, the heat in Sun, You are the essence of all the creative principles starting from Sadāśiva to the earth. 27

सुरेश्वरमुखाऽमरास्तव महामहेश्याः परप्रभावपरिमोहिताः परिभवन्ति चाऽन्योन्यतः।
समुद्धर तवार्धकान् जननि दानवारीन् शिवे विभावय कृपामृताप्लुतकटाक्षलेशैः सकृत् ॥ २८ ॥

“Oh! Auspicious Devī! All the gods, starting from Indra, illusioned by your intense influence disrespect each other. Oh Mother! Rescue these gods who are Your children by casting just once a little of Your glance that is soaked in the ambrosia of mercy. 28

जगज्जननि सन्ततं विषयदावसन्तापितान् जनान् करुणयादृशाऽमृतरसौघनिष्यन्दया ।

विभावय परात्परे सकलतापसंहारिणी त्वमेव जगदाश्रया सततमस्तु तुभ्यं नमः ॥ २९ ॥

“Oh! Universal Mother! Dispeller of all distress! Oh! Supreme One! Look with Your compassionate glances that pour out a flood of nectar, at these persons always parched by the conflagration of desires. You are the sole refuge for this world. We salute You always.” 29

एवं संस्तुत्य सद्भक्त्या ब्रह्माद्या भक्तिनिर्भराः । दण्डवत्प्रतिता भूमौ ध्यायन्तस्त्रिपुराऽम्बिकाम् ॥

Thus praying with devotion and meditating on Devī Tripurāmbikā, Brahmā and others filled with devotion prostrated on the ground. 30

अथ सा त्रिपुरेशानी प्रसन्ना संस्तवैः स्तुता । सुराणां तमपाकर्तुं मोहं सावयवा बभौ ॥ ३१ ॥

Then, pleased by the good prayers, Tripurāmbikā took a physical form in order to drive away the ignorance of the gods. 31

तप्तकाञ्चनवर्णाऽङ्गी दिव्याऽऽभरणभूषिता । अष्टादशभुजा कन्यारूपिणी सुस्मिताऽऽनना ॥ ३२ ॥

(The Devī appeared as described in stanzas 32 to 45.)

With a molten gold hue, wearing shining ornaments, with eighteen arms, a virgin, with a charming smile. 32

मञ्जीरनूपुराऽऽरावझणज्झणितदिक्कटा । तलपादप्रभाक्षिप्तनवविद्रुमपल्लवा ॥ ३३ ॥

With the melody from her anklets tinkling in the quarters, with the lustre of Her foot putting to shame the sprouts of fresh coral. 33

सुमन्दपेशलगतिसतीर्थीकृतहंसिका । कौसुम्भाऽम्बरसंराजत्कटीतटविराजिता ॥ ३४ ॥

With the delicate gait of a swan, with a waist shining in a golden garment. 34

गम्भीराऽऽवर्तसदृशनाभिहृदविराजिता । रक्तकौशेयोत्तरीयसंशोभितभुजाऽन्तरा ॥ ३५ ॥

Charming with a navel resembling a deep vortex, with her chest shining in a red-silk upper garment. 35

धनुः पाशं तथा घण्टां डमरुं रत्नपात्रकम् । खेटकं जपमालाञ्च पङ्कजं पुस्तकं तथा ॥ ३६ ॥

चिन्मुद्रां शङ्खचक्रौ च खड्गं शूलं परश्वधम् । गदां सर्णिं शरान् हस्तैर्विभ्राणा पल्लवाऽरुणैः ॥

Holding in Her red sprout-like hands, the bow, the noose, the bell, the drum, the gem-decked cup, the shield, the rosary, the lotus, the book, the sign of knowledge, the conch, the disc, the sword, the trident, the axe, the mace, the goad and the arrows. 36, 37

With a garland of golden lotus in Her neck, with gem-set shoulder-ornaments, with budlike fingers shining with diamond rings. 38

नवरत्नलसद्द्रव्यैकशोभितकन्धरा । मणिमाङ्गल्यशोभाऽऽह्या श्रीचन्दनसुरुषिता ॥ ३९ ॥

Her neck decorated with a necklace set with nine gems, with the glow of Her gem-set sacred Māṅgalya chain, well smeared with sandal paste. 39

चन्द्रसूर्यसमानाऽऽभताटङ्कयुगलोज्ज्वला । पक्वबिम्बफलच्छायादन्तच्छदविराजिता ॥ ४० ॥

With a pair of ear-ornaments shining like the Moon and the Sun, with lips shining like the red-cherry fruit. 40

नासाऽऽभरणमाणिक्यद्विगुणारुणदृक्छदा । पद्मपत्रनिभत्र्यक्षलीलाऽऽहूतमृगीगणा ॥ ४१ ॥

With eyes whose redness has been doubled by the ruby in Her nose-stud, attracting the female deers by the sport of Her three eyes resembling the lotus petals. 41

Filled with the fragrance of her soft, long, dense, dark hair; with a crown, set with invaluable gems that filled the sky with its effulgence. 43

फालशोभिनिशानाथकलिकोत्तंसमण्डिता । सदा कुमारिका देवी परब्रह्मस्वरूपिणी ॥ ४४ ॥

With a forehead shining with crescent moon, who is ever a virgin, the Transcendental Devi. 44

ईदृशी सा पराशक्तिस्त्रिपुरा लोकसुन्दरम्। लीलार्थं सन्धृतवती रूपं परमपावनम् ॥ ४५ ॥

The Parāśakti Tripurāmbikā assumed such a most sacred enchanting form to sportively protect Her devotees. 45

ततो विधिहरीशानानाह गम्भीरया गिरा। वत्साः शृणुष्वं मद्वाक्यं कल्याणं करवाणि च ॥ ४६ ॥

Then Devī Tripurāmbikā addressed with a dignified voice the gods Brahmā, Hari, Īśāna and others thus: "My children! Listen to my words. I will bless you with good things. 46

मृतप्रायान् समालोक्य समाश्रस्तास्तदाऽकरोत्।

"I have now made myself visible to dispel the ignorance of the gods". Saying so, She brought back to consciousness and consoled, through the downpour of nectarian glances, the gods who had fainted as if dead. 47

अथेन्द्रप्रवरा देवा निद्रामुक्ता इवोत्थिताः ॥ ४८ ॥

किमिदं किमिदं चेति प्रोचुरन्योन्यसङ्गताः। न विजानाति कोऽप्येनां परमाद्भुतरूपिणीम् ॥ ४९ ॥

Then Indra and other gods got up as if from sleep and mutually wondered about what happened. They said "None of us knows who is this wonderful Lady". 48, 49

Then Indra and other prominent gods told Agni—"Oh Agni! Go quickly and find out what this huge form is? Why has it taken birth? What is its strength? What is its nature?" 50

Hearing the words of Indra, the haughty Agni proceeded and with great difficulty with his splendor reduced by Her effulgence got near Her and spoke to Parameśvarī. 51, 52

का त्वं कुमारी वद मे किं वीर्या त्वं कुतः स्थिता। जिज्ञासुरहमायातस्त्वां वरेण्यां महत्तराम् ॥

Thus spoken, Agni spoke to Her. "Oh! Auspicious Lady! Listen to me, I am Agni the embodiment of the mouth of the gods. I have been sent to you by Indra and others who are wondering about you. 55, 56

Hearing the words of Agni, Parāśakti laughed and told him thus "Oh Agni! If you have such a strength, then show it in my presence soon. Burn this straw that is placed before you." 58, 59

श्रुत्वाऽवहेलनं वाक्यं क्रुद्धो वैश्वानरस्तदा। प्राह चाऽतिस्तब्धश्रिया स्वात्मानं धानयन् गुरुम् ॥

Hearing these disrespectful words of Devī, the angry Agni with deluded mind spoke thinking himself to be the best. 60

नूनं त्वमबला बाला तस्मान्मुग्धप्रभाषिणी। सर्वभस्मीकरो योऽहं तृणदाहे नियोजितः ॥ ६१ ॥

"You are just a weak young girl. Therefore you are talking stupidly. You are asking me, who can burn everything, to burn a straw. 61

Saying so, Agni with red angry eyes and burning with a huge flame quickly fell on the straw and the Devī, to devour them both. Even as he tried with his great might, Agni was unable to burn the straw. With subdued flames he became cold like a meteor fallen in the arctic ocean. 62 to 64

Trembling with terrible cold, looking like a firefly, his whole body turning into a skeleton, the dull Agni who suffered shame disappeared from that place running away with all his strength. 65, 66

इन्द्राय चाऽवदद्वृत्तं न ज्ञातुमशकं हरे। तदग्रे संस्थितं भूतं महासत्त्वपराक्रमम् ॥ ६७ ॥

Then, he narrated to Indra. "Oh Indra! It was not possible for me to understand that huge mighty force that I faced". 67

Then Indra told the Moon to find out about the huge form. "Oh Moon! Go with speed and get to know about this mighty one. 68

Hearing the words spoken by Indra, the arrogant Moon proceeded and losing his lustre somehow went near Her and spoke to the Great Devī. "Oh Young girl! Tell me, who you are? What is your strength? Where do you live? I have come to understand an extremely wonderful lady like you."

69 to 71

Told so by Her, the Moon addressed Her thus. "I am the reputed Moon, the protector of the Universe. I am the Lord of herbs. With my ambrosial rays I protect the grass, the creepers, the bushes and the trees. Indeed, the whole Universe is alive because of me."

Hearing the words of the Moon, the transcendental Devī said with laughter. "Oh Moon! If you have such a strength, show it before me quickly. By your cool ambrosial rays, quench the straw placed before you, which is being burnt by me."

Listening to Her and taking Her light talk as insulting, the angry Moon filled with arrogance and proud of his valour spoke thus. "Oh weak lady! I shall destroy you for what you have childishly spoken without knowing my strength. I will freeze you with my cool rays." 77 to 79

इत्युक्त्वाऽनेककिरणैः शीतनीहारवर्षणैः । वर्षा चातिवेगेन बलाहकगणा इव ॥ ८० ॥

His downpour of snow was destroyed by the fire of Her third eye. His body was engulfed by the fire. Being burnt up, the Moon almost dead, quickly ran with fear and reported to Indra. "Oh Indra! I was unable to know about that huge form with stupendous might". 81, 82

Hearing such deriding words, the angry Vāyu being proud of his valour uttered abusive words. "Oh weak lady! Foolishly why are you opting destruction? Which strong man can withstand my great strength and force? You are stupid and arrogant. I shall destroy your pride. To start with I will reduce you to naught as if a straw. So, stand firm and withstand my unbearable force." 94 to 97

Thus addressing the Great Devī, as Vāyu, filled with anger thought of moving with great speed and force, he became lame and miserable. With all his breath he was unable to take a step forward. Then being put to shame he started running away with fear. He told Indra that he was unable to understand that Great form which is of unfailing mighty valour. 98 to 100

चिन्तयित्वा चिरं शक्रस्तज्जये कृतनिश्चयः। बलदर्पसमुन्नम्रो वज्रमुद्यम्य सत्वरः ॥ १ ॥

Thinking for a long time, Indra, elated by his strength and ego, decided to conquer the Devī, quickly took his thunderbolt. 1

He proceeded riding on the clouds to where the Devī was staying. Standing at a distance with his eyes concealed by the lustre of the Devī, asked Her, who had a tender body, who was glowing like a lotus filament, who had conquered the grandeur of crores of cupids by Her beauty.

You are evoking reverence. In my city of the heaven there are women like Rambhā and others. But I have not seen a beauty like yours, effulgent with eighteen arms, either in heaven or earth or even in nether world. Oh Lustrous Lady! quickly tell true answers to my questions.” 4 to 6

इति श्रुत्वा वचो देव्याः प्राह शक्रः सहस्रदृक् । शृणु मे वचनं सम्यगहं सुरपुरेश्वरः ॥ ९ ॥

Hearing the words of the Devī, the thousand eyed Indra spoke.
 “Listen to my words carefully. I am the lord of the heaven. 9

“I am Indra who has performed hundred sacrifices, who enjoys the wealth of the three worlds, who is mighty. I have come here to know about you. There is no one anywhere in the world who is equal to me, by way of valour, fame, wealth, strength and prosperity. 10

“Many powerful demons and rākṣasas have died just by the touch of the thunderbolt. 13

“Vala, Pāka, Namuci, Vṛtra, Tvāṣṭra and Tāraka who had conquered the entire worlds were defeated by this thunderbolt. 14

बहुनाऽत्र किमुक्तेन न मे तुल्यबलः क्वचित् । जानीहि मां महेन्द्राख्यं महाबलपराक्रमम् ॥ १५ ॥

“There is no point in talking more. There is no one who is equal to me in strength. Know me as the famous Mahendra with immense valour.” 15

Hearing the words of Indra, the Great Devī spoke. “Oh Indra! I know you well as the son of Kaśyapa. Oh Śatakratu! Show your or your thunderbolt’s valour on this light and dry straw, which is in front of you. If you cannot, then I would watch you running away with shame just like Agni and others.” 16 to 18

निशाम्यैतद्वचो देव्याः शक्रः प्रस्फुरिताधरः। उद्यम्य वज्रं संकृद्धस्तां प्रहर्तुं मनो दधे ॥ १९ ॥

Hearing the words of Devī, Indra angrily biting his teeth lifted his Vajrāyudha deciding to hit Her. 19

As Indra lifted his weapon the surroundings were lit up. When Indra was thus angrily standing with the lifted thunder-bolt in his hand, the Devī gave a little smile which was mocking at the moon light from crores of moons. Just by that smile, the hand of Indra which was holding the thunderbolt was frozen along with his feet and sensory organs like tongue, eyes and the like. He was on his own not able to move his limbs even a little. 20 to 22

एवं संस्तम्भ्यसर्वाङ्गो मघवा लिखिताऽऽकृतिः। वक्तुं कर्तुं प्रचलितुं नेष्ट ईषदपीश्वरः ॥ २३ ॥

Thus, Indra the lord of heaven, whose body became immobile looked like a painted picture and was unable to speak, move and act even a bit. 23

Seeing Indra transformed into a wooden figure, the sad gods trembled with fear. 24

Feeling miserable, having lost their lord, the gods wailed loudly. Then Indra realised that it was due to his own mistake and prayed to Āṅgīrasa (Bṛhaspati) his guru for protection from the danger. 25

Then just being remembered by Indra, the foremost intelligent sage Bṛhaspati who can know the past and future rushed there having known the subjugation of Indra's pride by the Devī. 26, 27

Bṛhaspati reached in a moment to the place where Indra was immobilised. Seeing Bṛhaspati who was capable of rescuing Indra, all the gods were consoled even by looking at him as if persons desiring to cross a river in spate, get a boat. 28, 29

In the meantime, Bṛhaspati who had foresight, saw the Universal Devī and swelled with happy horripilation. With his eyes filled with joyous tears, with folded palms on his head, he prostrated and with his voice choked started praising the Supremely Secretive Transcendental Mother as if he was worshiping Her with blissful words. 30 to 32

जामदग्न्यस्तु संश्रुत्य कुमार्याख्यानमद्भुतम्। विस्मितः प्राह मधुरं वाक्यं तं प्रणतस्तदा ॥ १ ॥

Having heard the wonderful legend of Devī Kumārī, the amazed Paraśurāma spoke sweetly after greeting him (Śrī Dattātreyā). 1

भगवन् महदाश्चर्यमाख्यानं भवतोदितम्। न कदाचिच्छ्रुतं पूर्वं त्रिपुरामहिमोन्नतम् ॥ २ ॥

“Oh Venerable Guru! The legend told by you is wonderful. I have not heard anytime in the past the great glory of Tripurasundarī. 2

Pleased by the repeated request from Paraśurāma, the great Dattātreya, understanding his ample sincerity, spoke thus—“Oh Rāma! I will narrate to you the sacred stories of the incarnation of Devī Tripurāmbikā. Listen. 9, 10

तत्तेऽभिधास्ये परममाख्यानं परमाद्भुतम्।

“She, the Kumārī, the Devī Tripurā, who was praised by Brahmā and others took three forms again. I will tell you that sacred and most marvellous legend.” 17

पुरा सर्गाऽऽदिसमये त्रिपुरा चितिरूपिणी ॥ १८ ॥

एकाऽऽसीन्नेतरतत्र तस्याः किञ्चिदपि स्थितम्। सा तथारूपिणी शक्तिः स्वस्वातन्त्र्यवशेन तु ॥
सृष्टयुन्मुखी यदा जाता तदेच्छा समजायत। इच्छया ज्ञानमुत्पन्नं क्रिया च तदनन्तरम् ॥ २० ॥

‘Long ago, at the time of creation, Tripurā the Universal Consciousness was all alone. There was nothing other than Her.

She, the embodiment of Power, who is Self independent wanted to create; the desire developed. From desire, knowledge was born and then action. 18 to 20

ततस्त्रिमूर्तयो जातास्त्रितयाहेवतेक्षितात्। इच्छामयः पशुपतिर्ज्ञानाऽत्मा हरिरेव च ॥ २१ ॥
ब्रह्मा क्रियात्मकस्तान् सा भावयामास शङ्करी। ते निसर्गमहावीर्याः सत्यसंकल्पशालिनः ॥ २२ ॥

‘From Her three glances the three gods were born. Paśupati represented desire, Hari knowledge and Brahmā action. They were looked at by Śaṅkarī and became naturally powerful and Truth abiding. 21, 22

तपः सुपरमं चकुर्यतचित्तेन्द्रियक्रियाः। तदा न रात्रं न दिवा न सूर्यो न च तारकाः ॥ २३ ॥
न भूमिर्न जलं तेजो वायुर्वा न दिशः क्वचित्। न निमेषो युगश्चाऽपि स्थितं सर्वं नभोमयम् ॥

‘The three gods did intense askesis controlling their mind and sensory organs. At that time there did not exist night, day, Sun, the stars, earth, water, fire, wind, the directions, the minute, or the yuga. Everything was just space. 23, 24

स्वयं प्रभास्तु ते देवा नभो निलयसंश्रयाः। महता तपसा युक्ताः समाधये सुनिश्चलाः ॥ २५ ॥

‘Self luminous as they were, the three gods in that space were engaged in great firm concentrated askesis. 25

अनेकयुगपर्याप्तकालेऽतीते पराऽम्बिका। पराकाशमयी तत्र विधातारमुवाच ह ॥ २६ ॥

वत्सोत्तिष्ठ विधे किं ते तपसा कर्तुमिच्छसि। सृज लोकान् सुभुवनानतस्त्वं जनितो मया ॥ २७

‘After a lapse of several Yugas, the Supreme Mother in the form of transcendental space addressed Brahmā. Oh Brahmā! My child, rise up. What is it that you want to do by penance? Create many beautiful worlds. I have given birth to you only for that purpose.’ 26, 27

इत्यादिष्टः पराशक्त्या जगत्त्रष्टुं मनो दधे। अहं कुत्र सृजामीति चिन्तयन् समपश्यत ॥ २८ ॥
तदा दृष्टो महाकाशः सर्वशून्यमयोऽमलः। अनन्तविस्तरोऽनादिर्नाऽन्तं तस्योपलक्षितम् ॥ २९ ॥

Thus ordered by Parāśaktī, Brahmā decided to create. Thinking where he should create, he looked around. He saw the great vast space without a beginning or an end. 28, 29

अवकाशोऽस्ति मे सृष्टेरिति मत्वा पितामहः। व्यचलक्तिञ्चिदङ्गेन स्पर्शं तत्रोपलब्धवान् ॥ ३० ॥

Thinking that there is room for his creation, Brahmā shook his body a little whereby he felt the touch. 30

स्वाङ्गस्य चलनादेवं स्पर्शाद्वायुर्व्यजृम्भत। वायोर्वेगादूष्मणस्तु प्रादुर्भावोऽभवत्तदा ॥ ३१ ॥

Thus by the touch generated by the vibration of his body, wind was formed. By the speed of the wind, heat was generated. 31

ऊष्मणो रूपसंयुक्तमग्निं प्रेक्षितवान्विधिः। ततो वह्नेस्तु परितो शीतसंस्पर्शसंयुतम् ॥ ३२ ॥
रसाऽऽह्वं सलिलं स्यन्दि स्नेहसंयुक्तमेव च। तत्र गन्धस्तु सन्दृष्टोऽनन्तरं तन्मलेन तु ॥ ३३ ॥
पृथिवी ददृशे तस्य कठिणा धारणक्षमा। दृष्ट्वैतावज्जगत्त्रष्टा चाऽस्ति मत्सृष्टिधारिणी ॥ ३४ ॥

From that heat, Brahmā saw Agni taking shape. Then all around Agni, cool and viscous water was formed. Then smell was generated. From the dust of the smell was formed the earth which was hard and capable of bearing the creation. Seeing all this, Brahmā thought that (the earth) to be the place of his creation. 32 to 34

अस्यां सृजामि भुवनं नानातनुविचित्रितम्। इति मत्वा तत्र सृष्टिं वितेने जगदीश्वरः ॥ ३५ ॥

Thinking that “On this earth I will create a world with many diverse forms” Brahmā, the Lord of the world, started his creation. 35

श्रुत्वैवं वचनं तस्य दत्तात्रेयस्य भार्गवः। प्राह संशयितस्वान्तो मधुराक्षरया गिरा ॥ ३६ ॥

Listening to what Dattātreya said, Paraśurāma filled with doubts spoke sweetly. 36

भगवन्नत्र मे चित्तमनंतं नैवाऽधिगच्छति। बहुशङ्कास्पदं वाक्यं श्रुत्वा तव विचित्रितम् ॥ ३७ ॥

“Oh Venerable Guru! By listening to your words that give room for many doubts, my mind is not satisfied. 37

आकाशमुखभूतानि सिद्धवद्भ्रातुरीक्षणात्।

अकर्तृकाणि मे भान्ति कर्ता नाऽन्यो यतः स्थितः ॥ ३८ ॥

“Since Brahmā saw space and other elements, it seems that they are self existent and, that there is no other creator for them. 38

कथं तेषां जगद्धात्रा विना संज्ञापकं तदा। शब्दः प्रवर्तितस्तस्मात्पूर्वं भूतसृतेः कथम् ॥ ३९ ॥

“Then without sound, how these elements named by Brahmā were before their birth? 39

गुरवः प्राहुरत्यन्तशुद्धचित्ता भवादृशाः।

“Tell me what the relation between sound and the body made up of five elements is?

“Oh Compassionate Guru! Nothing other than your words that are like hot rays of the Sun have the power to melt my snow-like doubt. Gurus of your order with extremely pure mind will disclose the secrets to their disciples even without being asked.” 40, 41

इति पृष्टो भार्गवेण दत्तः प्रीतः कृपानिधिः ॥ ४२ ॥

प्राह सूनृतया वाचा सम्बोध्य वदतां वरः। राम बुद्धिमतां श्रेष्ठ प्रश्नस्तेऽति विशारदः ॥ ४३ ॥

Thus asked by Paraśurāma, the pleased and compassionate Dattātreya who is an adept in speech, spoke lovingly. “Oh Rāma! You are the best among the intelligent. Your question is very clever. 42, 43

त्रिधास्थितस्तन्मयाऽग्रे प्रोच्यतेऽवसरे स्फुटम्। न ज्ञातुं शक्यते सद्यस्त्वया तस्मात्स्थिरीभव ॥

“Your question has three aspects. I shall answer you later. It cannot be understood in a hurry. Therefore have patience now. 44

असाम्प्रतस्य श्रवणाद्विनश्येत्कटकारवत्।

“By teaching to a disciple at a wrong time, he gets confounded. Also such a teaching will beget contrary effect. “Inopportune learning leads to destruction like the weaver of mats.” 45

इति श्रुत्वा गरोर्वाक्यं पुनराह भृगूद्वहः ॥ ४६ ॥

स्वामिन् किमुक्तं भवता कटकारः कथंविधः। किं वृत्तं तस्य कस्माद्दे विनष्टस्तु निवेदय ॥

Listening to the words of the Guru, Paraśurāma the best among Bhṛgu Clan, questioned again. “Oh Guru! What is it that you said? Who is this mat weaver? What is his story? Why was he ruined? Please tell me.” 46, 47

एवं पर्यनुयुक्तः सोऽवदद्विद्वच्छिरोमणिः। शृणु राम पुरा वृत्तं कटकारसमाश्रयम् ॥ ४८ ॥

Thus questioned again, Dattātreya who is the most exalted among learned spoke. “Oh Rāma! Listen to the story of the mat-weaver, which happened some time ago.” 48

कृत्वा विचित्रचित्राणि कटानि कुवलाभिधः। राज्ञे निवेदयत्तेन राजा तुष्टः सुशिक्षया ॥ ५० ॥

‘In the city of Yadu in Kalinga land, there was a skilled mat weaver by name Kuvala who was well trained in that work. That Kuvala made mats having many designs and offered them to the king who was pleased by his merit. 49, 50

तस्मै ददौ धनं भूरि तेनाऽऽह्वयः समजायत। धनेन तेन कटकृत् ब्राह्मणाऽऽराधनोद्यतः ॥ ५१ ॥

‘The king gave him much wealth by which he became rich. Having heard about the greatness of the Brahmins by listening to sacred texts, he was spending the money for their worship. Once he was listening to the sacred texts with great interest. 51, 52

तत्राऽध्यात्मविचारस्तु प्रवृत्तस्तेन संश्रुतः। न तद्वेदाऽतिसूक्ष्मत्वात्पुनः पुनरपि श्रुतम् ॥ ५३ ॥

“There he heard about the knowledge regarding the Self. He was not able to grasp that subtle knowledge even after repeated hearing. 53

“The essence of Vedānta is as follows. By keeping away from the cravings of the senses, remaining calm, taking all seen objects to be same as the seer, treating all equally, not discarding what comes to your lot, not aspiring for what you do not get, being contented, being fearless, you shall indeed conduct yourself with detachment.” 57, 58

“Listening to his words, the confounded Kuvala (without proper understanding) started treating the Brahmins as his equals and lost respect for them. Becoming rich he was always enjoying material comforts.

He stopped listening to sacred talks as well as worship of God. Without the fear of sin he turned an atheist and was ruined.' 59 to 61

"Oh Indra! Listen, with interest, to my advice for the fulfilment of the desire of gods. Go soon along with your gods and surrender to the lotus-seated Brahmā who will bless you. He is the all knowing independent Lord of creation. This alone will be for your good and redressal of fear. There is no other means to achieve your wants." 22 to 24

Listening to the words of Br̥haspati, the Guru and accepting his advice and saluting him, Indra the Lord of Śacīdevī along with gods, manes and guhyakas (demi-gods) went to Satyaloka the abode of Brahmā. 25, 26

There Indra reached the outer court of Brahmā, which was hundred yojanas wide and twenty yojanas long, and thirty yojanas high. It was bright with diamond pillars, and by its reflection the brilliance of the gold flooring was enhanced. The marble roofing was mixed with the glow from the flooring. The row of pearls looked variegated by its contact with the three types of light. The eyes of the diamond dolls enclosed in the pillars were shining with marble bits, sapphire-like pupils and attractive eye-lids. 27 to 30

Brahmā's court was filled with fragrance of sandal, musk and the many aromatic powders of Kāśmīr. The door arches were decorated with gems and golden designs. The pillars beautified by plantain and betel stems and nets of flower garlands. It was cooled by a mild breeze. In the centre was the throne of Brahmā which was densely decorated with gems and an umbrella of pearls. All around there were thousands of many types of seats. 31 to 34

तेषु सिद्धा महात्मानः कपिलाद्या महर्षयः । भृग्वाद्याः सनकाद्याश्च योगीन्द्राः सुख्यवस्थिताः ॥

In those were seated the great sages like Kapila, Bhṛgu, Sanaka and other yogis. 35

These sages were being fanned by lovely proud young women with a beauty equalling crores of cupids. As the rays of smile emanating from their faces resembling full moon were falling on the rows of eyes of the carved images on the pillars, the eyes were dripping pure water continuously as if they were the tears of joy produced by seeing the beauty of the court. 36 to 38

There on the throne was the fresh coral-coloured Brahmā with graceful four faces intent on interpreting the Supreme Spirit. The Lord of the heaven saw that grand Brahmā. 39, 40

Even in Satyaloka, Brahmā has assumed two forms for protecting the world. 41

अन्तःसभायां देवेन्द्रमुखानाममृतान्धसाम्। प्रवेशो नास्ति तत्प्रोक्तं जितवद्भिपुसंश्रयम् ॥ ४२ ॥

Devendra and other gods who are given to pleasures having tasted nectar, have no entry into the inner court of Brahmā. Only those who have conquered the cravings of the senses are allowed there. 42

तत्र प्राप्ता न मुह्यन्ति नाऽधो यान्ति कदाचन। कामक्रोधादिभिः नैव परिभूता भवन्ति च ॥

Those who enter the inner court will not be infatuated nor reach lower levels. They will not be slaves to desire, anger and so on. 43

कामक्रोधादियुक्तानां बाह्ये सदसि संस्थितिः। एतदर्थं द्विधा तत्र संस्थितः प्रपितामहः ॥ ४४ ॥

Those with desire, anger and the like can enter only the outer court. Hence Brahmā appears in two forms in Satyaloka. 44

Thereupon, Indra and others standing at the foot of the Himālaya praised Padmā the consort of Hari, near the celestial river Gangā. 1

नमो लक्ष्म्यै महादेव्यै पद्मायै सततं नमः । नमो विष्णुविलासिन्यै पद्मस्थायै नमो नमः ॥ २ ॥

“Salutations to Lakṣmī, to the great Devī, to Padmā, repeated Salutations to Her who pleases Viṣṇu, to Her who is seated on the lotus. 2

Reciting thus the twenty-eight names of Lakṣmī the consort of Hari and the power of Brahmā, Indra and other gods stood there calmly. 7

She was effulgent like the combined lustre of infinite lightnings. She was red-lotus hued. She wore a golden garment. She held in Her four lotus-like hands, four shining hundred-petal lotuses. Her soft lips outdid the ripe cherry fruit. She was surrounded by bees which were attracted by the fragrance in Her mouth. Her eyes which granted elegance to blue lilies extended upto the ears. Her full-moon-like face had the musk mark on the forehead. She was fully embellished with precious gem-set jewels. 9 to 12

Thereupon Indra and other gods saluted with devotion to the direction where the Devī disappeared and returned to their abode with a feeling of accomplishment.

After a lapse of a long time the gods seated in the heavenly court called “Sudharma”, supported by Brhaspati who was listening, addressed Indra who was on his throne. “Oh Lord of Gods! Hear our logical words. The boon which Lakṣmī had granted in the past is not effective anywhere on the earth.

Giving a thought to the words of the gods, Indra bowed to Br̥haspati the Guru and spoke with folded palms. 35

“Oh Guru! Please analyse why we are not successful. The words of the Consort of Hari cannot become false. Then why are human beings not duly worshipping us? There is nothing in the three worlds which is unknown to you. Like Viṣṇu, you really know the mind of everyone. Therefore tell us by what we will achieve good quickly.” 36 to 38

एवं शतक्रतुवचो निशम्याऽऽङ्गिरसो मुनिः । निमीलिताक्षः सुचिरं ध्यात्वोवाच सुरेश्वरम् ॥ ३९ ॥

Hearing the words of Indra, Br̥haspati closed his eyes and meditated for a long time and spoke to the Lord of the gods. 39

Hearing the words of Br̥haspati, the Lord of the heaven went to the banks of the Gaṅgā at the foot of the Himālayan Mountain. There, after bathing in the limpid Gaṅges water he decided to perform penance along with other gods. 43, 44

Meditating on the pair of lotus feet of the beautiful wife of Hari and repeating several times Her twenty-eight names, Indra and other gods did penance, standing on their toes pressing the ground, with arms lifted up, with no support, with air as their food, with concentration, with their body, eyes and mind still, appearing like idols carved in stone. 45 to 47

एवं त्रिसप्तदशके मासेऽतीते भृगूद्वह । उग्रेण तपसा तुष्टा प्रत्यक्षीभवदञ्जसा ॥ ४८ ॥

Thus after a lapse of twenty-one months, Oh Paraśurāma! Devī appeared there pleased by their fierce penance. 48

Hearing the words of gods, The Devī thought to help them and spoke “Oh Powerful Gods! Listen to me. The boon given by me previously is valid now also. Human beings because of certain circumstances are desireless. So what? Let it be so. Even now I will accomplish your request.”

Stating thus, the Devī quickly created a brilliant boy from Her mind and gave him to the gods and spoke to them. "This boy named Kāma (Cupid) is very powerful and he will surely achieve you purpose. With his association, truly the human beings will obey you. Take him with you for achieving your wants". 63 to 65

Then the gods saluted the Devī and proceeded along with Kāma. After reaching the heaven they extended all hospitality to Kāma. Then along with the gods, Indra smilingly addressed him humbly with all praise. "Oh Kāma! You have been created by Devī Rāmā from Her mind for our good. But you are a five-year old lad. Tell me how you will help us achieve our desired goal" 68 to 70

Instead it is a natural phenomenon. Hence tell me what your desire is. Oh Śakra! You will see me accomplishing that in a moment. The impediment to my success is just the time taken by you to tell me that". 71 to 75

“Oh Indra! I have set out to achieve your goal. This is not false. Single handed I will soon conquer human beings and make them obey you.” 1

इत्युक्त्वा धनुरादाय निषङ्गञ्च महत्तरम्। पश्यतां सर्वदेवानां भुवमाक्रान्तवान् रुषा ॥ २ ॥

Saying so, Kāma held his mighty bow and quiver and engulfed with rage the earth as the gods were watching. 2

With a hue of the filaments of a lotus, with eyes like the petals of a lotus, with a face like a lotus, with lips like a cherry fruit, with cheeks illumined by ear rings, with a diamond crown, with a tender body, with long arms, with a waist beautiful with golden robe, with the bow in his left hand and an arrow in his right hand, with curved angry eyebrow Kāma a boy of five years and a joy to onlookers, reached the middle of the earth. 3 to 5

Even Indra, to look at the difficult deed of Kāma, proceeded on his elephant Airāvata holding the thunderbolt. Other gods, Seers, Sages, Vidyādhara and Kinnaras were looking on from the sky above Kāma.

Then Kāma angrily told the group of human beings thus, "Oh Human beings! Listen to my orders. All of you should worship Indra and other gods. If not you will be punished by me."

एतद्वाक्यं समाकर्ण्य जना जहसुरुच्चकैः। नूनं स्तनन्धयः कस्याप्ययं स्यात्क्रीडने रतः ॥ १० ॥

Hearing his words the people laughed loudly and spoke to each other thus: "He is some young boy engaged in childish play".

People who were looking at his beauty exclaimed. "The mother of this lovely, charming and attractive lad is extremely lucky. We have never seen anywhere of anybody on earth a child like him. He may be a son of a king. Such a boy cannot be of human birth."

11, 12

To those people who were thus talking, Kāma surprising the inhabitants of the earth addressed in a loud voice. "Oh Human beings! Do not take me to be an ordinary human boy. I am the son of Devī Lakṣmī. Ordered by Her, I have come to make you all obey the gods. There is no doubt to gods that I will bring you under their control either by conciliation or force. Let me know quickly your views on this."

वशंवदास्तस्य वयं स नः पालयिता प्रभुः। न तवाज्ञां करिष्याम एकाज्ञावशवर्तिनः ॥ २० ॥

Hearing those words the wonder-struck people spoke to him. "Oh Boy! Listen to us. Why should we obey the gods? Why should they not obey us? As we do not need anything from them, they also do not need anything from us. You may go elsewhere. Our lord is the famous Viravrata who is a human being and he stays in Brahmāvarta. We are his obedient citizens and he is our ruler. Being under his lordship we cannot obey your orders."

17 to 20

इत्थं ब्रुवत्सु मर्त्येषु क्रोधारुणितलोचनः। अस्त्रजालेन तान्मर्त्यान् बभन्वाऽद्भुतविक्रमः ॥ २१ ॥

As the people were saying so the most valiant Kāma with red furious eyes bound those human beings by an array of missiles.

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे तत्र कर्णात्कर्णं निशम्य तत्। समागता राष्ट्रपालाः कोटिशः प्रोद्यताऽऽयुषाः ॥ २२ ॥

Meanwhile hearing that news from one another, crores of kings arrived there holding raised weapons.

तान् दृष्ट्वा पुनरेवैषः क्रोधाग्निज्वलिताऽऽकृतिः।

Seeing them, Kāma again with burning fury stood firm by setting an arrow in his bow.

23

Seeing that beautiful boy with marvellous valour, the kings spoke to him with arrogance, "Oh Boy! Do not get destroyed like a moth on your own by getting into contact with the conflagration of our anger. With no gain you are causing grief to your mother by self destruction.

24, 25

Hearing those wounding words, Kāma blind with anger could not see anything. Then soon getting over the angry condition addressed the kings. "It is futile to call boys as young. A boy is not young by virtue of his age. The learned call the weak and the dull as boys. Therefore without delay show your potency and the strength of your missiles. After that I will soon by the power of my missiles put your fame on the ground. Stop your useless talk."

Incited by his words, the kings poured an array of missiles like rain from thick clouds. Those missiles that were falling around Kāma looked like thousands of burning meteors ejected from the full-moon.

Seeing the approaching shower of missiles, Kāma of quick valour standing alone destroyed all the missiles in no time by showering counter-acting missiles. While the weapons of the kings were individually cut into eight pieces, Kāma looked like the Sun freed from the fog of weapons.

Again quickly, Kāma tortured each one of them with three arrows by which only their name was remnant. The earth was spread over with their severed limbs, head, waist and stomachs. A river of hot blood wherein the hair and nerves were like moss, the thousands of fingers were like fishes, the innumerable floating skulls looked like devils, the group of crows resembled the swans, the weapons were like the tides that flowed with high speed, creating massive froth and hundreds of vortices, trembling again and again the hearts of the cowards. 35 to 39

एतदत्यद्भुतं दृष्ट्वा कामस्याऽमोघविक्रमम् ॥ ४० ॥

Meanwhile the messengers having known the destruction of the kingdom, reached Brahmāvarta to report the matter to Viravrata. After entering the capital they told the gate keepers thus "Quickly announce us to the great king. There is a very important work. Let there be no delay." 41 to 43

Hearing that the messengers saluted again and with folded lotus-like hands reported. "Oh Lord! Your fame which is increasing every moment like the moon in the bright half period, has crossed the farthest Lokāloka Mountains. Near Himālaya one boy brilliant like the sun has killed all the kings in a great battle. He has captured all your subordinate rulers. The country is inundated. All alone, that five-year-old lad with eyes and limbs like a lotus, has killed in no time crores of kings. What is to be done further?" 54 to 57

Thus repeatedly requested by the minister, the king thoughtfully

respecting his wise minister reached the court. Then Vardhana made the members of the court, the leaders of fifteen Akṣauhiṇī army, who had gone ahead of the king, to return. After returning to the assembly shining with many diamonds, they took their respective seats along with the king. 63 to 65

Then Vardhana pacified the king and said "Oh Great King! Hear me calmly. Kings who follow the line of justice will be happy. The person who acts after proper analysis is appreciated. Therefore I suggest that the king should discuss thoroughly with the ministers and then act. 66, 67

"The rules of administration speak of strategies like conciliation, bribery, sowing dissension and punishment. If the first one fails then the other methods have to be followed successively. Now by discussing with the ministers the strategy has to be decided. At times of emergency such a consultation is not necessary. But if impediments are seen, discussion is advisable. Hence now you should discuss with the ministers and then proceed." 68 to 70

Hearing those words the king looked at the ministers. Understanding the intention of the king the ministers individually voiced their views. One person recommended conciliation, another was for bribery, yet another the strategy of dissension. The fourth wanted the course of punishment.

The king hearing such various views was silent and then cast his eyes on Vardhana.

Then Vardhana stood up and saluted the king and said "Oh King! The opinion of other ministers based on their individual consideration could be right. But we have to consider the actual situation. When both sides are of equal strength, conciliation suits. When the enemy is stronger, then also conciliation works. Instead if the enemy, being weak takes the help of a stronger group then the strategy of bribery to split them helps. If there is no scope for this, we have to adopt the method of dissension with the help of tactful persons. If such persons are not there then the first two strategies i.e., conciliation and bribery, should be used. The fourth method should be adopted if the other three methods cannot be utilised. A king who adopts punishment where conciliation is possible meets with trouble and spoils his own success. In reality, since Kāma is not fighting for his gain the first two strategies will be of no use. Again because Kāma is fighting all alone, the third strategy of dissension has no place. Hence we have to resort to the fourth path of punishment. If so, we have to think about the consequences. Otherwise we will perish. Thinking that Kāma is only a five-year old boy, all the kings were defeated by him. Moreover he is battling for the good of the gods. That carries serious consequences. We could have bribed him if he wanted to conquer the kingdom. Since this is not possible, using our force is the remaining alternative. We should remember that, single handed he has destroyed crores of mighty kings which means he has divine strength and he does not expect any gain from mortals. Therefore, Oh King! Serve and worship your family deity the great God Mahādeva who wields the Pināka bow and achieve your desires through His grace. I cannot think of any other plan. Kings would like to fight with enemies of lower strength.

Then the king handing over the administration to the ministers decided to perform penance on the solitary banks of a river in an auspicious forest. 1

Thus the king living on only water, served Maheshvara for five days with total involvement. Then the next three days without food, without support, with arms lifted, with control on senses and mind, he meditated on the lotus feet of Śiva and became unaware of external and internal happenings. In the evening of the eighth day the Universal Lord appeared to fulfil the desire of His devotee. 3 to 5

The quartz crystal-coloured Lord Śiva was seated on a saddle spread with soft deer-skin and decorated with varieties of colourful fresh gems and bunches of pearls, fitted on the shoulder of the bull which was like the autumnal clouds. He was shining with locks of matted hair and the crescent moon on it. Three-eyed, with snakes as earrings, with five faces like fully blossomed lotuses, with a pleasing moon-like face, with His cheeks brightened by the gems on the hoods of the serpents worn on his ears, wielding in His four hands the trident, the skull, the deer and the axe, with a serpent as His sacred thread, with garlands of Rudrākṣa beads, wrapped in tiger skin, with elephant's skin as upper covering, beautifully decorated with serpents as ornaments, with Rudrāñī seated on His charming left thigh, looking like an ocean of mercy, besmeared with ash all over His body, surrounded by attendants reciting the Śata-rudra hymns, He the Great God, the Supreme, appeared before the king.

Lord Śiva seeing the king immersed in meditation addressed him sweetly with compassion.

Then by the uproar of the attendants of Śiva, the king became extrovert and opened his eyes. In front of him, he saw Mahādeva with Devī Ambikā and His retinue. With folded hands on his head he fell prostrate on the ground. He was elated by the festive joy arising out of the sight of Śiva. His chest got wet with the flood of tears of joy. He again and again saluted Śiva and began praising Him.

“Oh Śāṅkara! Oh Ocean of Compassion! Protector of devotees! Protector of the Universe! Punisher of the wicked! Your lotus feet is out of reach even for the great gods. Today I am seeing Your highly rewarding lotus feet with my pure eyes. Oh Lord of the Universe! Hence there is no one other than me on this earth who is more blessed. 19

Then Śiva the Lord alighted along with Gaurī from the bull and went near the king and touched his head and spoke beautiful loving words.

Listening to those words of Lord Śiva, the king who was stupefied by asceticism having seen the feet of Śiva got up with folded palms and said. “Oh Mahādeva! If You wish to grant me now my favorite boon then uproot my worldly involvement. I do not desire in the least any thing else but serving Your feet. If You are filled with mercy towards me, take me towards You.”

Hearing the words of the king, Śambhu spoke smilingly, "My Child! You will reach My abode in the end. But now you go and conquer the unassailable Kāma. Perhaps there is no one other than Me on earth or in heaven who has vanquished him. Therefore righteously protect your subjects by defeating Kāma." 30, 31

Hearing the words of Śaṅkara, the king fell prostrate on the ground and said to the Great Lord Maheśa, "Oh Lord! I do not want what You have told me. Bless me with the great opportunity to serve Your feet. Let me not be the lord of the three worlds. Emperorship need not be mentioned. Oh God! You told me that You will grant my wants. How can you change those words? I do not want victory over my enemy. If I do not get a place near You, I will continue my penance instead of obtaining worthless boons." 32 to 35

Hearing the words of the king, Maheśvara spoke again. "Oh King! Listen. To begin with you did penance to conquer Kāma. Hence it will not go waste. If earlier you had done Tapas to get to My abode you would have got that result first. Your contemplation would not be purposeless. Therefore what I have said will not fail to yield result. So go and win Kāma in the battle and become the emperor. At the termination of your life you will understand Me and reach Me. By My grace your mind will be free from ignorance." After saying so Śambhu disappeared while the king was looking on. 36 to 40

Then the king saluting Mahādeva with devotion became verily purified internally by respecting the orders of Śiva. Meanwhile Kāma after capturing all the residents of the earth came to Brahmāvarta. There the people who were standing outside, seeing the lad Kāma who was submerged in a mass of beauty, fixed their sight on him forgetting their houses and themselves. Carried away by the beauty of his different limbs on which they had focused, the people stood like lifeless wooden dolls.

Hearing the most astonishing words of Kāma and seeing him as the same boy with extremely fearful valour about whom they had heard before, all the citizens started running away wailing and calling their sons, mothers, brothers, and friends. Their cry "Run away; Go away" was heard every where. Hearing that spreading cry, all the citizens including women, children and aged persons ran helter-skelter warning one another. Thus in a moment, that city looked like an ocean breaching its shores. By the uproar of the people the city was shaken. In thousands the guards of the fort, the warriors, the army chiefs raising their arms with weapons got on to their carriages. 47 to 51 and said. "Oh Vardhana! Hear me. I have sent the army and its leaders to obstruct Kāma. The doors are guarded. In all corners troops are deployed. All citizens who were running away have been brought back. From here I am going to bring Śatruñjaya and other sons of the king and led by them I will quickly go to the battle field." 57 to 60

एवं वदति तत्काले सुधृती राजपुत्रकाः । सहिताः स्वस्वसेनाभिर्निर्जगामुरमितौजसाः ॥ ६१ ॥

As Sudhṛti was saying thus, the sons of the king who were extremely brilliant set out along with their respective armies. 61

Listening to and receiving well the words of the king's son, Vardhana the best among speakers spoke aptly at that time. "Oh fortunate son of the King! Proceed to the battle along with the army. By your grace there will not be any lapse in duty in the city as long as I am alive. Also be informed that preparation for war has been done. You should also, by the help of the soldiers, fight carefully." 67 to 70

Then the people made loud victorious proclamations that reached the sky. The roaring warriors, the conch-blowing soldiers, the players on kettle-drums, big drums, and trumpets proceeded by surrounding the sons of the king. The neighing of the horses, the loud sound from valiants, the cry of the elephants, the sounds from chariots, the vibrations from bow strings, the sounds from the clapping on shoulders and uproars were jointly splitting the sky. Then the mighty army which was like a swelling ocean proceeded from the city gate, breaking the hearts of the pusillanimous, created another ocean in the middle of the earth.

Then Sudhṛti divided that huge army strategically. He positioned the king's son Śatruñjaya at the centre along with ten Akṣauhiṇī army. In the front he himself sitting on an elephant took position along with twenty Akṣauhiṇī army surrounded by army leaders. To his left he positioned Śatruhaṇa along with twenty Akṣauhiṇī army. Similarly to his right he positioned Bhīma along with twenty Akṣauhiṇī army. At the back Samaratāpana was placed along with twenty Akṣauhiṇī army.

There were as many soldiers with spears and discuses on the left as with maces on the right. Sudhṛti thus dividing the army and informing the king's son, was in the front on an elephant. Taking along with him the huge army he moved towards Kāma.

At that time Nārada came in front of Indra, who was seated on Irāvata. Indra saw him, who was bright like a silver mountain wearing deer skin, besmeared with ashes, who was in the sky like an autumnal cloud with negligible water, who came there with the speed of the wind to shower the rain of news and to see the battle of Kāma. Then Indra alighted from the elephant and duly worshipped him by touching his feet and stood in front of him. Then Nārada addressed Indra. 8 to 12

“Oh Indra! Are you seeing the huge well-prepared army of the king, which is like an endless ocean. How can Kāma all alone achieve your desired goal? Even though it is extremely difficult, it will be possible for him by the power of Devī Lakṣmī. We should not count valour based on appearance, because valour is a property of the seed. A stone at the base of a banyan tree, even if it is big cannot sprout branches and leaves. Even then the army of the king is countless and Kāma is alone. It looks incongruous. Therefore go with your group and support Kāma and please Kāma as well as goddess Lakṣmī. Otherwise Śrī Lakṣmī the Universal Mother, would be angry with you for your negligence.

Then listening to the good words of Nārada, Indra thinking that to be right decided to proceed. Then saluting the divine sage he reached Kāma along with the heavenly army, Maruts and others. 18, 19

Seeing the arrival of Indra along with the gods, Kāma was happy and felt revered and spoke to Indra. "Oh Indra! See the huge ocean-like army which causes fear in the hearts of the weak; which is decorated with varieties of flags that are fluttering in front of speeding chariots; which has elephants like blue mountains with streams of ichor covered with red blankets and mountain born metals, with horses looking like shining waves and which is entirely surrounding. 20 to 23

Hearing his words Kāma with furious red eyes said. "Oh Indra! I have never uttered a lie before. In front of your eyes I will destroy this army in half-a-minute. Have no doubt. I am speaking the truth. Oh Lord of gods! The delay will be as much as the time taken by the army to come near me." 26 to 28

Meanwhile the army had reached near Kāma. Seeing that huge army Kāma holding his twanged bow moved forward. As soon as Kāma proceeded, Indra with other gods covered Kāma all-round and went in front to fight in that great land. 30, 31

When the two armies came face to face there arose a great sound caused by the instruments like drums, horns, trumpets, conches that were employed in war. The roaring of soldiers mixed with the sound from the axle of the chariots was mutually frightening. The two armies started firing missiles at each other. 32 to 34

The fight was systematic between men and gods where the charioteers, those on elephants, the horse riders, soldiers on foot, those with bows, mace, sword, spears, missiles, axe, rods, tridents fought with opposing warriors who had similar carriages and weapons. 37 to 40

A righteous war went on for a while steadily with no anxiety, mutually desiring victory. Looking for a weak moment in the enemy some were dropping their weapons in between. Then the war turned noisy, fearful and horripilating. 41, 42

Then the army of gods, which faced the forefront of Sudhṛti's army, was destroyed. Their legs, heads, hands, sides, eyes, ears and noses were chopped off. The group of gods losing their lives fell on the ground. Some were totally dead and some almost dead. A few others fell unconscious. Some others out of fear pretended to be dead with their eyes closed, controlling their breath with difficulty. They were not casting even a side glance at the strong enemy standing far away and they breathed slowly. 54 to 57 and again floundering and floating were trying to swim across Some desirous of living caught hold of dead elephants as if an island and sailed afar. Some crossed by holding on to a chariot's wheel Some others crossed the river of blood with the help of horses and chariots.

Having said that, he approached the group of Vasus and spoke.
 "Shame on you who are chasing and attacking with weapons the weak and the discouraged. Enough of that. Look at me who is in front of you. Chasing the coward is reprobated by the strong. Show me quickly your strength which I will see. Then I will soon make you happy by my valour every day."

Hearing the words uttered by Raṇadhīra, the Vasus simultaneously surrounded him like a flower by the bees. Even then Raṇadhīra who was amidst the Vasus seated in his chariot was firm like the Meru mountain surrounded by smaller mountains.
 74, 75

अथ तं शरवर्षेण ववर्षुः वसवोऽभितः। तथा मुसलशक्त्यृष्टिकुन्तभत्ताऽसिवृष्टिभिः ॥ ७६ ॥

Then the Vasus showered arrows on him from all directions. Similarly they showered clubs, spears, double edged swords, barbed darts, arrows and swords on him.

Then with a sharp sword he wounded the Vasus in their chest. The Vasus were in great trouble with their flags, horses and charioteers destroyed and they fell on the ground unconscious like uprooted trees. Seeing the defeated Vasus, loud lamentation arose in the army of gods. In the army of men shouts of victory were heard. 85, 86

Seeing him Raṇadhīra angrily chided him. "I know you as the son of Śacī and not as the son of Indra, because like a woman you attacked me from the back. Such a mean act is done by cowards. You think that you are manly, but you are driven out of the warrior group. Shame on you the uncultured son of a disloyal mother. Do not needlessly cause grief to Śacī, or if you are interested in battle, then stand firmly before me. I will despatch you in half-a-minute to the abode of Yama." Then Jayanta angrily flung his mace saying "Oh Raṇadhīra, you are dead". Raṇadhīra jumped and caught that mace. 8

Holding that mace Raṇadhīra said "Oh son of Indra! Well done. You are strong. There is no doubt that I am dead. But the dead one will kill you."

When Jayanta's second bow also was destroyed, Raṇadhīra, violently holding the sword in his right hand quickly sprang and instantly dislodged the crown of Jayanta and held his tuft and dragged him like Garuḍa dragging the king of serpents. 11, 12

When Raṇadhīra raised his sword to behead Jayanta, Agni knowing that Jayanta was in danger, struck with all his might and fury the right hand of Raṇadhīra with a bolt when the gods were wailing. 13, 14

The sword of Raṇadhīra dropped on the ground from his right hand which was hit by the bolt. He grew angry by this failure and kicked Jayanta who fell unconscious. Then holding the neck of Agni with his left hand, hit him on his head with his hard right hand fist by which Agni dropped on the ground. 15 to 17

At that time Indra came there to protect his son. Seeing Indra seated on Airāvata, Raṇadhīra jumped up and angrily dislodged his crown by slapping him. Then Indra feeling disgraced by the loss of his crown hit Raṇadhīra on his thigh with his Vajrāyudha by which Raṇadhīra fell deeply unconscious on the ground. 18 to 20

Seeing the condition of the son of the army-chief Bhīma ordered his charioteer to go near Raṇadhīra. On his instructions the charioteer went near Raṇadhīra immediately and Bhīma got down from the chariot and placed Raṇadhīra on the chariot. Then Bhīma himself, to oppose Indra, picked up his shining gem-studded iron mace which could destroy the enemies and jumped and struck Indra on his head with great force. Struck by the mace Indra with injured head fell unconscious on the back of the elephant like a cut-off tree. 21 to 25

Then Bhīma battled with Vāyu using his raised bow and missiles. The grey-coloured Vāyu seated in his well-equipped chariot drawn by deers and wielding weapons like a rope and a goad, showered with anger, sharp arrows on Bhīma. 38, 39

Seeing the defeat of Vāyu and understanding that Bhīma is invincible, Kubera, Varuṇa, Yama, Indra, the king of Gandharvas arrived simultaneously at the battle field. Indra seated on Airāvata, Yama on his Bison, Varuṇa on Fish, Kubera on a man, the Gandharva king on a horse, each wielding varieties of weapons came with a common agreement to fight Bhīma. 48 to 50

Śatruñjaya faced Kubera, Śatruhā faced Varuṇa, Bhīma faced Gandharvarāja, Samaratāpana faced Yama, Vīravikrama the son of Śatruñjaya faced Vāyu, Vīrasena the son of Śatrughna faced Agni, Vīrabhānu the son of Bhīma faced Jayanta, Vīrāgraga the son of Samaratāpana faced Vasus. Thus they expecting to win, fought a wonderful war, which made the hearts of the cowards to tremble. 55 to 58

The horripilating war went on for a muhūrta (48 minutes). Citrasena riding on a horse struck Bhīma with three arrows and broke his bow in the middle by a mighty arrow. Then Bhīma hurled a pad-bolt at the Gandharva Lord. The skilled Citrasena cut off with a sharp arrow that weapon which was approaching him and with four feathered arrows killed the four horses of Bhīma and with another arrow destroyed the crown of the charioteer and killed him and roared like a lion. 1 to 4

Losing his horse and chariot, Bhīma burning with anger gave a hard blow with a mace to Citrasena's horse. Hit by the mace the horse bleeding with its head split, died after touching Citrasena who had fallen down from the horse. 5, 6

Understanding that Bhīma was strong, Citrasena disappeared and created a perplexing magic that showered stones, weapons, serpents, evil spirits, heaps of skulls, blood, embers and whirl-wind on Bhīma wherever he has moving. 7, 8

Bhīma saw Citrasena rushing towards him. Just as Śiva hit Andhakāsura with his trident, Bhīma with the mace hit Citrasena on his head. Thus Citrasena fell on the ground as if dead and was carried away by a gandharva to save his life. 11, 12

Vīrāgraga directed weapons and missiles towards Vasus. The Vasus also showered arrows in the battle field. But Vīrāgraga pushing away those arrows, shot three feathered arrows at each of the Vasus hitting their legs, chest and head respectively. 13, 14

The wounded and enraged Vasus simultaneously with all their might shot arrows that filled the war field. Then Vīrāgraga wounded their chest with sharp speedy arrows stretched up to the ears. Injured by the mighty arrows all the Vasus fell unconscious. But Sāvitra using three arrows broke to pieces in a short-time the chariot, charioteer and horses of Vīrāgraga. 15 to 18

Viravikrama fought fiercely with Vāyu by showering arrows and roaring like a lion. Destroying, immediately that rain of arrows by counter arrows, Vāyu hit Viravikrama in his chest with a huge goad. Beaten by the goad, his chest was split and bled and he trembled for a moment and with roving eyes fell unconscious. Again gaining consciousness he pulled out with great effort the goad that had gone into his chest and hit Vāyu with it.

Sātruñjaya intensely battled with Kubera. Sātruñjaya was seated in a chariot. Kubera was on a human being. Both skilled in handling missiles and experts in archery displayed mutually their skills and fought for a long time. Then Sātruñjaya spoke to Kubera.

Enraged by the words of Kubera, Śatruñjaya hit with his raised mace the human being, the carriage of Kubera. Struck by the mace he fell down unconscious. Then he severely pounded the diamond hard mace on Kubera's head by which Kubera lost his consciousness for a moment. Meanwhile the strong Śatruñjaya snatched Kubera's bow and broke it. 42 to 44

After gaining consciousness and seeing his broken bow Kubera with angry red eyes picked up his mace. Then Śatruñjaya said "Oh friend! Listen to me. There is no one on earth who is equal to me in mace fight. I will tell you what my teacher of weapons had told me After giving me exceptional training in mace fight he said that there is no match for me in this world and if I defeat Kubera it would be great. Today I have got a chance to see your mace and fight with you the lord of riches. Show me your extraordinary strength in mace fight. 45 to 50

Both Śatruñjaya and Kubera were well trained and skilled in mace fight. Both were strong and haughty like lions. They both revolved in a circle sometimes moving to the left and then to the right, sometimes unevenly, half evenly, half unevenly, straight, equally bent, half bent, jumping, half jumping, unevenly jumping, flying, half flying, leaping, swan walking. Thus both of them, experts in the movements, exhibited all types of strategies adopted in mace-war. Waiting for a chance to hit each other they appreciated mutually because of their knowledge about starting movements. Like brisk balls their movement was not noticeable.

The Siddhas and Cāraṇas who were watching their mace-fight, exclaimed "Oh, what a great fight!" and appreciated their skill through gestures. After fighting for a long time with Śatruñjaya, Kubera opined that Śatruñjaya was superior to him in mace fighting. 58, 59

Then Kubera flew in the air and raised his mace to hit. Seeing that Śatruñjaya tricked away from that unfailing Kubera. 60

Knowing that Kubera unrighteously hit Śatruñjaya on his back by which Śatruñjaya became unconscious for a moment. Then gaining awareness, he with furious red eyes addressed Kubera "Shame on you, Oh Kubera! You are uncultured, inauspicious and unrighteous by hitting me like a rākṣasa. Being on the right path I cannot fight you with the mace. Mace-fight which like the Yogic path, has many rules and regulations, is commended as the best among fights. Watch me, I will immediately compensate for your action." Saying thus, he placed his iron mace on the ground. 61 to 65

Then crores and crores of Yakṣas attacked Śatruñjaya, with weapons in their hands to release their king. 68

Then Śatruñjaya quickly destroyed all of them with his mace just as the Sun, the group of devils. Then he carried Kubera and moved away. Hearing this, Pulastya came there and addressed him sweetly by calling him "Oh child! You have won Kubera by your strength in the war. Give me my grandson who is lovable and dear to me. Vīravrata will give the brahmins whatever they ask from him. Then how you his son will not give him when I have asked for? 69 to 72

In the same manner Vīrabhānu fought with Jayanta. Both of them well versed in war-weapons fought for a long time and surprised every one by exhibiting their skills. In the sword-fight Jayanta was hit on his head by the strong Vīrabhānu and fell in the chariot. Seeing that his charioteer took away Jayanta. 74 to 76

Śatruhā after fighting very well for a long time with Varuṇa, injured him in his chest by three well-sharpened arrows. The angry Varuṇa who was thus hurt killed with four sharp arrows the horses of Śatruhā. Then he destroyed the flag of Śatruhā with one arrow and his charioteer with another and hit Śatruhā in his chest with a deep drawn arrow. 79 to 81

Śatruhā who lost his flag, horses and the charioteer, hit with great fury Varuṇa's crocodile on its head with a sharp arrow. He broke Varuṇa's bow with another arrow and his crown with a different one. Then he injured Varuṇa in his temple with a long stretched arrow. 82, 83

Then Varuṇa, after destroying with sharp arrows the charioteer, the horses and the bow of Samaratāpana, went away with great speed. Samaratāpana holding a sword pursued him and hit Varuṇa on his head with that sharp sword. With that blow, Varuṇa with his head split, fell unconscious on the ground like a mountain with its wings chopped off. 89 to 91

While Samaratāpana was binding Varuṇa and taking him away, Yama looking like a chopped black mountain riding on his great Bison and surrounded by lieutenants of death, diseases and servants with ugly faces and limbs came there. People seeing that dreadful Yama along with his frightening group would die out of fear. 92 to 94

After driving away the group of Yama with the fire-missile, as he was trying to return, thousands of the guardians of diseases enveloped to kill Samaratāpana. Then Samaratāpana thought that no other missile than the Nāmatraya-missile would be of use and discharged that against the diseases, by which all the diseases were totally destroyed in a moment just as the clouds by a strong wind. 103 to 105

सुधृतिं प्राप्य समरे गजसंस्थं पुरन्दरः । चिरं युद्धं समकरोत्तुमुलं रोमहर्षणम् ॥ १ ॥

Approaching Sudhṛti who was riding an elephant, Indra fought a long-drawn, raging and horripilating war. 1

सुधृतेर्युद्धसारत्वं सुधृतित्वं निशाम्य तु । शतक्रतुर्विस्मितोऽभूत् युद्ध्यमानो रणाऽजिरे ॥ २ ॥

Seeing the bravery and skill of Sudhṛti in war, Indra was surprised. 2

शतक्रतुः शितशतघाराभिः सुधृतिं तदा । ववर्ष तोयद इव मेरुशृङ्गं सुवृष्टिभिः ॥ ३ ॥

Then Indra showered Sudhṛti with hundred sharp arrows just as the clouds rain on the peak of Meru. 3

शतक्रतुशराऽऽसारसञ्चन्नः सुधृतिस्तदा ।

न दिशो नाऽपि चाऽऽकाशं भुवं वा पश्यति क्वचित् ॥ ४ ॥

Covered by the cloud of arrows Sudhṛti could not see the directions, nor the sky, nor the ground. 4

एवमिन्द्रशराऽघौघच्छन्नं सुधृतिपूषणम् । हाहेति चुक्रुशुर्दृष्ट्वा मर्त्यसेनाः समन्ततः ॥ ५ ॥

Witnessing thus the Sun named Sudhṛti concealed by the cloud of Indra's arrows, the entire soldiers cried in consternation. 5

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे शक्रशरवृष्टिं महाऽस्त्रतः । विनाश्य निर्ययौ सूर्य इव जीमूतमण्डलात् ॥ ६ ॥

At that time destroying the shower of Indra's arrows by a mighty missile, Sudhṛti emerged like Sun out of the group of clouds. 6

अथ सायकवृष्ट्याऽऽशु देवेशं समवाऽकिरत् । तीक्ष्णनाराचजालेन विव्याध च शचीपतिम् ॥ ७ ॥

Then he enveloped Indra by a rain of arrows and injured him with a bunch of sharp arrows. 7

इन्द्रोऽपि तावदेवाऽऽशु शरजालं समन्ततः । चिच्छेदाऽस्त्रेण महता वायुनेवाऽध्रमण्डलम् ॥ ८ ॥

Indra too immediately ruined the entire web of arrows by a powerful missile just as clouds by the wind. 8

एवं कृतप्रतिकृतं निरीक्षन्तौ परस्परम् । संश्लाघन्तौ च सुधृतिदेवेन्द्री लाघवं बलम् ॥ ९ ॥

Thus Sudhṛti and Indra anticipating mutual retaliation were eulogising their strengths and weakness. 9

तन्मध्ये सुधृतिः शीघ्रहस्तस्तीक्ष्णैः शरैस्त्रिभिः । धनुर्निषङ्गं मुकुटं चिच्छेद युगपदद्भुतम् ॥ १० ॥

Meanwhile Sudhṛti who was quick in action cut off simultaneously with three sharp arrows the bow, quiver and the crown of Indra. 10

अथेन्द्रः शेखरध्वंशात् क्रुद्धः प्रस्फुरिताऽधरः । दधाराऽन्यत्किरीटाग्रं विश्वकर्मविनिर्मितम् ॥ ११ ॥

तावत्तदपि वेगेन चकर्त सुधृतिः शरैः । पुनरन्यद्विश्वकर्मदत्तं मूर्धन्याऽभिधारयत् ॥ १२ ॥

तावत्तदपि चिच्छेद भूयोऽन्यान्यपि भार्गवः । किरीटानां शतं चैकं सुधृतिर्लघुविक्रमः ॥ १३ ॥

चिच्छेदैवं तदा देवराजो लज्जाऽनताऽऽननः ।

क्रोधाऽग्निना प्रज्वलित ऐन्द्राऽस्त्रं समवाऽसृजत् ॥ १४ ॥

Then Indra, whose lips were throbbing with anger, put on another crown made by Viśvakarma. Then Sudhṛti quickly cut off that too with arrows. Again Indra wore on his head yet another crown given by Viśvakarma. Even that crown and again many, totaling to a hundred and one crowns were shattered by the extremely powerful Sudhṛti who hailed from the clan of Bhṛgu Maharṣi. Thereupon with lowered face out of shame, Indra burning with the flame of anger discharged the Indrāstra. 11 to 14

सुधृतिस्तरसा तच्च वायव्यास्त्रेण नाशयत् । तथा दीर्घेण भल्लेन प्राहरच्चेन्द्रवाहनम् ॥ १५ ॥

Then quickly Sudhṛti destroyed that by Vāyavyāstra and pierced Indra's elephant with a long spear. 15

हतो भल्लेन देवेन्द्रगजः कुम्भान्तरे दृढम् । क्रुद्धः सुधृतिहस्तस्थं चापमाच्छिद्य सत्वरम् ॥ १६ ॥

तावद्वज्रेणाऽभिहतो ममार सुधृतेर्गजः ।

Massively hit on its temple by the spear, Indra's elephant furiously snatched the bow from Sudhṛti's hands and broke it with its foot. Then the elephant was praised thus "Well-done, well-done" by the gods for its wonderful deed. While the elephant was trying to catch Sudhṛti by its trunk, Sudhṛti threw a huge iron goad at it which was smashed by that huge elephant. Indra too wearing a crown discharged a pad-bolt at Sudhṛti's elephant. Hit by that, Sudhṛti's elephant angrily ran towards Indra carrying a pounding weapon in its trunk and was killed, hit by Indra's thunderbolt. 16 to 20

ततः स्थन्दनमास्थाय सुधृतिर्लघुविक्रमः ॥ २१ ॥

पुनरैरावतं चाऽपि त्रिभिः सङ्गन्धिवान् शरैः ।

Then riding on a chariot the mighty Sudhṛti struck Indra on his head with three sharp arrows from which he swooned for a while. Sudhṛti injured again Airāvata with three arrows. 21, 22

इन्द्रोऽपि मूर्च्छानिर्मुक्तः शक्तिं तावत्समाक्षिपत् ॥ २३ ॥

नवघण्टां सुरुचिरां दीप्तामशनिसन्निभाम् ।

Rising out of unconsciousness Indra released a Śakti which carried nine beautiful bells and was like a thunderbolt. 23

Looking at that unfailing Śakti speeding towards him, Sudhṛti holding his mace quickly jumped up from his chariot like Garuḍa. At the same time Indra's Śakti-weapon reached Sudhṛti's chariot and reduced to ashes the charioteer, the horses, the flag and the weapons. 24, 25

Then the strong Sudhṛti with red angry eyes swirling his iron-mace severely hit Airāvata on its head by which it fell on the ground vomiting foamy blood. Then Indra with his thunderbolt came running towards Sudhṛti and Sudhṛti with his mace punched the right shoulder of Indra by which Indra swooned and his thunderbolt slipped away from his hand.

Immediately when Sudhṛti was trying to carry away Indra, all the gods wielding many kinds of weapons quickly surrounded Sudhṛti. Then Sudhṛti being brave held with his left hand Indra and with the mace in his right hand drove away the gods.

Then Virasena said to Śatruñjaya, "Oh Uncle! Did you see the gods trying to kill Sudhṛti who is carrying the bound Indra and is fighting all alone in the war. This is not the time to delay." Speaking thus he directed his chariot towards Sudhṛti.

Listening to the utterances of Virasena, Śatruñjaya and others attacked Indra's army by pouring weapons on them.

Then a ruthless fierce war ensued between gods and humans thronged with weapons. In the process of attacking each other with mighty weapons like the sword, the trident, the spear, the mace, the disc, the axe, the missile, the pad-lock, the iron-club and the arrow, the heads and limbs of the host of soldiers dropped like ripe palm fruits by the wind. A dense darkness set in because the constellation was covered by the dust generated by the chariots, by the feet of the horses, the elephants and the soldiers. Then none could recognise each other and the skilled continued to fight following the sounds. Some fell down from horses, some from elephants and many horses and soldiers were trampled upon by elephants. The blood emerging from such a pounding by the weapons flowed all over as if from a machine and thereafter the dust subsided like after rain.

By that intense combat was generated a terrific river of blood full of froth and vortices that flowed with great speed. Like a great river joined by its tributaries the huge river of blood along with its smaller streams, had dead elephants as islands obstructing its flow, was infested with eagles, crows and swans, had long hair and veins as its mosses, had the trunk of elephants as crocodiles, had the shields as tortoises, had the limbs of soldiers as sharks, had the fingers of the dead as small fishes and was gushing creating tremor in the hearts of the cowards. 47 to 50 entered the army of gods and tormented them and reached their army chief Sudhṛti who had bound Indra. They were surprised to see Sudhṛti who was holding in his left arm the bound Indra and fighting with his mace in his right hand. Praising him saying "Well done. You are worthy of praise in war", the sons of the king arrogantly punished the army of gods.

When such a war was going on between gods and humans, Śatruñjaya and the children of the king and their children too who were brave

Unable to withstand the blows, the gods discarding their weapons ran away crying in dismay. Then Kubera, Varuṇa, Yama and Citrasena supported by Vāyu, Moon and others jointly fought for a long time but were defeated and bound by the sons of the king. Śatruñjaya captured Kubera, Śatruha caught Varuṇa, Bhīma bound Citrasena and Samaratāpana arrested Yama. Virasena took Jayanta into custody and Virabhānu captured Vāyu. The Vasus were held by Virāgraga and Viravikrama caught the Moon. Taking all the gods including Indra into custody they started taking them away.

When Indra and others were being taken away under custody, Kāma prevented the kings by pulling his sacred bow. 1

Some gods ran away and some others had fallen down. The wives of the gods and Gandharvas yelled with fear since Indra and other prominent gods were captured. Then Kāma pulling his bow stopped the human beings and enveloped them by raining arrows and weapons 2, 3

Then Sudhṛti and others putting aside the bound gods, jointly fought with the powerful Kāma. The five-year young Kāma, skilled in weapons opposed alone all of them which caused wonder. 4, 5

The humans, gods and others were extremely astonished Kāma using arrows with sharp bright tips destroyed one by one all the weapons and missiles of the opponents. Thus beaten Sudhṛti and others riding separate chariots again fought with Kāma with all their might

Simultaneously they discharged sharp arrows at Kāma and Kāma destroyed each one of them midway by means of arrows. 6 to 9

Witnessing the great valour of Kāma, Sudhṛti said "Oh, Sons of the king! Listen. Vardhana had earlier said that this boy had killed crores of kings and that he must be having divine power. We are today seeing the truth in that statement through Kāma's strength that single-handed he has hindered all of us of immense power. If our Lord and King Vīravrata does not return from his penance even now, we will be unable to conquer Kāma without him. If our king after getting the grace of Mahādeva does not join us, Kāma will surely defeat us soon. 10 to 14

As Sudhṛti the chief of the army was speaking thus, the quick Kāma immediately cut off his weapons by a sharp arrow and injured him in his chest by another feathered arrow. Pierced in his heart Sudhṛti fell unconscious on the ground like a tree whose root is cut. Then Kāma of unconquerable war skills rendered unconscious Śatruñjaya, Śatruhaṇa, Bhīma and Samaratāpana, by hurting their vital organs with sharp poisonous arrows. 15 to 18

Hurt and shattered by the arrows of Kāma, they, without weapon and consciousness totally embraced the ground like a lover his fiancée and were unaware of in and out. 19

Vīravikrama and others and the sons of Śatruñjaya and others, seeing the condition of their fathers, overwhelmed by sorrow started wailing thus "Oh father! Where have you gone leaving us helpless. What shall we say to your father who will also die being unable to withstand your separation even for a minute?"

20 to 22

Seeing their misery Raṇadhīra the son of Sudhṛti said "Listen to me with confidence. This is the time to show our strength and not sorrow. Depression destroys our valour and the enemy will win over all of us. A soldier should fight till his death. Hence renouncing sorrow let us fight our best. Let Virasena go from here to report to the king. Seeing your sad state the soldiers will disperse screaming with fear, discarding their weapons. Turn your mind away from grief by embracing courage."

23 to 27

निशम्यैवं सुधृतिजवाक्यं धैर्यं समाश्रिताः । युद्धाय निर्ययुः सर्वे वीरविक्रममुख्याः ॥ २८ ॥

Hearing the words of the son of Sudhṛti, Vīravikrama and others gained courage and proceeded to battle.

After Virasena left for reporting to the king, the children of Śatruñjaya and other faced Kāma. Then all the gods seeing the defeat of human beings by Kāma, boldly approached to set free Indra and others.

Then Raṇadhīra prevented all the gods by raining arrows on them and invited all the human soldiers who were running away. He said "Oh brave soldiers, your unworthy receding is not proper and you will face heinous hell being ungrateful to your king. Sacrificing your life is the way to clear your debt to the king. Even your wives will not accept you who have fled from war. Do not take to life-saving which ruins you here and hereafter. So be brave and return soon, return soon." Hearing Raṇadhīra, the soldiers returned.

31 to 35

पुनः समभवद्युद्धं देवमानवसेनयोः । मुहूर्तमात्रमभवद्रणः परमदारुणः ॥ ३६ ॥

Again the fight between men and gods resumed and went on cruelly for a muhūrta (48 minutes).

36

तदन्तरे तु मनुजान् कामः सायकवृष्टिभिः । विधमन्मारुत इव मेघवृन्दं नभस्थले ॥ ३७ ॥

In between Kāma by a rain of arrows blew off the human army like the clouds in the sky by a wind.

37

Hit by the rain of arrows of Kāma the human soldiers were unable to stand before him like clouds before the wind.

38

तदन्तरे सुधृतिजः शत्रुञ्जयसुतं बली । प्राह तत्कालसदृशं रणधीरो महाधृतिः ॥ ३९ ॥

Then Raṇadhīra the valiant and highly intelligent son of Sudhṛti spoke suitably to the son of Śatruñjaya.

“Oh Son of the king! Along with your brothers and the army, safeguard the gods and the manes from the army of gods. See my strength, fighting with Kāma.” Speaking thus and twanging his bow he went in a chariot to Kāma pouring arrows on him. 40, 41

Then Kāma warding off that down-pour of arrows by opposing arrows, shot highly sharp arrows at Raṇadhīra. Before those arrows could reach him, Raṇadhīra destroyed them midway employing three arrows and by another mighty arrow injured Manmatha's fist by which the bow of Kāma dropped from his hand. Seeing that everyone appreciated Raṇadhīra. Even Kāma recognising the valour of Raṇadhīra in the war praised him thus “Oh Strong one, you are worthy of praise” and placing a sharp arrow in his bow, the quick and strong Kāma broke off the bow and arrows of Raṇadhīra. 42 to 46

अथ कामस्तस्य रथमश्वान् सूतं शरासनम् । चिच्छेद युगपद्वाणैः शीघ्रं लघुपराक्रमः ॥ ४८ ॥

The furious Raṇadhīra picked up another bow. Then the powerful Kāma simultaneously destroyed his chariot, the horses, the charioteer and the bow by arrows in no time. 47, 48

Then Raṇadhīra blazing with anger ran towards Kāma to kill him with his mace made of all metals which was looking like a thunderbolt. Seeing Raṇadhīra thus approaching him, Kāma created a down-pour of sharp arrows like a dense cloud. 49, 50

Raṇadhīra also consuming that rain of arrows like snakes by the Garuḍa, hit with all his might Manmatha on his head with the mace and Kāma giddily fell unconscious. At the same time Raṇadhīra too unable to move being hit by Kāma's arrows dropped unconscious like a mountain hit by a thunderbolt. 51 to 53

Then Virasena saw on the way the king and after touching his feet with his head stood dejected. 1

Seeing the depressed beloved grandson, the king with blessings smelt his head and said "My child! Why are you miserable? Are you doing fine? Is everyone in the city including your brothers, fathers, ladies, soldiers, servants, treasury, priests and ministers safe? Tell me soon because my mind is sad seeing you pitiable. 2 to 4

Hearing that Virasena narrated the events with folded hands. "Oh King! On the fourth day after you went, Kāma about whom you had spoken earlier, along with Indra and the army of gods came and fought a fierce war with men. Then the gods fighting with Sudhṛti were defeated and Indra, Maruts and others were captured by us. Again the powerful Kāma quickly defeated Śatruñjaya, Sudhṛti and others. In half a day he destroyed our fifty akṣauhiṇī army. The depressed brothers were then consoled by Raṇadhīra who is presently fighting alone. May be, by now, he is also won by Kāma who had quickly subdued Sudhṛti and the other eminent persons. How can Raṇadhīra battle all alone with the mighty Kāma? Thus I have told you the incidents. Further action is yours." 5 to 11

आजगाम युद्धभुवि धनुर्विस्फारयन्मुहुः । क्षणेन तावत्कामोऽपि मूर्च्छितः प्रत्यबुध्यत ॥ १३ ॥

Hearing his grandson and asking him to be bold Viravrata entered the battle field repeatedly twanging his bow. Then Kāma also quickly gained consciousness. 12, 13

राजानं पुरतो दृष्ट्वा कामः शरसुवृष्टिभिः । अवाकिरन्मेरुगिरिं पर्जन्य इव वृष्टिभिः ॥ १४ ॥

Seeing the king in front, Kāma showered arrows like the downpour from the clouds on Meru mountain. 14

राजाऽपि प्रतिवर्षेण शरवृष्टिं व्युदस्य ताम् । नीहारपटलान्मुक्तः चण्डांशुरिव सम्बभौ ॥ १५ ॥

The king also destroyed that rain of arrows by a retaliating shower of arrows and looked like the Sun freed from a veil of mist. 15

अथ राजाऽपि निशितेर्गोर्धपत्रैः सुतेजितैः । विव्याध मदनं भूयः सोऽपि तान्मध्य आच्छिनत् ॥

Then the king shot Kāma with bright sharp arrows that were cut off midway by Kāma. 16

आच्छिन्नाकर्णपूर्णेन राजानं ताडयद्भृशम् । राजाऽपि तं शरं मध्ये चिच्छेदाप्राप्तमाशुगैः ॥ १७ ॥

After destroying those arrows, Kāma hit the king with a high-speed arrow and the king broke it half-way through. 17

Thus a fierce battle ensued between the king and Kāma. Seeing the king in the war field all the soldiers, Sudhṛti and others relieved of their swoon rose up quickly rejuvenated and joined the king. 18, 19

Śatruñjaya and others saluted the king. The king who was fighting said, "Oh Sudhṛti! Listen. All of you are tired and worried after battling with Kāma for a very long time. Now you guard very well from all sides Indra and others, from the gods. You will keep on watching me fight with Kāma." Saying this the king fought furiously with Manmatha.

The war between them was like the one between Viṣṇu and Kaiṭabha. Both used many mighty weapons and missiles. Both of them wanting to win, fought fiercely by nullifying weapons with weapons and missiles with missiles. Both these masters of archery had impervious shields, unbreakable bows, inexhaustible quivers. They were mutually displaying skill and valour for three days.

The war on the fourth day was violent with the fire from the missiles pervading the worlds. Then the king was dwindling in strength and Kāma was growing with strength. Understanding his weakness the king remembered and prayed to Lord Śaṅkara and the three-eyed God quickly sent his trident. The king picked it up from his quiver like an arrow and thought it to be a heavy powerful one. He also wondered as to how that heavy thunderbolt-like arrow which was never there before came into his quiver. He also guessed that it may be Śiva the Lord of his clan who has come in that form thinking that he was tired. 27 to 32

Thinking thus the king fixed in his bow that thunderbolt-like arrow from which portentous fire sparks emerged. Then Kāma's left side shook and birds and animals made sounds of ill-omen. The directions were ablaze, the earth trembled and the atmosphere was covered with the dust. 33, 34

तददृष्ट्वा विपरीतं स कामः सस्मार मातरम्। लक्ष्मीं सा प्रेषयत् दूतान् रक्षणार्थं मनोभुवः ॥

Looking at that unfavourable condition Kāma remembered and prayed to his mother Śrī Lakṣmī who sent guards for his protection. 35

At that time the king despatched that blazing arrow. Even as the entire world was looking on that arrow resembling the fire of dissolution dropped on Kāma as if burning the three worlds. Seeing that all the gods cried in agony. That arrow consumed Kāma like a straw by the fire. The bow, the pair of quivers and all his weapons were reduced to ashes in a moment. Kāma charred to death, dropped on the ground like a person from heaven with exhausted merits. 36 to 39

Then the servants who were sent earlier by Śrī Lakṣmī arrived there and saw the lifeless Kāma fallen on the ground. They carried his unconscious body to Śrī Lakṣmī. 40

Seeing Kāma killed by the king, Sudhṛti and all others were extremely happy at the subjugation of the great enemy. All the soldiers beat kettle-drums to mark the victory.

Every one overwhelmed with joy swelled like an ocean on high tide and went near the king shouting slogans of triumph. Some prostrated before the king, some embraced him; some looked at him with love and some conversed with him.

When the army was thus jubilant the king talked to Sudhṛti suitably. "Oh Sudhṛti! Collecting the four types of army proceed first to the city. Then arrange medical treatment to those who are injured by weapons. Perform suitable death rites to those who have sacrificed their lives. Bury the other cowards who were hit in their back while fleeing and died, along with the animals". Ordering thus the king climbed the chariot.

Vardhana the prime-minister sent many fast messengers to many relatives and friends to inform the victory of the king. As ordered by him, the royal roads were decorated with arches, plantain stems, betel stems and idols holding lamps. Similarly many offerings were made ready for worship at the temple of Śrī Candramaulīśvara, their family deity.

Meanwhile the king, riding the decorated white-hued elephant by name Kularatnā which had four tusks and was born in the Airāvata clan, moved towards the city. Śatruñjaya and other sons of the king and grandsons followed the king on their separate excellent elephants. Raṇadhīra in his chariot was in front of the king. Complying with the orders of the king, the courageous Sudhṛti riding an elephant and holding his mace went behind the king with the army along with the bound Devendra and other gods. 62 to 65

The king as he approached the city gate saw the guru nearby and alighted from his elephant and reached Vidyāpati. Beholding the king getting down from his vehicle on seeing the guru, Raṇadhīra, the sons of the king and everyone alighted from their respective vehicles and followed the king. 66 to 68

Vidyāpati, the expert in all branches of Knowledge, after blessing the king spoke to him. "Oh King! The present time is said to be not suitable to enter the city. Hence relax now and enter the city during the next auspicious time."

Listening to this, the king prostrated before him and said "Be it so". Then the Guru alighting from the chariot sat on a good seat under the shade of a nearby tree. As ordered by the Guru the king sat not far from the guru. Commanded by the guru, Śatruñjaya and all others also sat.

Then Vidyāpati saw the gods in the chariot and asked the king thus, "Who are these in custody". Listening to the Guru the king said with folded hands. "They are Indra and other gods who were with our opponents. Being defeated by Sudhṛti they have been captured."

"Oh King! Listen. Your act of taking the gods under custody does not befit you. These gods are venerable to us because they are responsible for our fate. Bound for some reason, indeed, they are always unconquerable by men. Release them soon and solicit by worshipping them suitably.

Hearing the guru, the king looked at Sudhṛti who caught the intention of the king and quickly released the gods and brought them with respect near the king. Seeing them come to him the king soon got up and saluted them in order and honoured them with seats and worshipped them. Then the king submitted himself along with his kingdom, treasury, vehicles, sons and all and asked pardon for his ignorant act. 80 to 83

Seeing the politeness of the king, the gods spoke good words suitable for the occasion. "Oh best among kings! You are blessed. With such a devotion to the Guru, how can prosperity forsake you? By that devotion alone you will obtain all your wants. May you achieve your desires. We will proceed to the heaven." Speaking thus, Indra and other gods disappeared. Directed by the Guru, the king entered the city. 84 to 87

काममादाय ते दूताः कमलासविधं गताः। न्यवेदयन् युद्धवृत्तं देवानां च पराभवम् ॥ १ ॥

Those messengers carried Kāma near Lakṣmī and narrated the story of the war and the defeat of the gods. 1

श्रुत्वा लक्ष्मीर्जगन्माता दृष्ट्वा कामं गताऽऽयुषम्। ईषच्छोकसमाक्रान्ता धैर्यमालम्ब्य वै पुनः॥

Hearing that and seeing the dead Kāma, Lakṣmī the mother of the world was sad for a moment but gaining courage again closed Her eyes and was engrossed in unperturbed meditation on Śrī Tripurasundarī the Supreme Devī. Then opening Her eyes that showered ambrosia, She cast her glances on Manmatha who got up immediately as if from sleep. Wanting to fight, he looked around and could not find his weapons. With disgrace he looked at his mother and fell prostrate at Her lotus feet and addressed Lakṣmī thus: 2 to 6

मातः कुतो मे समरे मर्त्यैरासीत् पराभवः। अहं ते मानससुतो विष्णुपत्न्याः समुद्भूतः ॥ ७ ॥

श्रुत्वाऽत्र कारणं मातर्हास्यामि खलु जीवितम्।

“Oh Auspicious Mother! Born from your mind who are the consort of Viṣṇu, how did I lose the battle with men? I was born with your intention of bringing victory to gods. How is it that your resolve has failed and the gods are captured? Answer me quickly since this worry is burning me. For what purpose I who failed and died in war have been brought back to life? Although I am your mind-born son, I am defeated by small people. My life which is defamed has become worthless in this world. Oh Mother! after knowing the cause for this I will discard my life."

7 to 10

Hearing such grief-stricken words of Kāma, the lotus-faced Lakṣmī spoke aptly. "Oh Kāma! My child! Abandon that grief which is resorted to by low people. Brave and great people are never sad. Even drowning in the ocean of difficulties they would reach the shore of prosperity with the help of the great ship of bravery. Only the weak people lament during distress. Listen to the reason for your defeat in war. Oh Mind-born! You were not won in the war really by the human valour. King Viravrata had worshipped Lord Mahādeva and by His blessings you were defeated. Hence go and propitiate Śiva who is the Great God and the Great Lord, and you will conquer everyone by the grace of the Trident-wielder."

Hearing the words of Lakṣmī, Kāma overpowered by anger spoke thus—"Oh Great Devī! Do not tell me to take the help of the supporter of the enemy. Oh Universal Devī! In this world how can I helplessly seek shelter under such a god or a human being. Therefore suggest another god by whose grace I can soon conquer the host of gods in the war. To start with I will vanquish Mahādeva and then the gods, the humans and the demons one by one.” 18 to 21

Hearing the words of Kāma, Lakṣmī said—“My child! You do not know about the three-eyed Great God. Who else other than Him the Lord of all gods is superior? Just as the ocean among the waters, the Sun among the stars, the Sumeru among the mountains, Śankara is great among gods. Among animals the moving ones are superior and among them the human beings and among these the gods and among gods Brahmā, the creator of the worlds is superior. More than Brahmā, Viṣṇu the protector, from whose naval lotus was Brahmā born, is the Supreme-Puruṣa. Even greater is the Three-eyed God who is the Lord of all gods. Born out of His power the fierce Rudras representing anger destroy the creation. That God, the Lord of all gods is known by the name Sadāśiva. Earlier Viṣṇu was unable to trace the base of His Linga form. By His power Brahmā's pride was destroyed by chopping off his big head. Thus there is no one to excel Śiva and so surrender to Him.” 22 to 29

Listening to his mother, Manmatha spoke again. “Oh Mother! Though Śiva is the Lord of the three worlds and is superior to all, I cannot pray to Him because He is favourable to my enemy. Oh Mother! tell me from whom Siva acquired such supremacy so that I can please that god and conquer even Mahādeva, or let me know that god who has natural greatness.”

Listening to Kāma, the Great Devi Lakṣmī closing Her eyes meditated for a while on Tripurā the Supreme Great Devi and prayed for the prosperity of Kāma. Knowing the intention of Lakṣmī which was for the fulfilment of Kāma's desire, Tripurādevī deputed Gaurī who made her appearance.

Hearing the words of Gaurī, Lakṣmī uttered nectarian words. "Oh Gaurī! I will narrate my thoughts to you. This boy named Kāma is my son born out of my mind for accomplishing the needs of the gods. In the war he was defeated by Vīravrata on the earth. Oh Śive! Vīravrata by the blessings of your husband has conquered in the battle my son who is really invincible. Depressed by the defeat he wants to vanquish every one. He is deaf to my advice of worshipping Śiva." 42 to 45

Listening to his words, the consort of Śiva spoke thus. "Oh Kāma! Such a great task of yours will not be possible without the worship of Śiva. Therefore immediately adore Him. In this world there is none other than my husband Śiva who can grant rare wants. Hence seek Maheśvara." Having said that to Madana, Gaurī spoke to Lakṣmī thus—"I have been sent by the Great Devī Tripurasundarī to convey Her message—"Stop worrying. Your son will achieve his desires"—Let Kāma propitiate Śiva the Lord of the gods, to reach his goal."

Then Kāma angrily said to Gaurī who was talking in this manner. "Oh Śarvāṇī! Śankarī! Listen. I will never anytime surrender to Śiva who protects my enemy. I will propitiate a god superior to Śiva and have my wants. With my strength I will conquer Śiva and His followers. I would rather die than seeking Śiva's help anytime."

Hearing Kāma, the angry Maheśvarī cursed him thus—"Because you do not heed my good advice, you will be reduced to ashes while fighting with Śiva". Then Lakṣmī hearing the curse on her son became angry and with reddish eyes cursed Gaurī thus. "For having cursed my son you shall soon be reduced to ashes by hearing ignominy about your husband."

Thus a most fierce battle was on between them. The Pramathas (attendants of Śiva) who had accompanied Gaurī fought intensely. Lakṣmī injured them by mighty missiles. Severely hurt by the missiles, the Pramathas ran to Śiva and reported to Him the war between Gaurī and Padmā. Hearing that, Śiva riding his bull, came to the place of the war. 66 to 68

Meanwhile, hearing about the war, Viṣṇu made his appearance there. Getting the news about the war even Brahmā, along with Sarasvatī and other gods came there to witness the war. Siddhas, Gandharvas, Vidyādharas, Kinnaras, and great serpents came there to watch the fight. 69, 70

Then Lakṣmī broke with arrows the bright bow of Gaurī and injured her chest with a sharp arrow having a bent tip. From that wound, a lot of blood gushed out and the severely injured Gaurī became unconscious. Praying thus, Brahmā fell prostrate on the ground. Indra and the other gods and Siddhas, Vidyādhara, and all of them loudly cried very much for protection by saying thus—"Oh Devī Mahālakṣmī! Protect us". Seeing the gods who had surrendered being troubled by the great fire, Mahālakṣmī pleased also by the prayer of Brahmā, was gracious immediately. Addressing the gods not to fear, the Great Devī in no time swallowed that fire generated by the blood. By the showers of Her ambrosial glances, She quickly brought back to life the gods, the human beings and others who were burnt by the fire. Then Viṣṇu and Śiva also woke up from their swoon. 84 to 88

Then Bhārati quickly went to Bhavānī and Lakṣmī and joined their palms by holding them by her hands. She addressed them thus: "Oh Ramā! Oh Bhavānī! Listen to my good words. Anger which consumes the world does not befit either of you. I will clarify the nature of your mutual curses. 92 to 94

After listening to the wonderful glorious story, the astonished great Paraśurāma again addressed Dattātreya thus—“Oh Venerable Guru! The auspicious story of the glories of Rāmā narrated by you is wonderful to all. How did Lakṣmī devoted to Her husband, suffer separation from him? How did Her co-wife trouble Her? How did She discard Her body? How was Gaurī hearing the insult to Her husband reduced to ashes? Oh Lord! please tell me about all this. 1 to 4

Some time ago Viṣṇu was residing in Vaikuṇṭha with Lakṣmī. Pleased by the devotion of Br̥ndā and Bhūmī for a long time, He accepted them. Doubting the anger of Lakṣmī, He was secretly spending time with them which went on for quite some time. When questioned by Lakṣmī who had come to know of it, Viṣṇu concealed it. In the course of time while Lakṣmī was with Her attendants She was invited by Vāṇī and went there permitted by Viṣṇu. In the absence of Lakṣmī, Viṣṇu sported with Bṛndā and Bhūmī who endeared Him. 6 to 9

Then Devī Lakṣmī who by chance returned from Satyaloka was ablaze with anger having seen the lustful Viṣṇu sporting with Bhūmī and Bṛndā. Alarmed by that Viṣṇu immediately followed Lakṣmī who rapidly left Vaikuṇṭha. Meeting Her in the Himālaya, Viṣṇu started consoling Her by holding Her right hand. Then Lakṣmī who was burning with wrath was liquified like a mass of ghee by fire and flowed like a perennial purifying river named Padmā which dried-up by the curse of Nārada. 10 to 15

Bhagīratha the sagely king by performing arduous askesis made river Gaṅgā follow his chariot that drove on the course of river Padmā. Coming in contact with Gaṅgā, Padmā who was relieved of the curse mingled with Gaṅgā and flowed for a long time and broke off with Gaṅgā and joined the sea earlier than Gaṅgā. A bath at the place of the separation confers heaven. 16 to 18

Listening to the words of the Guru, Paraśurāma eagerly questioned thus. "Oh Lord! How is it that the river Padmā was cursed by the extremely calm and compassionate sage Nārada? How was the curse dismissed? How did the river Padmā part with Gangā? Tell me about all this.” 19, 20

एवं पृष्टो भार्गवेण प्राह दत्तो महामुनिः। शृणु राम पुरावृत्तं नारदस्याऽतिचित्रितम् ॥ २१ ॥

Thus inquired by Paraśurāma, the great sage Dattātreyā said “Oh Rāma! Listen to the interesting past legend about Nārada.” 21

Once Nārada arrived at the assembly in Brahmāloka where the Gandharvas, the Yakṣas, the Kinnaras and others were performing the Gandharva style of music, each one progressively excelling the previous artist. Then Nārada also played the rāgās (musical modes) on his Vīṇā. By his rāgās all who had assembled there were engrossed in the transcendental melody and were experiencing the bliss of emancipation and complimented Nārada as “Well done, very good”. 22 to 25

अथ वाणी कच्छपीं स्वां रागमूर्च्छनकोविदा। अवादयन्नर्हति तु नारदाद्याश्च नो विदुः ॥ २६ ॥

Then Sarasvatī the exponent in melody played on her Vīṇā the Kacchapī. Nārada and others could not really grasp the intricacies of those rāgās (tunes). 26

At the end of the programme Nārada also departed from there and on his way he was thinking about the rāga by Sarasvatī which was the best and which he could not comprehend. Going to a solitary forest on the banks of the river Padmā, Nārada started to play on his Vīṇā the same rāga which Sarasvatī had splendidly performed. Hearing the discord in his rendering the river Padmā laughed loudly. 27 to 29

Put to shame and angered by the insult, Nārada cursed the river Padmā thus. "Oh great River! You will dry up for your insolence towards me." 30

Hearing that frightening curse Padmā fell prostrate before Nārada and repeatedly begged for the termination of the curse. Upon her request Nārada said "Oh Great River! When you unite with the Supreme Gaṅgā, you will be free from the curse." 31 to 33

Then Padmā with reverence inquired Nārada thus "Oh Divine Sage! Where is that Gaṅgā? How will she reach the earth? How did she become the embodiment of Brahmā? Please let me know all these." Hearing her words, Nārada the best among the divine sages, happily narrated the excellent story of the Gaṅgā to Padmā. "Oh Padmā! Listen to this sacred story that cleanses abominable sins." 34 to 36

Transcending Brahman who is in the form of Śiva, exists Śaktī who is His essence, His heart and all. She is the great space containing countless eggs bearing series of worlds. Brahmā and others prayed with askesis to such a Great Power who was pleased by that. An incorporeal voice addressed them thus. "Oh Gods! Seek a boon". Hearing thus the gods led by Brahmā and Viṣṇu said. "Oh Devī! If you wish to grant a boon, you incarnate in such a visible form and pervade by which even the ignorant will easily attain the highest good." 37 to 41

Hearing Brahmā and others the Devī replied. "Oh gods! For your delight I will take a visible form. When the powerful demon king by name Vāṣkali subjugates by his strength the three worlds by conquering Indra, then Viṣṇu for the sake of Indra incarnating as a lad (the dwarf Brahmācārī) begs from the demon a three-foot space and encroaches the three worlds. From the upper Universal sphere split by the raised foot of Viṣṇu, I will flow forth like a nectarian great river. By seeing me in the form of the river and touching me and drinking me, one would attain salvation. The realised address me as Gangā and Tripathagā." Saying this, the incorporeal Maheśvarī became silent. 42 to 47

Listening to Nārada, the river Padmā inquired again thus. "Oh Divine Sage! Let me know how Gangā flowed from the sky rent by the foot of Viṣṇu. Then how will she reach the earth. I want to hear all the future events very clearly.” 49, 50

Inquired again thus by Padmā, the eminent divine sage said. “Oh Padmā! Listen to the sacred story named Gāṅgāvatarāṇa (The Descent of Gāṅgā). 51

In the twenty-third Tretāyuga from now, the extremely righteous Demonic Lord by name Vāṣkali, a devotee of Viṣṇu will conquer in war, Indra by the many boons acquired by pleasing through penance Brahmā seated on the lotus and rule the three worlds with righteousness. Then requested by Indra and other gods, Viṣṇu assumes by his powers the form of a dwarfish brahmin lad and goes begging the Demonic Lord Vāṣkali devoted to brahmins”. 52 to 55

Then Vāṣkali was extremely delighted to see verily Viṣṇu who was there as a young boy. Quickly rising and bowing he made Viṣṇu sit on the throne. By cleansing Viṣṇu's feet he sprinkled that sacred water on his own head and after devoutly worshipping Viṣṇu spoke to Him.

Listening to that Vāṣkali said. “Oh Bhagavan! In spite of being prevented by my guru, I shall give. Requested by you the all pervading Lord how can I not give? Oh! Supreme Being! Pardon my disrespect to my guru.” Saying this, the unswerving Vāṣkali poured water into the hands of the boy and said “Please accept”. 62 to 64

Overpowered by Īśvarī Śakti, Viṣṇu immediately grew. With His right foot He covered the earth and raised His left foot. From the upper universal layer pierced by the nail of His toe, flowed the sacred Gangā shining like pure nectar. Then Viṣṇu asked for the place to measure the third foot. He said “Oh Great King! By the first the earth is covered and by the second, the sky. Tell me the place for the third foot.” 65 to 67

The sixty thousand sons of Sagara searching the horse will dig the earth and there encountering the brilliance of Kapila will be reduced to ashes. Then the righteous grandson of Sagara, Bhagīratha by name, thinking about the salvation of his grandfathers takes to severe penance and Gaṅgā lands on the head of Śiva. By another great penance he makes Gaṅgā descend to earth. Gaṅgā will follow the chariot of Bhagīratha which moves in your course and then Oh great river Padmā, you will be freed from the curse."

Like this, Ramā suffered great distress from Her co-wife. Further "Oh Paraśurāma! After a long time, in the Sūrya Dynasty, Viṣṇu dividing Himself into four parts will take human birth to kill Rāvaṇa the Lord of the demons who harms the world. Mahālakṣmī born as Jānakī through the earth will suffer separation from Her husband Rāma because of the curse from Gaurī. Oh Bhārgava! Earlier even Gaurī was for some reason separated from Mahādeva and during the sacrifice by Dakṣa was reduced to ashes by hearing the insult to Śiva on account of the curse from Lakṣmī." After listening to Guru Dattātreya, Paraśurāma the scion of the Bhṛgu clan inquired the Guru about the detailed episode of Gaurī.

“Oh Venerable Guru! I would like to listen at length to this story. For what reason was Gaurī separated from Śaṅkara? How was She born to Dakṣa? Who insulted Śiva? Why had the Great Lord Śiva to face insult? Oh Lord! Please describe about all these to me who is your servant.”

Sweetly requested by Paraśurāma, Guru Dattātreya an eminent orator said thus. “Oh Bhārgava Rāma! Listen. I will tell you the story about the curse on Gaurī. In the past, a demon Bhasmāsura propitiated Śiva through severe penance and obtained a perplexing boon that the person on whose head he places his palm will be immediately reduced to ashes.”

Having got that boon, the demon in order to test it proceeded to place his hand on the head of Śiva. Then the God started running. Pursued by the demon, Śiva out of fear disappeared. Searching everywhere for Mahādeva, the separated Devī with extreme sorrow abandoned Her body. Then Viṣṇu adopting a trick killed the great demon. Later Dakṣa Prajāpati pleased Devī Śivā by his penance.

He requested thus. "Oh Śaṅkarī! Live in my house as my daughter". Granting that boon She was born as Umā. Dakṣaprajāpati gave Dākṣāyaṇī in marriage to Śiva and felt elated being his father-in-law. On one occasion Brahmā along with Viṣṇu and others met Śiva. The group of gods and prajāpatis also arrived there. Even Dakṣa went there. Seeing him the group of gods, the seers and others stood up excepting Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva. 11 to 15

Then the proud Dakṣa burning with the flame of anger uttered harsh words to Śiva. He said "This Śambhu who is like my disciple is standing atop the pillar of pride and bereft of good conduct by not standing and respecting me his elder, is unfit to be in this assembly."

When the yajña was going on, Dākṣāyaṇī heard from the celestial beings about the grand and praise-worthy yajña by Her father. She requested Śankara to see that yajña. Although prevented by Śiva, She went to the place of yajña where Her father was involved. Seeing Her father She addressed him with love. "Dear father! Was I forgotten by you for this laudable yajña? Your yajña, although replete with arrangements, without Śiva it lacks elegance just as a well-decorated woman without a garment, a brahmin without erudition, a lady without a husband, a king without strength, a boat without a navigator, the night without the Moon, and the day without the Sun.” 27 to 32

Hearing the words of Her father that were insulting Her husband, Dākṣāyaṇī closing Her ears with Her hands and burning with anger said. “Oh father! Your insolence towards the Great God is unbecoming. Because of your disrespect to my husband Maheśvara, your sacrifice will be futile. This body of mine having heard such an insult is unfit to exist.” Saying thus, Dākṣāyaṇī jumped into the great sacrificial fire and was reduced to ashes. "Oh Bhārgava! That was how Dākṣaṇī was burnt to ashes on hearing the insult to Her husband, because of the curse from Lakṣmī."

After hearing that story Paraśurāma filled with the joy of drinking its essence inquired thus. "Oh Bhagavan! Is this Gaṅgā the embodiment of Śakti? Prayed by Brahmā and others for the welfare of the world, who is she, the embodiment of Brahman, and how did she become Gaṅgā? I am very much interested to hear. Bless me and let me know about it."

Inquired thus by Paraśurāma, Dattātreya narrated. "Oh Paraśurāma! Listen. It is Tripurā, Kumārī, the Triple-formed Śakti who is known as Gaṅgā who has manifested to purify the earth. She is the consort of Para-Brahman, the embodiment of liberated Consciousness who is worshipped with great devotion by Brahmā and others. By seeing, touching and even drinking a drop of the most excellent Gaṅgā, all sins will be absolved. This Tripurā takes three courses and hence known as Tripathā. She flows as a visible river because of compassion towards human beings. Therefore it is Tripurasundarī who is called as Gaṅgā in Her form as the river. Oh Paraśurāma! I have narrated everything about your inquiry"

After listening to your narration all my sorrow, attachment and fear have disappeared without any residue. My desire to listen to you is not in the least satisfied. That being so, please tell me completely how, after the destruction of Manmatha, the sacrifices dear to the gods came into practice? How was God Sankara defeated by Kāma? How Manmatha, who was reduced to ashes, was restored to life?" 1 to 4

Thus inquired by Parasurama, Dattatreyā the excellent among gurus and the best among speakers addressed Parasurāma "Oh supremely intelligent Parasurāma! Listen to the answers to your questions one by one. The auspicious past is really wonderful. After Kāma was vanquished, Indra the Lord of the heaven who was set free went back to the city of gods and resided there as in the past along with all the gods. As long as king Viravratā ruled the earth, Indra was friendly with him." 5 to 9

After a long lapse of time, Indra went to Satyaloka along with the group of gods and prostrated before Brahmā. Seeing Indra, Brahmā filled with compassion uttered friendly and dignified words. "Oh Lord of the gods! Stand up and let me know your desire which I will fulfill and make you happy." 10 to 12

Listening to Brahmā, Indra along with the gods stood up and with folded hands started with these words "Oh Brahmā! In the past inspired by you we secured the blessings of Mahālakṣmī and She sent to fulfill our wants the very powerful Kāma who was defeated by Vīravrata and captured along with the gods and was released by the righteous Vīravrata upon the advise of his guru. Then all these days we have been friendly to Vīravrata. Even now the human beings are not worshipping the gods anywhere on the earth. I have come along with the gods to entreat you. I am with the gods in accordance with your earlier instructions." 13 to 17

Listening to Indra, the creator meditated for a while and said thus. "Oh Indra! Listen. Presently human beings will not perform any yajña because of the absence of desires in them. I will give you a plan. Listen. I will make you the Lord of the rain and you create showers on the earth where people perform yajña invoking you. Till now the rain-bearing clouds were independent and used to shower everywhere according to my instructions. From now on they will come under your control." Thus Indra became the Lord of the rain and hence people who desired rain had to take to yajña. Thus on the earth the agriculturists performed yajña and yajña was promulgated. 18 to 24

Oh Paraśurāma! I will let you know how Kāma conquered Mahādeva. After Lakṣmī and Bhavānī were pacified, Kāma with folded hands asked his mother Lakṣmī thus, "Oh Mother! Advise me. How can I vanquish Śiva in the battle. If there is no plan for that, I will discard my body in your presence. For respectable people loss of honour is worse than death. Today people are thinking that I am alive. Let them think so. But it is not good that I should live." 25 to 28

Hearing Kāma, Lakṣmī meditated for a moment on Śrī Tripurasundarī and bowed to Her. Then looking at Kāma, said to him: "Oh Kāma! I will now let you know the highest secret by which you can win everyone in the battle. You should not disclose this to anyone even by mistake or otherwise. I will tell you the hundred and eight names of Śrī Tripurasundarī that were obtained by me by serving Kāmeśvarī, that quickly pleases Her and that caused the greatness of even Śiva and others. Oh Manmatha! Without delay return to me after purifying yourself in the Virajā river.” 29 to 33

With eyes booming with joy on hearing the words of Lakṣmī, Manmatha stood bowing by Her side after finishing ablutions in the Virajā waters. Meanwhile Lakṣmī in the prescribed method worshipped Mahādevī, who was installed on a gem-set pedestal, with desired materials of worship. Then calling Kāma, Lakṣmī conferred the blessings of Śrī Tripurasundarī to the folded palms of Kāma and then chanted the hundred and eight names of Śrī Devī and described the comprehensible beauty of the Devī. 34 to 37

After obtaining the secret names of Śrī Tripurā, Kāma prostrated before his mother and blessed by her, addressed Her with folded hands and with a sense of achievement. “Oh Mother! Grant me permission. I will proceed to propitiate the Supreme Devī Tripurā who is the protectress of the three gods viz., Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva”. Praying thus and bowing to her, Kāma meditating with devotion on the lotus feet of Śrī Tripurā moved to the divine caves of the Mandara mountain. 38 to 41

In that mountain, Manmatha sat under the auspicious Kadamba tree which was by the side of a limpid and luscious river. After bathing there and sitting, he meditated in his heart on the form of the Devī and mentally worshipped Her in splendid detail as instructed by Lakṣmī and recited with supreme devotion the hundred and eight names of Śrī Tripurāmbā.

Pleased with Manmatha who was daily repeating with concentration the hundred and eight names, the auspicious Supreme Devī appeared in his dream in the form of Rāmā and said words dripping with honey. "Oh Kāma, my child! How can you achieve your aim just by repeating many times the names alone and not obtaining My Mantravidyā?

Then Manmatha opened his eyes and looked around. He could not see the Mother and was depressed. He thought within himself thus. "The dream which I saw was really very auspicious. Meditating on the Mother of the Universe, I am unable to sleep. Six months have passed while I am practicing daily. Even during nights I never slept because of meditation." Thinking thus, he recapitulated the dream and started surmising the fifteen lettered mantra derived from the prayer containing the names. Because it was a dream, he thought of that as an illusion. Then he heard an incorporeal voice.

Remembered by Kāma, Lakṣmī appeared and standing near him said "Oh Kāma! Why have you remembered me?" Seeing Ramā near him, Kāma bowed and with folded palms narrated his dream exactly and the voice from the sky. Hearing this Lakṣmī meditated for a long time and happily said "Oh Kāma, my child! You are the most fortunate. Your desires are fulfilled. It was the Transcendent Śrī Tripurasundarī who Herself addressed you in your dream. Discard that doubt and take Her words as truth and continue practising Śrīvidyā." Then Lakṣmī suddenly disappeared. 61 to 65

अथ कामश्च तां विद्यां जजाप्यैकाग्रमानसः । दिव्यं वर्षत्रयं पश्चादाविर्भूता महेश्वरी ॥ ६६ ॥

Then Kāma practised mentally that mantra for three divine years and the Great Devī appeared before him. 66

Her three eyes were bright like bloomed blue lilies, Her aristocratic side glances were mingled with the diamond ear rings, 3

नासामुक्ताफलोष्ठाऽभाषाटलीभूतदिक्ताम् । दन्तपङ्क्तिपराभूतकुन्दकोरकडम्बराम् ॥ ४ ॥

The pink lustre generated from Her nose-pearl and red lips spread in all directions, and the row of Her teeth vanquished the pride of the jasmine buds, 4

ग्रीवाब्जशिखरोद्भूतमुखाम्बुजविचित्रिताम् । मृदुबाहुलताप्रान्तकोरकाभाकुलावलिम् ॥ ५ ॥

Her wonderful face was like a lotus born out of the peak of the lotus-bud-like neck, and Her fingers at the end of the soft creeper-like arms were like a row of buds, 5

नखेन्दुकान्तिशबलकङ्कणोर्मिमणीगणाम् । मुक्ताहारमृणालोष्ठकुचकञ्जसुकुङ्कुमलाम् ॥ ६ ॥

the waves of rays from Her gem-set bangles were mixed with the lustre of Her moon like nails, Her breasts were like lotus buds sprouting from the stalk-like pearl necklaces, 6

नाभीहृदकूलक्लृप्तसोपानाभवलित्रयाम् । हीरहारबिसाऽऽसक्तलोमपङ्क्तश्चात्मशैवलाम् ॥ ७ ॥

the three folds near Her naval pond were like the steps of the pond, the hair on Her stomach was like the moss settled on Her stalk-like diamond chain, 7

कौसुम्भांशुककूर्पासाऽन्तरसंशोभिभूषणाम् । कटिव्योममध्यमासद्रशनामणितारकाम् ॥ ८ ॥

Her ornaments were shining from within Her red silk blouse and dress, the waist-band around Her delicate waist was studded with star-like gems, 8

पाशाङ्कुशपुष्पबाणपुण्ड्रचापाऽऽयुधाऽन्विताम् । गुल्फाऽऽसक्तांशुकप्रान्तप्रोतरत्नगणोज्ज्वलाम् ॥

She was wielding the rope (noose), the goad, the flower arrows and striped sugarcane bow, Her silk garment that was touching her ankles was embroidered with shining gems, 9

रत्ननूपुरहंसाऽदिपादभूषणभूषिताम् । काश्मीरशशिकस्तूरीसमालेपसुवासिताम् ॥ १० ॥

Her feet were decorated with swan-shaped anklets and ornaments; She was fragrant from profusely smeared saffron, camphor and musk, 10

कर्णोत्तंसितकादम्बप्रसूनाऽऽमोदमिश्रिताम् । विकसत्पद्मवकुलमालतीहारधारिणीम् ॥ ११ ॥

She exuded the fragrance of the Kadamba flower that decorated Her ear and She was wearing a garland made of lotus, vakula and jasmine flowers, 11

Listening to the words of the Universal Mother, Manmatha whose dark ignorance had vanished by a mere look at the Devī and whose desires were fulfilled having sighted Śrī Tripurasundarī who was none other than his own Self-Power, stood up and addressed with satisfaction and folded hands to the Devī.

“Oh Tripurāmbā! My thirst has been quenched by drinking the nectar of sighting Your feet. What do I beg from You? There is nothing more to be achieved. Asking for a boon would be like drinking salt-water after tasting ambrosia. My asking for a boon after seeing You would be just ridiculous. Oh Mother! I will simply obey Your instructions.” 28 to 32

Hearing Manmatha, the compassionate and smiling Transcendental Devī said thus: "Oh Kāma, My child! There is nothing left for you to be achieved. For him who has understood the knowledge about the Self, even the status of Brahmā will be equal to a straw. Even then, the purpose for which you have approached Me should not be defeated because no action will go waste. There will be no one on the earth, in the nether world or in the heaven whom you cannot conquer. Take this bow and these arrows." Saying thus the Universal Mother gave from Her bow and the arrows equally powerful bow and arrows to Kāma and pleased with Manmatha again said: "Oh Son of Ramā! May you be blessed with excellent auspiciousness in all your endeavours in this world. Seen by you, may all people lose courage. May you be an example for prosperity in the world and be the foremost among My devotees. Oh Manmatha! The most excellent fifteen-lettered mantra taught to you in your dream will become famous by your name because you are the first person to have practised it. The hundred and eight names taught to you by Ramā and the nine stanzas sung by you which contain the letters of the Śrīvidyā and which are the devotional outbursts; may these two prayers and the Śrīvidyā which will make you prosperous become the source of prosperity to everyone. In this world, let this Mantra be known as Saubhāgya Vidyā, let the hundred and eight names be called Saubhāgyāṣṭottara and let the nine stanzas get the name Saubhāgyanavaratna. I will be quickly pleased with those who read these hymns. Persons desiring education will become educated, those desiring wealth will become wealthy, those wanting progeny will beget children, those seeking wives will get married. All the desires of the persons who read this prayer will be fulfilled. They will never face misfortune. Oh Manmatha! Listen. I will very soon bless the persons who chant this prayer which can entirely grant the wants." Saying thus the glory of the hundred and eight names and the Śrīvidyā, Devī Tripurasundarī disappeared.

Māhātmyakhaṇḍam of Śrī Tripurārahasyam.

Listening to the unsurpassed glory of the prayers, Paraśurāma again inquired Guru Dattātreya. "Oh Lord! My thirst for listening is increasing every second while I am drinking through my ears the elixir of speech flowing out of your lotus visage. Please compassionately teach me, your servant, the hundred and eight names of Devī that conferred enticing prosperity on Kāma and which expounds the letters of the 'Saubhāgya Vidyā'.

Hearing the words of Paraśurāma, the munificently merciful Dattātreya addressed him with sweet words. "Oh Bhārgava! Listen to the hundred and eight names that are the repository of the gem-like letters of Śrīvidyā about which you have inquired. The Purāṇas and the Āgamas contain a myriad of names of the Devī. Among them this 'Saubhāgyaṣṭottara' which was revealed to Śrī Bhavānī by Śiva after many requests, contains the essence of it all. For this Aṣṭottara prayer Śiva is the Ṛṣi, the prosody is anuṣṭup, and Śrī Lalitāmbikā is the Devī. The process of installation or imbibing is through the three sections (Kūṭas) of the mantra. The prayer should be recited after mentally meditating and worshipping the Devī."

एतत्ते कथितं राम नाम्नामष्टोत्तरं शतम् । अतिगोप्यमिदं नाम्नः सर्वतः सारमुदघृतम् ॥ २६ ॥

एतस्य सदृशं स्तोत्रं त्रिषु लोकेषु दुर्लभम् । अप्रकाश्यमभक्तानां पुरतो देवताद्वयम् ॥ २७ ॥

एतत् सदाशिवो नित्यं पठन्त्यन्ये हरादयः । एतत्प्रभावात्कन्दर्पस्त्रैलोक्यं जयति क्षणात् ॥ २८ ॥

“Oh Paraśurāma! I have told you the hundred-and-eight names that are the essence of all the names and are to be kept extremely secret. A prayer equal to this is very difficult to find in the three worlds. This should not be disclosed to atheists who are not devoted to Devī Tripurāmbikā. Sadāśiva, Hara and others daily recite this prayer. By the power of this prayer, Manmatha conquers quickly the three worlds.

सौभाग्याऽष्टोत्तरशतनामस्तोत्रं मनोहरम् । यस्त्रिसन्ध्यं पठेन्नित्यं न तस्य भुवि दुर्लभम् ॥ २९ ॥

“For that person who recites this beautiful Saubhāgyāṣṭottara-śatanāma prayer at the three sandhis (i.e., sun rise, midday and sunset) there is nothing unattainable on the earth. 29

श्रीविद्योपासनवतामेतदावश्यकं मतम् । सुकृदेतत्पठतां नाऽन्यत्कर्म विलुप्यते ॥ ३० ॥

अपठित्वा स्तोत्रमिदं नित्यं नैमित्तिकं कृतम् । व्यर्थो भवति नग्नेन कृतं कर्म यथा तथा ॥ ३१ ॥

“The daily and special rites performed without reciting this prayer would be a waste similar to the rites performed by a nude person. 31

सहस्रनामपाठादावशक्तस्त्वेतदीरयेत् । सहस्रनामपाठस्य फलं शतगुणं भवेत् ॥ ३२ ॥

“A devotee who is unable to read the thousand names and the like, will reap hundred-fold benefit by reading this prayer of hundred and eight names. 32

सहस्रधा पठित्वा तु वीक्षणान्नाशयेद्रिपून् । करवीररक्तपुष्पैर्हुत्वा लोकान् वशं नयेत् ॥ ३३ ॥

स्तम्भयेत् श्वेतकुसुमैर्नीलैरुच्चाटयेद्रिपून् । मरीचैर्विद्वेषणाय लवङ्गैर्व्याधिनाशने ॥ ३४ ॥

“By reciting this one thousand times, one can destroy the enemy by a stare. One can command the worlds by offering oblations of red Karavīra flowers; one can stupefy the enemy by oblations of white flowers and extricate through blue flowers. Oblations of pepper destroys the enemies and of Lavaṅga (clove) cures diseases. 33, 34

“The person, who feeds married ladies and brahmins after reciting these names or worships the Devī with flowers or fruits for each name, will permanently dwell in the Abode of the Devī. Śrī Lalitā, the Empress will bless and grant the desires of the person who continuously repeats these hundred and eight names. "Oh Paraśurāma! I have thus told you about the prayer. Now listen to the relevant story. 35 to 37

अथैवं मदनः प्राप्य वरं देव्या महत्तरम् । मर्त्यानिमर्त्यानि सुरान् यातुषानांश्च किन्नरान् ॥ ३८ ॥

"After a lapse of time Kāma who went with a desire to conquer Mahādeva was reduced to ashes like a moth, by facing the fire of anger. I will tell you this story. Oh Rāma! Listen patiently. 39, 40

एवं सम्पूजितं देवमुनिं परमशोभनम् । समासीनं सभामध्ये प्राह पर्वतभूपतिः ॥ ४५ ॥

"Devī Gaurī born as Dākṣāyaṇī was reduced to ashes in the yajña of her father after hearing the insult to Her husband Mahēśa. Then Gaurī remained in the incorporeal form. After a very long time, Himavān the Lord of the Mountains, seeing Nārada approaching him, stood up and worshipped with devotion the divine sage by offering him water, garland, eatables, scented unguents, clothes and ornaments and fed him with a tasty meal. Then Himavān addressed the highly auspicious divine sage who was seated in the assembly. 41 to 45

देवर्षे त्वत्समालोकाद्भ्योऽहं सम्प्रति क्षितौ । यत्त्वया ब्रह्मपुत्रेण दीनोऽहं सेवकीकृतः ॥ ४६ ॥

भगवन् ब्रूहि भुवनात् कस्मात्त्वं समुपागतः । दुर्लभं दर्शनं तेऽद्य गमनेच्छाऽपि कुत्र ते ॥ ४७ ॥

'Oh Divine Sage! Seeing you I am blessed today on this earth because a small person like me has been allowed to serve you the son of Brahmā.

Oh Lord! Let me know from which world you came and with what purpose. Rarely can one see you. What is your next desired destination?

Thus inquired Nārada with words like dripping honey, spoke to Himavān to inform him about his journey. 'Oh Lord of Mountains! I came from the Satyaloka to see the fortunate ones like you and I will proceed to the abode of Śiva.'

48, 49

Listening to Nārada, Himavān addressed him humbly thus: 'Oh Lord! How are you calling me fortunate? With the agony of childlessness I am extremely pitiable and unfortunate.'

इति श्रुत्वा गिरिवचो नारदः प्राह सान्त्वयन् ॥ ५१ ॥

Hearing Himavān, Nārada consoled him and said thus: 'Oh! King of Mountains! Listen. I will tell how you are fortunate. Presently because you are devoted to the feet of Parāśakti, I called you blessed. In this world persons with low righteous merit cannot have such great devotion. That Śakti, who is worshipped day and night by Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra and others, is universally Supreme in whom dwells the entire creation. I have known by yogic vision what the sage Vāmadeva taught you day before yesterday. That sage who preached to you is the exponent of goddess worship. Therefore, tell me who else other than you can be fortunate in the world?'

Listening to Nārada, Himavān said again thus: 'Oh Brahman! Through your yogic vision you can see the past and the future. There is nothing within the triple time-frame that is unknown to you. I will ask you something. Please tell me who is your servant. Oh Brahman! There is no happiness in this world without having children. Hence let me know the means by which I will have an offspring.' 57 to 59

Hearing Himavān, Nārada endowed with spiritual vision meditated for a moment and addressed the Lord of the Mountains thus: 'Oh! Mountain King! I know you have no children. I see no way out. But you will beget a daughter who will cause pain to you. Let me tell you that progeny will bring misery. There is no one in this world who is happy with children. More so, understand that a daughter is the source of distress. If the Supreme Devī blesses you, then even a daughter will bring happiness.' 60 to 63

Hearing those words of Nārada, Himavān said again thus: 'Oh Lord! I heard from Vāmadeva that the Parāśakti is alphabetical in nature and it is not possible to comprehend Her. Thus when Her form is extremely hidden and beyond speech, tell me, how can I have Her grace?' 64 to 66

Only great yogis know Her who dwells in all, within their being and none else. So, Oh Himavān! Meditate on Her alternative gross form which is visible to all and get your wants. Even the visible forms are infinite that are meditated by devotees. Among them meditate soon on Gaurī, Mr̥dānī the intellectual and transcendent form of Mahādevī and obtain your wishes.'

Hearing Himavān, Sage Nārada then said thus: 'Oh! Lord of mountain! Listen to the auspicious form of Gaurī. She the Great Devī has manifested from the Vaiṣṇava aspect of Parāśakti. Blue in colour, seated on the Lion, having three eyes, wearing the Moon on Her head, wielding in Her Lotus-like hands the sword, the shield, the trident and the club, She is the consort of Śiva (Śaṅkara) who having been under Her protection does not suffer while destroying the creation. This Devī after discarding Her causal form was born to Dakṣaprajāpati and upon hearing the insult to Her husband got burnt up and took ethereal form and is not willing to have a physical form even upon the request from the gods. Without Her, Śiva is unhappy. Oh Himavān! Propitiate Her and request Her to be born as your daughter. Having Her as your daughter you will shine and become venerable in the world and lauded by gods. You will also have the fame of becoming the father-in-law of Mahādeva. With Parāśakti as your daughter you will attain happiness, fame and glory in this world.”

‘Oh Himavān! Listen to the story containing the deeds of Gaurī. Long ago in the ‘Rathantara-kalpa’, the great demon Tārakeya propitiated through penance the three-eyed Mahādeva and got many boons and extremely harassed the world. Śiva granted him the powers of creation, protection and destruction. He was able to seize immediately the valour of the opponent. Arrogant with such boons, that strong demon created many worlds along with Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva, Indra and other gods and became their overlord. Brahmā and others created by him worshipped him. He became the Lord of sacrifices in his creation. He created his own Vedas and varieties of knowledge. 1 to 6

Then the demon Tārakeya going to Brahmā and others said thus “Let all the gods worship me and recite my Vedas. I am the god and lord of all. All of you should bow to me always.” 7

Hearing his words, which the gods did not accept it, he conquered, captured and imprisoned them in his universe. Then he bound the Ādityas, the Vasus, the Rudras, the Āśvins and the Maruts and imprisoned them. Then he proceeded to destroy Brahmā and others. Seeing the demon coming to capture them Brahmā and others along with their retinue started to battle and after a long fight, realising his invincibility because of the boon, disappeared. After Brahmā and others disappeared, the great demon created alternative Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva and positioned them. He created Indra and other gods and placed them in heaven and became the universal Lord being worshipped by all of them.

After a long time while Tārakeya was surveying the worlds, he saw Śacīdevī in the heaven and was infatuated with her beauty. He ordered his servant by name Nisāṭha to bring Śacīdevī. The messenger went and bowed to Śacī and gave her the message of his lord thus: "Oh Indrāṇī! Sent by Tārakeya I have come here. The Lord of the Universe and the Lord of the demons conveys to you thus—'Oh lady with pure bright smile! Come soon with love to me and enjoy universal sovereignty by marrying me. Thus honoured I will become obedient to you. If not you will lose your dignity being dragged here forcibly.'"

Listening to the messenger Śacī got worried and thought thus: "What shall I do? Presently there is no one to protect me. Indra, Jayanta and other gods have been captured and moved far away. I have no news about them. I have none to save me. I shall for the time-being keep away the demon-king by a clever strategy. In times of danger the weak with all effort and intelligence will be happy by putting off the event even half-way. By gaining more time, I will release myself from the situation." Deciding thus Śacī said to the messenger. "Oh servant! Listen. Give my message to Tārakeya—'Lord Viṣṇu is the Supreme God. His wife Śrī Lakṣmī is charming. We are Her maids. It is appropriate that you take Her and then we will all be your maids uninvoked.'" 20 to 25

'Of this proposal by Śacī, the messenger humbly informed Tārakeya. Hearing that the demon Tārakeya felt that to be true and sent the messenger to Śrī Lakṣmī. 26 to 27

Going to Vaikuṇṭha the messenger submitted to Lakṣmī the message of the demon. Hearing that Lakṣmī contemptuously said thus: "Oh Messenger! It is not good for the wicked Tārakeya to desire me. By this he is requesting self-destruction. Get out soon from here." 28, 29

Seeing the great prowess of Lakṣmī, the mighty Tārakeya, an expert in handling weapons and missiles battled himself with Her. The war between them which was as if Viṣṇu is fighting with Śankara, created fear in the Universe. Their war continued for five years. The demon used to create afresh his army that was being destroyed by Lakṣmī.

‘He was thus again and again creating his lost army and continuing the battle. Then Lakṣmī understanding the heroic demon as invincible, remembered Her husband Viṣṇu, the Supreme Being. 33 to 36

Then the glorious Nārāyaṇa who was glowing like many simultaneous Suns at deluge, seated on Garuḍa and followed by His servants appeared in the battlefield. He saw Lakṣmī tired and dull and with great anger fought with all His might with the king of the demons. 37 to 39

तदा स दैत्यः स्वं रूपं द्विधा कृत्वा क्षणेन तु । प्रत्येकं युयुधे लक्ष्म्या विष्णुना युगपत् बली ॥

Then the angry Viṣṇu discharged the unfailing Sudarśana disc to kill the demon. That disc burnt the demon just as a fire burns a house. Then the mighty demon who was battling with Lakṣmī created another demon who again fought an extremely fierce war with Viṣṇu. Thus the demon, who was being destroyed again and again, was creating himself out of his self and fighting. Then seeing the demon unconquerable because of the boon from Maheśvara, Viṣṇu along with Lakṣmī disappeared from the battlefield. 41 to 44

Then the Lord of the demons, thinking that Lakṣmī and Viṣṇu were defeated, went back to his palace along with his retinue. Later Śacī getting the news from a Gandharva about the defeat of Lakṣmī and Viṣṇu remembered Bṛhaspati the Guru. Just by her remembrance Guru came to Śacī. Seeing him, the pitiable Śacī stood-up and bowed to him with devotion and worshipped him and with tears in her eyes said thus: "Oh Guru! Troubled by the king of the demons I am in distress. My husband Indra along with other gods has been captured by him. Now he desires to have my company. The messenger sent by him has been cleverly returned. Lakṣmī and Nārāyaṇa are defeated in the war. He will come today or tomorrow to take me away. What shall I do? Where shall I go? There is no one to take care of me. Oh Āṅgīrasa! Oh Guru! Helplessly I am surrendering to you! Save me today." 45 to 52

Hearing the lamentation of Indrāṇī, the compassionate Br̥haspati after probing intellectually said to Śacī thus: "Oh Pulomajā! Listen to my words suitable to the situation. By the boon obtained from Mahādeva this demon will vanquish everyone. There is no one in this world and elsewhere who can defeat him. Except by Gaurī he is invincible by women. His powerful messenger will soon come to take you. Hence, you start immediately worshipping Gaurī for a month." Saying thus the Guru returned and Śacī started to propitiate Gaurī the Parameśvarī. 53 to 57

After worshipping Her in the prescribed manner and offering varieties of eatables she recited the prayer of hundred and eight names that was taught by the Guru and got absorbed in the repetition of the Mantra.

Subsequently the demon thought of Śacī and overpowered by passion went to the heaven along with his servant. There staying at the Nandanavana the heavenly garden he sent quickly his messenger to Śacī. Reaching Śacī the messenger bowed to her and said thus. "Oh Brilliant one! The Lord of the demons is at the Nandanavana and is looking beautiful like the spring season covered by flower blossoms. Desirous of seeing you he is immersed in your thought. I have been sent to take you to him. Oh lovely eyed one! Come and soon join the king of demons who is the Lord of hundred universes and become his queen. Many Brahmas, Viṣṇus, and others along with their wives will serve you. The Lakṣmī, mentioned by you earlier, was defeated along with Janārdana and they have fled with fear from their abode. It is your fortunate time, being desired by the king of demons."

Hearing the messenger, the eloquent queen of Indra mentally reproaching the demon said thus: "Oh Messenger! Listen. For a long time I was also having the same desire of the king of demons of wanting me. I think this is the opportune time fructifying my desire and indeed the king of demons should be my new husband. For that I have undertaken an observance for thirty days which will be auspicious for the new husband. Soon after the completion of the vow I will go and join the king of demons. If the observance goes through without obstacles I will never be separated from the husband. If the vow breaks, then immediately my husband will die. Hence by the completion of the observance I will never face separation from my husband. So, go and inform the king to excuse me for just a month."

The devout Indrāṇī meditating incessantly on the lotus feet of Gaurī with strict control on senses, food, activities and speech was sustaining herself on air for food. After twenty-eight days, on the twenty-ninth night Śacī thought thus: "Till today Devī Gaurī is not pleased with me. After one more day I will be under the control of the king of demons. This looks impassable for me. What should I do to be happy? As of now I know no plan. I am in danger. Surrendering myself to the demon is never praiseworthy. Therefore I will wait for one more day with patience for protection from Gaurī. On the morning of the next day I will offer my body to Gaurī through the fire." Deciding thus Śacī prepared a huge altar in her house near to the idol of the Devī. 74 to 80

One of the messengers of the demon inquired Śacī about the fire-altar. She replied thus: "The vow of thirty days will be completed and tomorrow morning I will accompany the king of demons. Go and inform this to him and let him come here next morning well prepared and well dressed to take me with him." 81 to 83

'The messenger taking the words of Śacī to be true reported to Tārakeya who happily awaited that moment. 84

'Then Śacī completed her great worship to the Devī by offering auspicious materials and filled the altar with wood and lighted the fire ablaze. Meditating with devotion on Gaurī she circumambulated the fire with the intention of offering her body and bowed with folded hands to Śaṅkarī and prayed thus "Salutations to you the Great Devī the consort of Śiva. I am offering this body to you. May the Supreme Devī be pleased by this." After praying thus, when Śacī was about to enter the fire, a terrifying loud sound like that of a thunderbolt was unexpectedly heard in the sky. 85 to 89

'Hearing that huge sound Śacī saw in the sky a golden coloured Lion as tall as the Himālaya mountain. Seeing on that Lion the Great Devī resembling the idol worshipped by Her, Śacī filled with joy bowed to Her. 90, 91

'Hearing that sound, Tārakeya the Lord of the demons followed the sound in the sky and seeing the Lion struck it angrily on its head with the sword. Falling on the head of the Lion, the sword shattered into hundred pieces. 92, 93

अथ गौरी समालोक्य दैत्यं रोषाऽरुणेक्षणा । जघान हृदि शूलेन भिन्नवक्षाः पपात ह ॥ ९४ ॥

Then Gaurī with red angry eyes seeing the demon struck him with the trident by which he fell with split chest. Rising up again immediately the demon disappeared and in a moment created a very large army in the sky. A great battle began between the armies of Bhavānī and the demon. The crores and crores of divine motherly forces born out of the breath of Gaurī, fought with the army of the demon. The demon observing the destruction of his army created once again a very huge battalion which was soon ruined by the forces of Gaurī. 94 to 98

'Gauging the motherly forces to be stronger the Lord of the demons created a three-eyed Śiva who wielded a trident and bore the moon on his head. That Śiva started attacking Gaurī with his raised trident. Seeing him and mistaking him to be the husband of Gaurī the motherly forces discarded the weapons. Then Gaurī said thus: "He is not the Śiva my husband. This Śiva is the creation of the demon. It is improper to shed the weapons while fighting with magical persons." Then Gaurī remembered Her husband Śankara to dispel the ignorance of the motherly forces. Śankara immediately appeared holding His trident along with His retinue. 99 to 103

'Seeing Śiva the wielder of the Pināka bow, the motherly forces resumed the battle picking up the weapons. Then Brahmā, Gods, Yakṣas, Gandharvas, Kinnaras, Nāgas, Gaṇas, Apsarasas, Siddhas and Kimpuruṣas came to watch the fight between Gaurī and Tārakeya.

Then the demon and Gaurī fought an extremely frightful war in which the demon created many times armies that were rightaway destroyed by the motherly forces. Then the demon Tārakeya hid himself within the universe created by him. Knowing that Śankarī fumed with anger from which appeared the frightening nude Mahākālī with dishevelled hair wearing a garland of skulls and wielding a sword. Seeing Her Śankarī said "Oh Kālī! Quickly ruin the universe created by the demon."

Listening to that, Kālī in a moment shattered the hundred universes with Her sword and swallowed the citizens. When the group of universes were thus destroyed the demon holding a powerful weapon came and when he was about to create an army to continue the war, Gaurī put him on the ground and stamping on his chest severed his head with the trident. With his head cut off the demon lost his life.

Hearing the news about the death of the king of the demons, Brahmā and others uttered slogans of victory and Indra showered flowers. Brahmā, Viṣṇu and others sang hymns and with folded palms addressed Her who was seated on the lion. "Oh Bhavānī! The powerful demon who was our enemy and harasser of the universe has been killed by you. Oh Maheśvarī! While Viṣṇu or Śiva were unable to kill him, how could Indra and others be competent? By the killing of this wicked one the world has been protected like a son. Therefore, Oh Great Devī! On the shore of the western sea, You will become famous as 'Jagadambā'—Universal Mother and worshipped You will grant the wants of the people." Lauding Her thus and bowing to Her, the gods returned to their abodes.

Then Indrānī came to the place where the demon was killed and bowed to the Mother and with folded palms said thus: "Oh Gaurī! Oh Protector of the Universe! Oh Dispeller of the distress of the helpless! I bow to you! I who was drowning in the waters of sorrow, have been saved by You." Saying thus the beloved of Indra prostrated before the feet of the Devī.

After hearing the auspicious glorious story of Gaurī, Paraśurāma again inquired the great sage Dattātreya thus: "Oh Lord! I do not feel satisfied hearing the wonderful glories of Gaurī that have flowed out of your mouth. I am eager to hear about the hundred and eight names of Gaurī which Br̥haspati told Śacī. Please tell me that." 1 to 3

Thus inquired by Paraśurāma, the compassionate great yogi the son of sage Atri disclosed the hundred and eight names of Gaurī. He said: "Oh Paraśurāma! Listen to the enchanting, wish-yielding and sin-absolving prayer containing the names of Gaurī. The seer of this prayer is Angirasa. Its metre is Anuṣṭup. The presiding Devī is Gaurī. This should be recited to overcome difficulties.

The six seed letters Hrām, Hrīm and the like are to be installed (Nyāsa) in one's body and after meditating on Her form, this prayer has to be recited. She is seated on a Lion; Her hue is dark-green; She is shining with a silk garment; She is wielding the sword, the shield, the trident and the club in Her hands; She is decorated with the Moon on Her head; She has three eyes; She is the granter of wishes;—such a form of Gaurī has to be meditated upon. 4 to 8

Listening to the words of Nārada, the wise Himavān determined to perform penance to obtain the blessings of Gaurī. The Lord of the mountains, accompanied by his wife, after bathing in the sacred river sat on its bank and meditated as taught by the divine sage on the form of beautifully decorated Gaurī seated on Her Lion. Then after worshipping Her with various food offerings Himavān daily concentrated on Her. While not in meditation, he repeated again and again the prayer. Eating only ripe leaves, with restraint and silence and sleeping on bare ground Himavān did penance for twelve years. Then Gaurī who was pleased appeared before him in the same form of his meditation and addressed him in a dignified thunder-like voice. 26 to 31

“Oh Himavān! Let me know what you are performing penance for. Enough of that harsh penance. I will grant you a good boon.” 32

Hearing that Himavān prostrated before Her and with folded hands praised Her with the names contained therein. Then placing the folded palms on his head requested Gaurī thus: “Oh Devī Gaurī! Beautiful to Lord Śiva! Salutations to you! Please revive me who is burnt by the defect of childlessness.” 33, 34

Then Himavān bowed and said with folded hands thus: “Oh Devī! The wise say that becoming a father to a girl will bring misery. If I am going to have only a daughter, then You become my daughter. I do not wish to have any other boon which You may like to give”. 37, 38

Then Himavān decided to perform penance again and started the most severe penance possible only by great sages. Hundred years he lived on water and another hundred on air. Then after two hundred years he prepared a huge fire altar and above that he tied hundred ropes to a banyan tree and tied his feet to them and dangled upside-down supportless, without eating and breathing and continued his penance. His wife set a fire, with wood in the altar below. Thus after a year he cut-off one of the ropes and did so for ninety-nine years. Then the fumes from the fire of his penance pervaded heaven. 41 to 47

Distressed by the surrounding fume, Indra and other gods with fear went to Himavān. There being unable to withstand the heat of the fire in the altar which was getting intense by the fire of penance, the gods got back to a distance and reached Satyaloka. Going to the abode of Brahmā, Indra and other gods prostrated before him from a distance. 48 to 50

Listening to Brahmā, Indra and the other gods rose and with folded palms Indra slowly said thus: "Oh Lord of the Universe! We are afraid. I will let you know the cause for our fear. On the earth, the famous Himavān, the lord of the mountains is performing a great penance. We do not know what he wants. The fume emerging from his head is causing poignant fear to the gods. Our bodies are getting scorched by that fume which has spread over heaven. My throne in the heavenly assembly 'Sudharmā' is trembling. The insecure gods are not at all happy. For us who are in trouble, you are the only refuge." 53 to 58

Hearing Indra, Brahmā meditated and quickly opened his eyes and told Indra not to fear. Saying thus Brahmā proceeded along with the gods and reached the shore of the milky ocean where Lord Viṣṇu wielding the Conch, the Disc and the Mace, was reclining. Prostrating before Viṣṇu, the gods with folded hands praised Him with Vedic hymns that extol His glory. Then Brahmā reaching near Viṣṇu narrated about the penance of Himavān as told by the gods. 59 to 63

Viṣṇu, hearing him went along with the gods to the place where Himavān was performing severe penance. There He saw the sage-like Himavān dangling by a single rope above the blazing altar of fire who was glowing like a Sun because of the brilliance acquired through penance and also his wife who was serving him. Then Viṣṇu went near her and respectfully questioned her thus: "Who are you? Why are you serving this person in this dense forest? Who is he? With what purpose is he performing such a harsh penance?" 64 to 67

Listening to the words of Viṣṇu, The wife of Himavān spoke sweetly thus: "He is my husband Himavān the Lord of the mountains. He desires to have Devī Bhavānī to be born as his daughter. Prohibited by the Devī, he has taken to hundred years of penance by tying himself to hundred ropes and dangling on the fire. Each year he is cutting off one of the ropes. Now ninety-nine years have passed and in the hundredth year one more day is left. If Devī Gaurī is not benevolent then tomorrow morning he will cut off the remaining one rope and become ashes by offering his body to the fire. Then I will also offer my body to the fire and follow him." 68 to 73

Then Viṣṇu, after consulting Brahmā and others regarding the further course of action, meditated there itself on Gaurī and with great devotion praised Śivā. "Salutation to you the Protector of the Universe! Salutation to you the embodiment of auspiciousness! Salutations to you who are Gaurī, Śarvāṇī (the consort of Śiva)!" Praising Her thus with many more hymns, Viṣṇu prostrated before Her. 74 to 76

Pleased by the prayers of Viṣṇu, Maheśvarī who was in Her spatial form spoke with love and dignity thus: "Oh Nārāyaṇa! Why did you praise me? Earlier Śrī Tripurasundarī had said that you are my elder brother. Hence let me know why you have remembered your sister."

Hearing Gaurī, Viṣṇu said with a smile thus: "Oh Gaurī! Listen. Look at the danger the world is facing because of the extremely severe penance by Himavān. By fulfilling his desire protect the universe which is being consumed like a moth by the fire of the penance. By such an act of yours, the world and Indra and others will be saved. Also, look at Śankara who is in penance without your physical presence. Long ago Śrī Tripurasundarī in order to remain calm created us, the Trinity to do creation and so on. Oh Sister! If you remain incorporeal, it would tantamount to disregarding the orders of Śrī Tripurasundarī. Thus I have narrated the reason for my remembering you. Further it is for you to protect the moving and non-moving creation in a manner best known to you." 79 to 85

Hearing those words, Himavān meditated for a while thinking whether it was a dream or reality and then opened his eyes and looked all around and did not see anything. As he was about to take it as a dream, Gaurī repeated Her utterances. Listening to that auspicious voice of Gaurī who was incorporeal, Himavān was very happy and bowed to the direction of that voice. Then after lauding Her in various ways with his heart filled with devotion, Himavān sought from the Great Devī his desired boon. "Oh Gaurī! If you are pleased with me and if my penance is successful, you should take birth as my daughter. I have a great desire to see you as an infant and caress you with love while seeing your innocent sport. Then taking Mahādeva as my son-in-law and worshipping both of you I will attain bliss being assured of happiness here and hereafter. This is my request. Please fulfil my need."

Listening to the request of Himavān, the Great Devī who was in the spatial form said auspiciously thus: "Oh Lord of the mountains! The boon requested by you will soon materialise. I will be born as your daughter. Even though it is against my nature to have a physical form, you have by your persistent penance made it possible. Therefore you will forget that I am the Supreme Śivā and treat me like a worldly daughter." Saying this, the Great Devī vanished. 1 to 4

Then Himavān who was happy securing his want, bowed to the Mother and returned to his abode along with his dear wife Menā. In a short duration at an auspicious time Menā the wife of Himavān became pregnant and the Great Devī Śivā as directed by Śrī Tripurasundarī entered her womb for the sake of the welfare of Viṣṇu and other gods. 5 to 7

Then in the sacred house of Himavān, because of carrying the power of the Supreme Devī in her womb, Menakā glittered. Himavān saw his wife as a goddess and was extremely happy at the fulfilment of his desire. 8, 9

From the time when the auspicious Gaurī got into the womb of Menakā, everything prospered for Himavān. The trees were full of flowers and fruits. The fruits were juicy and fragrant. The birds were chirping auspiciously. The gentle breeze was soothing to the animals. The sky was filled with pure clouds. The clouds showered perfume. The rays of the Sun were clean. The directions looked cleansed. The night was beautiful with the stars and the Moon. The people were happy. Such signs were seen everywhere. Seeing them, the exhilarated Himavān thought it to be the expected time for the birth of Gaurī. 13 to 18

Seeing Her, with three eyes, with crescent moon on Her head, wielding the sword, the shield, the club and the sharp trident in Her four hands, with dark-green hue, with red garment, and completely bejewelled, Menakā the wife of Himavān was scared and she informed Himavān about the baby. Going there Himavān saw the girl and realising Her to be the Supreme Devī prostrated before Her. Then he stood up and started praising Her with devotional exuberance. 20 to 23

Blessed by the Devī, I who am inert and helpless have placed my foot on the heads of very lucky persons. I am really fortunate. I am really lucky. No one else is as much fortunate as I am, who is seeing the Devī in the form of my daughter.

Oh Devī! I want to request you for something that is in my mind. But I am afraid. Oh compassionate Protector of the Devotees! Please order me to request you.” 30 to 34

Hearing Her, the Lord of the mountains bowed and spoke with folded hands. "Oh Devī! I would like to see you in the form of a normal worldly child. Parents in this world would be happy to see the sports of the children. By seeing your Divine form I am not getting that love which a parent would have from his progeny. My beloved wife Menā also wants to see you as a normal child. Your dark and fierce form as Kālī is not desirable. Please assume a golden hue and justify your name as Gaurī. Oh Maheśvarī! Please bless me with that curse regarding seeing your form which you had declared earlier." 36 to 40

However on some other occasion I will show my Glorious form to you." Saying thus the Great Devī concealed Her Divine form. Assuming the form of a child the daughter of Himavān started crying. 41 to 43

Hearing the cry of the baby, Himavān along with his wife forgot the Divine form and thought that a female baby was born. His wife Menakā out of delusion felt the pain of delivery. The people there hearing the cry rushed to the palace and enquired. The ladies who heard about the birth of a girl baby came to the labour room and with great joy saw the marvellously beautiful baby who was brilliant like crores of Suns, whose body was golden in colour, whose eyes were broad like the lotus petal, whose face was like the full-moon, whose palm and feet were red in colour, who had a proportionate body and who looked like a beautiful painted picture. Then the mid-wife carried the baby. 44 to 49

Then Himavān purifying himself with water quickly performed the rituals connected with the birth of the baby and gifted ten thousand cows and one lack gold coins to eminent brahmins. There was a great festival atop Himālaya Mountain. The gods played the kettle-drums and showered flowers. The palace of Himavān was crowded and filled with the sounds of the brahmins, the musicians, the dancers, the panegyrists, the mendicants and the artisans. 50 to 53

Then at the proper time Himavān performed the naming ceremony of his daughter through brahmīns. The priests said thus: "Oh Himavān! Because of Her pure golden hue, She will be reputedly known on the earth by the name Gaurī." Himavān thus having the Great Devī Gaurī as his daughter was prosperous and rejoiced seeing the play of that girl. Thus sporting Gaurī grew in the house of Himavān. 54 to 57

Quickly as it were, Gaurī attained teen-age. Seeing her, Himavān started thinking about a suitable husband for her. Himavān approached sage Garga and bowed to him and inquired thus: "Oh Great Sage! Whom will my daughter wed? Please let me know. There is nothing past or future that is not known to you." 58 to 60

Hearing the words of Himavān, the great sage Garga meditated for a moment and knowing about Her husband happily addressed Himavān after bowing to the Supreme Gaurī. "Oh Himavān! Listen to the glorious story about your daughter. She is Devī Bhavānī who was worshipped by you. Her husband is none other than Śiva who is worshipped by all the gods. Deluded by the curse from Her, you are unaware of that." Hearing sage Garga, Himavān recollected the Supreme Gaurī. 61 to 64

You have got a daughter after a long time by the grace of the divine. She is ready to be given in marriage. The ancestors of a dispirited person, who does not get his daughter married at the right age to a suitable groom will suffer misfortune. Oh Lord of the Mountains! Hearing Himavān, the divine sage said thus: "Oh Himavān! Listen. If you think Śiva as the bridegroom, I do not consider him fit to marry your daughter who is a jewel in the entire universe. She deserves a husband who shines with excellent qualities. Every aspect of Śiva is inauspicious. His behaviour is always frantic. He dwells in the burial ground. He is attended by devils. He is decorated with serpents. His garment is animal's skin. He has three eyes. He subsists on poison. He looks frightening. In the past his wife Gaurī seeing his madness became invisible. Similarly Dākṣāyaṇī, seeing him insulted by honourable persons, reduced Herself to ashes in the great sacrifice. Therefore Śiva does not deserve to marry your daughter who is a repository of excellent virtues. Oh Himavān! Listen. I will let you know who is the right person to marry your daughter. The lotus-eyed Mādhava, who dwells in Vaikuṇṭha who is the Supreme Being, has desirable qualities to marry this girl. She also deserves to marry Viṣṇu by virtue of her greatness. Oh Himavān! How great it would be to have Viṣṇu as your son-in-law. Attracted by Him, Lakṣmī is serving Him every day. If you agree with me, I will choose Hari the Lord of the Universe."

Truly, the inauspicious Śiva does not deserve my daughter. Go this day and soon establish alliance such that Viṣṇu will wed my daughter. Let there be no delay. Good events are beset with calamities. Not accepting the resolve of Her father, Gaurī concealing Her real form and enacting satisfaction went with four of Her friends to the auspicious but dense forest on the slopes of Himālayan Mountain which was replete with the humming of the bees, which had many shady creepers and plants, which was grand with many birds, which was without Sun's rays, which was cool, which had whitish patches from snow fall, which had no pastures; from where at a distance was the silver capped peak, which had shining streams limpid like the minds of the sages, flowing on pure stone slabs; whose tall trees were sheltering groups of clouds, which was filled with many dancing peacocks and the music from the cuckoos. There, on the banks of the divine river, the daughter of Himavān sat surrounded by Her friends. 1 to 7

Resting thus for a while and rising up Gaurī along with Her friends bathed in the Ganges and reached a cave nearby. There, in the night She worshipped, a sand idol of Tripurasundarī seated on the thigh of Kāmeśvara, with perfume, flowers and fruits in the prescribed way. She praised goddess Tripurā with many Vedic and Tāntrik hymns. After worshipping Her specially with rare fruits and flowers she offered music, dance and circumambulations. While she was worshipping the night ended. Next morning Gaurī sang a splendid prayer with her mind intoxicated by the juice of love towards the lotus feet of the Supreme Tripurāmbikā. Gaurī began to chant the wonderful 'Jñānakalika' prayer.

Gaurī, after praying to the Supreme Devī Tripurā with the prayer named 'Jñānakalikā', started meditation. 29

Then Śrī Tripurasundarī looked at Cittākarsṇī who catching the intention of the Devī attracted the mind of Gaurī which was absorbed in Śrī Tripurasundarī the meditated. 31 to 35

With her mind dragged out of the object of meditation, Gaurī the daughter of Himavān wondered why that happened and opening her eyes looked around. Seeing the Supreme Devī, the thrilled Gaurī bowed to Her and with folded hands addressed Her thus: "Oh Devī! Instruct me,

Your servant what I should do now. My elder brother the lotus-eyed Viṣṇu made me take this body. Honouring your words I have assumed this body. My husband, bestowed by You, is engrossed in penance. Therefore, Oh Parameśvarī! Order my further course of action."

Hearing the request from Gaurī, Tripurasundarī said thus: "Oh Pārvatī! Listen. There is nothing unknown to you. Born out of my aspect, you will not be disappointed. Abandoning his penance Śiva will wed you. Soon you will beget a son who will bring joy to everyone. Oh Daughter of Himavān! The prayer containing the Śākta philosophy with which you praised me will enlighten its singers and will become by my grace, famous by the name "Jñānakalikāstotram". I will be pleased with those who recite that prayer." Speaking thus to Gaurī, Devī Tripurasundarī vanished.

Then Gaurī bowing to Śrī Tripurasundarī bathed in the sacred divine river and after worshipping Her idol again immersed it in the water. Then eating the food that was offered to the Devī the daughter of the mountain enjoying the beauty of the forest relaxed on a cool slab covered with leaves and listened to the talk of her friend.

My father is preventing that. Therefore I have come to this dreaded forest along with friends like you. Let the Supreme Devī whom I have propitiated protect my parents." Saying many such words Gaurī slept. 51 to 54

After Gaurī had gone to the forest, Himavān returning to the palace from the garden was eager to see his daughter who would welcome him everyday. When she did not appear on that day Himavān thought thus: "Why has my daughter not come today to greet me? She might have gone somewhere or she may be ill. Or is she angry with me? No, she has never been angry with me. There should be some other reason." Entering the inner chambers of the palace he questioned his dear wife Menā.

I will send the maid to bring her." Sent thus the maid searched for Pārvatī in her friend's house and also in the garden and returned saying that she was not seen anywhere.

Hearing the words of the caretaker, Himavān disturbed by sorrow cursed his ill-fate and went out along with his servants in search of his daughter here and there. Blinded by grief and stumbling he searched every where in the houses of the city and in the forest. Again thinking that she might have gone home he returned to the palace and not finding her, Himavān lamented thus: "Oh Daughter! Where have you gone? Have you been abducted by some one? Or have you been eaten up by a demon or a jackal? Leaving me, the aged dear father, she has never gone out any time. No one would kill her because of her noble virtues. She would control even my enemies. Without her I have no interest to live even for a moment. I will surely kill myself by a weapon or by drinking poison or by hanging or by entering fire. What a pity? Some times even the words of gods will be false. The astrologer had said that she will be the source of honour for me and her husband would be an omniscient venerable great Puruṣa who will bring special fame for me in the whole world. How can such words of the gods become false?" Wailing thus, Himavān fell unconscious on the ground. 8 to 18

Seeing the plight of the king, the ministers awakened him and encouraged him with consoling words. "Oh King! Do not be disheartened. Courage is the best in times of distress. Great persons will never lose courage in times of difficulty. It is said that only a coward will indeed discard courage during calamity. Therefore be bold and act guided by your intelligence." 19 to 21

Thus woken up by the ministers, while Himavān was about to go with them for searching, a messenger arrived there. Praising Himavān and bowing to him the messenger spoke thus: "Oh King! When we were briskly searching for her, we found in the North-East direction a narrow path leading to the great forest. Your daughter might have gone through that path. We are thinking so on seeing her footsteps. We have seen also the footsteps of four others. Oh Lord! Even in the city those four ladies who are the best friends of your daughter are not seen anywhere. Thousands of servants who know the route very well have gone in that path in search of your daughter. Getting this news, I have come to you". 22 to 27

Receiving the good news from the messenger, Himavān as if swooning with happiness immediately presented a gem-chain to the messenger and quickly went in that route showed by him. Seeing the dense formidable forest full of trees, bushes, creepers and huge fearful trees along with the frightening humming of bees, Himavān grieved very much. 28 to 31

“Oh! What a difficult plight! Along with her friends how did my tender daughter with soft feet enter the forest path filled with iron-like sharp thorns? On no occasion have I made her angry. Even so, why has she entered the forest with her friends? How can she be alive in this forest infested with carnivorous quadrupeds? She would die just out of fear. She might have been eaten up by quadrupeds or stung by serpents. Or else she might have been kidnapped by hunters or killed by bears. Anyway she is lost today. I cannot see her again”. Wailing thus and stumbling frequently and scorched by the Sun, Himavān dropped on the ground. 32 to 37

Then he was quickly moved under a tree by his followers and saved by sprinkling cool water. Gaining consciousness and opening his eyes Himavān who was agitated by grief thought only about his daughter. Then suddenly a messenger approached Himavān and after praising and prostrating pleased him by saying thus: "Oh Lord of the mountains! Your daughter is eight miles (krośacatuṣṭaya) away from here. She has been found by the servants sleeping on the bank of a river surrounded by her friends and our messengers are guarding her all around. I have reached your feet to communicate the news. You should quickly go and see Gaurī who is a source of joy for you." 38 to 43

Hearing the words of the messenger that were dripping elixir, Himavān suddenly rose as if getting life back and quickly went to the forest through the path shown by the messenger. There he saw his daughter and her friends sleeping. Taking her on his lap and smelling her head Himavān with tears of joy asked his daughter thus: 44 to 46

Listening to the sorrowful words of her father, Pārvatī, displaying her simplicity, fascinated everyone and said thus: "Oh Father! Listen to the truth which I will tell you. I have mentally taken the three-eyed Śiva as my husband. But based on the words of the divine sage Nārada, you are working against my desire. Hence I have come to the forest with the idea of sacrificing my life. I cannot marry Kṛṣṇa just as a sister cannot, her brother. If you tell me truly that you will offer me to Śambhu then I will go with you to the city or else I will live in the forest." Saying thus she embraced her father and wept. 49 to 53

The helpless Himavān seeing his weeping daughter consoled her by wiping her tears and said thus: "My Child! You really do not know Śiva who is Śiva just by name. He is inauspicious by his looks and character. He dwells in burial ground wearing serpents. Animal skin is his garment. Skulls form his garland. He is attended by devils. He is whitish as if suffering from vitiligo. He is mad with anger. Earlier His consort Dākṣāyaṇī grieved about His conduct and reduced herself to ashes in her father's house; whereas Viṣṇu is full of all good qualities. He is beautiful with yellow-garment, fragrant garland, Kaustubha gem and He is auspicious. Devī Lakṣmī married Him for His inherent excellent qualities. My child! Viṣṇu with comparable good qualities is suitable for you and not Śiva. 54 to 59

Listening to his daughter, Himavān who was worried about separation from her, agreed with her and took her to the city. Then he thought of offering his daughter to Śiva and in his assembly remembered Nārada. Knowing that, the effulgent Nārada appeared there. Himavān worshipped him as ordained in the scriptures. 62 to 64

Listening to Nārada, the sacred Himavān with folded hands begged Nārada for excuse and said thus: "Oh Sage! I had told you that I will offer my daughter to Viṣṇu. But due to my bad luck it has turned false. The next day after I told you that I will offer my daughter to Viṣṇu, my angry daughter entered along with her friends the fearsome forest which is like the mouth of death. With great difficulty we traced her and with effort brought her back. She does not want to wed Viṣṇu. Instead due to her ill-luck she wants to marry Śiva. Oh Sage! What should I do in this matter? Drowned as I am in the ocean of terrible adversity, you alone can save me." 67 to 73

Hearing Himavān, the divine sage in order to see the glory of Gaurī became very angry and remembered Vijaya and others who are the servants of Viṣṇu, and just by that remembrance, they came to Nārada. 74, 75

Then Nārada burning with anger said to Vijaya thus: "This mean Himavān who is a black-mark to the clan of the mountains, after promising to offer his daughter to my Lord Viṣṇu, is trying to humiliate us. Hence arrest him along with his daughter and take them to Viṣṇu to wed her." 76, 77

Hearing the words of Nārada, Vijaya the chief attendant defeated Himavān in the combat and captured him. Then all the citizens of Himavān yelled and thousands of ladies and children wailed and ran away. Menā along with her daughter went to Kaśyapa, the priest of the mountain race. Seeing her who was with fear holding her daughter and crying, "Help, Help" Kaśyapa said to her. "My child! Do not panic. Come". Saying thus, he took them inside his house and after consoling her addressed Pārvatī thus. 78 to 83

लीलयाऽलं महादेवि किं रोदिषि भयाऽर्तवत्। जानेऽहं न च ते भीतिरस्यान्मोहयितुं हि तत्॥

“Oh Mahādevī Pārvatī! Why are you weeping as if afraid? Please stop your sport. I know that you have no fear. You are indeed deluding us by your fear.” 1

ततो मेनां भयाऽर्ता तां प्राह पर्वतराट् प्रियाम्। शृणु मेने मोहिताऽसि देव्या संस्मर पूर्वजम्॥ २

Then Kaśyapa addressed the frightened Menā, the wife of Himavān thus: “Oh Menā! Listen. You are illusioned. Recollect the previous birth of the Devī. Oh Queen of Himavān! Seek shelter along with me under the same Devī after worshipping whom you got your daughter.” 2, 3

श्रुत्वा पुरोहितवचः स्मृत्वा कन्यां पराम्बिकाम्। प्रणम्य दण्डवद्भूमौ तुष्टाव विविधैः स्तवैः॥ ४

Listening to the words of the priest and remembering the virgin Great Mother, Menā prostrating on the ground pleased Her through varieties of prayers. 4

लोकानां जनयित्री त्वं सर्वलोकमहेश्वरी। मत्तनूद्भवत्वं यत्ते नटानां वेषवत्तु तत् ॥ ५॥
अहो धन्यतमा लोके मत्तो नाऽन्यो हि विद्यते। अनन्तपुण्यैश्चाऽदृश्या सा मे यस्मात्तनूद्भवा॥ ६

“You are the Mother of the Universe and the Supreme Devī. By your birth through me, you are really putting on costumes like an actor. There is no one in the world more fortunate than me because you who are invisible to persons with infinite merits, are born to me.” 5, 6

अथ संस्तुत्य बहुधा काश्यपः प्राह शङ्करीम्। मातर्न ते स्तुतिं कर्तुं समर्थो ह्यहिराडपि ॥ ७॥

Then Kaśyapa profusely praised Śaṅkarī and said thus: “Oh Mother! Even the Lord of the serpents (Ādiśeṣa) is incapable of praising you. Hence, can I praise You? Oh Great Devī! Bless me. Protect, the beloved of Himavān, the mother of Pārvatī who is helpless and frightened.” 7, 8

Thus praised, Gaurī assumed her real form. Dark like a destructive cloud, seated on the Lion, shining with embellishments, wielding weapons with blazing edges, with three eyes, wearing golden garments, with the moon decorating Her head, She proceeded from the palace like the Sun from the ocean. 9, 10

अथ तां नारदो दृष्ट्वा प्रणम्य विविधैः स्तवैः ॥ ११ ॥
 अस्तूयत परां देवीं गौरीं शङ्करवल्लभाम्।

Then Nārada seeing the supreme Devī Gaurī, the consort of Śaṅkara, bowed to Her and praised Her through many hymns. 11

Meanwhile the servants of Viṣṇu, after binding Himavān, came there to catch his daughter Gaurī. Seeing them and Her defeated father who was wailing, Gaurī became red with anger. From Her body emerged the dreadful Devī Aruṇā who was exuding fire from her mouth, who was dark like the deadly night, who had three heads and three eyes, who was wielding the trident and the sword and making a terrible noise. She bowed to Gaurī and asked Her what should be done. Then Gaurī ordered her to destroy the servants of Viṣṇu in Her presence. 12 to 16

Then Aruṇā with the fire emerging from her sword and trident, burnt and destroyed the servants of Viṣṇu who were equal to Viṣṇu by their looks, valour and weapons. Hearing that news, the angry Viṣṇu appeared there mounted on Garuḍa, wielding the Sudarśana disc. He saw Aruṇā Devī who was fearful with her blazing mouth and discharged the Sudarśana Disc (with thousand teeth) that was enveloped by huge fire. Then Aruṇā seeing the Sudarśana Disc which was brilliant like crores of Suns, which was in the sky reducing everything to ashes just like the fire of dissolution, despatched her trident against that Disc. That trident which was released from the hand of Aruṇā very quickly reduced to ashes the Sudarśana Disc just like the fire, a blade of grass. Then the angry Viṣṇu with his mace chased Aruṇā Devī with great speed and struck her on the head. Thus struck, the Jvālāvaktrā blew a blaze in front of Viṣṇu whereby Garuḍa the Lord of the birds was burnt.

Then all the gods and human beings, seeing Jvālāmukhī catching hold of Viṣṇu and swallowing him, cried in agony. As the angry Jvālāmukhī was about to swallow Viṣṇu, Gaurī held her throat and said thus with a smile. "Oh Darling! Enough of your courage. Spit out my brother who is the protector of the universe. Otherwise the three worlds will soon be destroyed."

Then Viṣṇu, spat out by Aruṇā, fell unconscious on the ground and the mass of fire also was thrown out along with Viṣṇu. Then Gaurī quickly pulled out Viṣṇu who was amidst the flame. 28, 29

That flame pervaded sidewise, upward and all round. Seeing that devastating dreadful flame Brahmā and other gods who were frightened prayed to the Great Devī Gaurī and trembling they said in a loud voice thus: "Protect us, protect us". 30, 31

The glorified Devī said with dignity to the gods who had sought shelter under Her. "Oh Gods! Do not be afraid. I have granted protection to you. Speak out quickly, the boon that you want from Me" 32

Hearing this, Brahmā and the other gods spoke to the daughter of Himavān thus: "Oh Devī! Please quell this growing flame which is like the fire of dissolution and save the moving and non-moving creation" 33, 34

Thus requested by the gods, Gaurī suppressed the flame and addressed the gods thus: "Oh Gods! Listen to me. This Jvalāmukhī who has emerged out of My anger and indeed engaged in swallowing the Universe, cannot be totally controlled. Now let her stay in this great mountain. Pleased with the worship by gods and human beings let her grant their wants. At the time of final destruction she will be content devouring the entire universe. She is the destructive power of Rudra. In association with her, Śiva will destroy the entire universe." 35 to 38

Saying thus, the Devī casting Her ambrosial glances revived Viṣṇu and the group of servants who had died. After being praised by Viṣṇu and others, She assumed Her form as the daughter of Himavān and released Her father who was bound. 39, 40

Even after seeing the divine form of Gaurī and understanding Her glory, Himavān deluded by the illusory power of Gaurī really forgot that immediately and thought that he has been somehow set free. Then he embraced his daughter and fondled her and bowed to the gods. With folded hands he addressed Viṣṇu the Lord of the three worlds. 41 to 43

You please pardon me for my mistake. Your son Brahmā and other gods have assembled here. Instruct me, who has surrendered to you, about what I should do now." 44 to 46

Hearing the words of Himavān, Brahmā said with a smile thus: "Oh Lord of Mountains! You are blessed to have a daughter like this who deserves the Great Lord Śiva alone as Her husband. Even Śiva deserves Her who is the repository of virtues as his wife. How can Viṣṇu who is Her brother become Her husband? Oh Best among mountains! Right away I will mediate with Śiva to marry your daughter." Saying thus, Brahmā approached Śiva and after bowing and lauding the great Lord Śaṅkara the benefactor of the world, said to Him thus: 47 to 50

महादेव प्रार्थयामो वयं पर्वतनन्दिनीम् । प्रतीच्छ भार्यामात्मीयां कालेऽस्मिन्नेव शोभने ॥ ५१ ॥
 नैतद्वचो निषेधाऽहं पूर्ववृत्तं च संस्मर ।

"Oh Mahādeva! We request you to accept the daughter of Himavān as your wife at this moment which is auspicious. Our request does not deserve to be discarded. Please recollect the past incidence." 51

Thus requested by Brahmā, Śiva wholly agreed. Then Brahmā said to Himavān thus: "Your task is achieved. The Great God Śiva has accepted to marry your daughter. At this sacred moment itself you can offer your daughter to Him." 52, 53

Listening to Brahmā, Himavān said thus: "Oh Lord Brahmā! No arrangement has been made for the great wedding. Without preparation and without inviting prominent persons of our clan, I am unable to understand how to proceed with the wedding." 54, 55

Hearing Himavān, Brahmā called the divine builder Tvaṣṭr and ordered him to arrange all the items required for the wedding. Thus instructed, the divine builder created in a short time the marriage hall, the platforms, the vessels, the fire, the garments, the ornaments, the garlands, seats and beds all around. He arranged plenitude of food and drinks. Then he reported to Brahmā that everything was made ready.

Seeing that, Brahmā showed it to Himavān who with happiness bowed to Brahmā. Then Brahmā told the divine messengers to go in divine cars and bring quickly the brahmins, kings and other relatives of Himavān. Those messengers very quickly came back with all of them.

60 to 62

Thus ordered, Himavān soon went to his palace. After arranging the sacred ablutions for his daughter and completing the ordained formalities through his guru Kāśyapa, Himavān proceeded from the palace along with his beloved daughter, relatives and their wives and entered the marriage hall and stayed there. 64 to 66

Himavān saw Mahādeva who was hideous with matted hair and emaciated, who was wearing a garland of skulls around the neck, a serpent as an earring and a poisonous snake as the sacred thread; who had three ugly looking eyes; who was surrounded by his retinue of frantic frightening devils with disfigured faces living in burial ground. Seeing him Himavān was grieved. Looking at Himavān whose face was languid with sorrow and understanding his mind Brahmā spoke to him thus: 69 to 72

किं नगेश्वर शोकेन सम्प्लुतोऽसि शुभाऽगमे ॥ ७३ ॥

“Oh Lord of the Mountain! Why are you drowned in grief at this fortunate time? You are not aware of the wonderful aspects of the Great Lord Śiva.” Saying thus, Brahmā bowed and requested Śiva. “Oh Maheśvara! Oh Lord! Seeing You in this form Himavān is depressed. Please show him Your universally unique beautiful form.” 73 to 75

Upon that request Śiva endowed with Supreme wealth and power presented Himself beautiful like a crore of cupids, with a complexion like molten gold, with eyes like blue lily, with a crown set with shining diamonds, with red garments and garland, with many ornaments. His retinue also with colourful ornaments and dresses resembled Him and were serving Him. Seeing the beautiful Śiva, Himavān was happy and exclaimed that his daughter was fortunate to have such a husband who is the Lord of the entire Universe and who is universally attractive.

On hearing Brahmā, Śiva held the palm of Gaurī and Himavān along with his wife Menā poured water on their hands. Then the high sound from the musical instruments mixed with auspicious chants was heard everywhere. The Gandharvas sang, the heavenly damsels danced, the panegyrists praised, heaven showered flowers, the gentle breeze wafted fragrance in all directions, Vasiṣṭha and other seers chanted Śaiva Upaniṣads. 85 to 88

Brahmā performed the wedding rituals of Śaṅkara. At that time Himavān honoured all the brahmins and guests with countless jewels, garments and money. In the same manner Himavān worshipped Brahmā and other gods with plenty of presents as ordained. Himavān served palatable food with varieties of dishes, drinks to all. The Brahmins satisfied with the gifts departed after blessing the couple. Thus during the wedding, Himavān gifted a lot of wealth. To his beloved daughter Pārvatī, the happy Himavān presented countless gems, garments, jewels, elephants, horses, chariots and servants. Then Śiva accepting all the presents decided to go to His abode along with Pārvatī while Brahmā, Viṣṇu and other gods were praising His glorious deeds. 89 to 96

Then Maheśa praised by the gods and permitted by Himavān proceeded along with Pārvatī from Himavān's garden. 1

Filled with love Himavān followed them to a short distance. Then Maheśvara, understanding the unwillingness of His father-in-law who was following them to get back, looked with a smile at Pārvatī. 2, 3

Then, seeing his daughter who was the Supreme Devī, Himavān understood Her reality and all the principles of the world and dispelled of illusion and permitted by Śiva and Pārvatī returned to his dwelling along with abundant self glory. After asking Brahmā and others to return to their respective abodes, Śiva along with Pārvatī and His retinue reached Kailāsa and decided to perform penance. 5 to 8

Then on the banks of the divine river Gangā, Mahādeva sitting under a banyan tree located in a sacred place, performed penance for one thousand divine years. During that time He reduced to ashes Manmatha who was disturbing His penance.

“Oh Bhārgava! In this manner even Kāma was burnt by Śiva.”

Listening the wonderful story, Paraśurāma inquired again thus: “Oh compassionate ascetic! The ambrosial stream of story flowing from your lotus-like face is increasing my thirst even as I have drunk a lot. Like an intoxicated bee I am never satisfied. I desire to drink that again through my ears. How was Kāma burnt by Śiva? Why did Kāma hinder the penance of Śiva? Please tell me all that, who is inquiring again and again. Then again how did Viṣṇu recover the Sudarśana Disc that was burnt by Jvālāmukhī. Oh Guru! please tell me about that also.”

Thus eagerly inquired, Dattātreya the Great Yogi narrated the legend. “Oh Supreme in the Bhṛgu clan! Listen. I will narrate it to you. After a lapse of time of Viṣṇu the Lord of the three worlds losing his Sudarśana, a powerful demon by name Mura came to fight with Him. During the combat Viṣṇu without Sudarśana became dull just like a bull without horns.

Then Brahmā said to Hari thus: 'Oh Hari! Listen, without Sudarśana you cannot win this demon. Hence you propitiate with concentration the Devī Jvālāmukhī. Getting the disc from Her, you will be able to defeat this Mura.' 19, 20

Then Viṣṇu went to the Himālayan mountain, the abode of the Supreme Devī Jvālāmukhī where she lived day and night with Her burning face. There, after taking bath Viṣṇu with control of his body, mind and speech worshipped Jvālāmukhī and performed severe penance for one thousand years without food, without support, with raised arms and closed eyes. 23, 24

Then the pleased Mahēśvarī Jvālāmukhī appeared before Viṣṇu to grant his desires. She was effulgent like a crore of Suns; Her complexion was red like the rising Sun; Her three heads were decorated with shining crowns; She was wielding the sword and the trident and wearing a garland of skulls; from Her eyes, ears, nose and hairpits was emerging every second, a huge flame. Born out of the anger of Gaurī, she was looking fierce. She was being praised by an assembly of Gods, Gandharvas, Apsaras and surrounded by Her own retinue who were singing and dancing.

Then Devī Jvālāmukhī who was happy with the prayers, addressed Viṣṇu thus: 'Oh Viṣṇu! Oh Lord of the world! I am pleased. Ask for your desired boon. I will grant it to you all. There is nothing which you do not deserve. Being the brother of my Devī you are adorable everywhere.'

Listening to this, Viṣṇu with folded hands said thus: 'Oh Devī! Lend your ears. In the past I was created by the Great Devī Tripurasundarī for protecting this world indeed. According to Her command I am always engaged in protecting the world. But now some demon known by the name Mura intent on destroying the world is harassing all the gods. Requested by the gods when I was engaged along with my battalion in the war with him to kill him, I was rendered powerless for want of Sudarśana disc. I have approached you to get Sudarśana. Now, please protect the moving and non-moving creation by giving the disc to me. Or, you may by your immense power destroy the lord of the demons.'

Listening to the request from Viṣṇu, Devī Jvālāmukhī addressed Him with a simile thus: 'Oh Nārāyaṇa! You are Trivikrama the dear brother of Gaurī. I am obedient to Her. Hence you are really venerable to me. Even though I am capable of destroying the demon, we are all bound by the command of Śrī Tripurasundarī. When out of fear towards Her the wind blows, the Sun rises, the Moon rises along with the stars, the Earth holds the creation, the sea does not transgress the shore, how can I freely be without respect for Her. I am pleased by your penance. Take your weapon.' Saying thus, the benevolent Jvālāmukhī took out from her weapon the Sudarśana disc with a thousand blazing teeth and gave it to Viṣṇu. She also said thus: 'This Sudarśana Disc is more powerful than the previous one and is unfailing and unassailable. Your desire will be fulfilled. By this disc you will conquer the worlds and nothing remains to be won. Go and quickly kill the demon and bless the world.' Then the Devī Śivā (Jvālāmukhī) disappeared soon like a dream.

“Oh Bhārgava! Listen as to how later Kāma was reduced to ashes. After marrying Pārvatī Śiva performed a great penance. After the passage of a long time a demon named Tāraka and another by name Śūrapadma with their might and arrogance acquired through intense penance, became the lords of the eighteen worlds. Defeated by them Indra the lord of the gods helplessly approached the creator Brahmā. Seeing Indra who had lost his glory and was standing reverentially, Brahmā after giving a thought spoke to him thus: ‘Oh Indra! Listen. That Lord of the demons possesses great power. Tāraka and Śūrapadma who were mentioned by me earlier are invincible either by you or anyone else except by Svāminātha the son and fortune of Mahādeva. Hence go to Śiva and request him to beget a son. His son by becoming the chief of the army of gods will vanquish the demon and restore your wealth of the three worlds.’

Hearing the words of Brahmā, Indra along with the gods rushed to pray to Śiva. Reaching there, Indra saw the tranquil blue-necked Great God, the consort of Devī Umā, the protector of all. He saw Śiva who had closed His eyes, who was surrounded by sages like Sanaka and others who were great by their sātvic qualities and a serene pure mind like the autumnal waters. In that place no one was moving, no one was breathing heavily, nor seeing each other, nor talking. The birds did not chirp, the wind was speedless, the Sun not scorching, the branches motionless. Every thing looked like a still painting. Indra was unable to stand even at a distance. Overpowered by the heat of penance, Indra was indeed not able to see.

Then Indra thinking that none other than Br̥haspati, the Guru can protect him, remembered the Guru with concentration. As soon as Indra remembered, the king among yogis presented himself. Seeing the Guru, Indra felt relieved. Holding his feet and bowing down with folded hands the helpless grieved Indra said thus: 'Oh Guru! Look at me who has lost the kingdom and drowned for long in the ocean of misery without any other saviour. Ordered by Brahmā I came here to request Śiva to beget a son. Then Indra performed penance for one year to please Devī Gaurī. The pleased Gaurī appeared before him and said thus: 'Oh Indra! Speak out what you want.' Then Indra seeing the Devī prostrated before Her and praised Her with many hymns and said with folded hands thus: 'Oh Devī! I have indeed lost my kingdom to the demon. I was told by Brahmā that the son of Mahādeva will help me and that there is no other way to achieve my goal. Hence I came here to have my desire fulfilled. But on seeing Śiva engaged in penance I have lost hopes. As urged by Brhaspati I am seeking shelter under you. Please save me from the ocean of difficulty.' Saying thus Indra again fell prostrate at Her feet. 74 to 80

"Requested by Indra, the Devī narrated thus: 'Oh Indra! Listen why

Śiva and I were cursed. Once in the past when I was living in my father's house in Himālaya, I went to the forest along with my friends to see the autumnal beauty. Ordered by my father a thousand hunters followed me as bodyguards. In that forest I saw a rare beautiful deer engaged in love with her partner. I ordered the hunters to catch them for my sport. All the hunters surrounded the pair of deers and brought them to me. The female deer was sighing and weeping. The male deer said thus: 'Oh Devī! I am Suhotra belonging to Kāśyapa lineage living in this forest along with this lady who is the daughter of the sage Bharadvāja. Seeing a pair of deers she desired a similar love-sport from me and assuming the form of the female deer she was amorous.' In that context even though requested to be excused for my ignorant act he cursed me (not to have conjugal bliss). 5 to 14

They are capable of creating a hundred universes in a moment. Hence any effort of ours, will not work. Therefore let us go to Mahādeva who will do good to us.' Saying thus Viṣṇu reached Kailāsa along with Brahmā and others. 21 to 25

I know why you have come to me. Presently the brahmins shielded by the blaze of their penance would burn to ashes just by their proximity even as a fire burns a straw. In this regard, let us deliberate along with great ministers about defeating the brahmins.' Saying thus, Śiva leaving out others discussed at length point by point with the prominent leaders of the gods after seating them. 26 to 29

Even Śiva for the sake of the gods went along with His attendants on his bull to the forest where the brahmins were engaged in penance. Then watching the brahmins going out to fetch sacred fuel and flowers, Śiva entered their hermitage. Assuming a beautiful form resembling a crore of cupids, Śiva presented himself to the wives of the brahmins. 34 to 36

Let the penis of this paramour by which he has defiled our wives, fall off in our presence.' That is how Śiva was cursed by the brahmins. 'Therefore, Oh Indra! How can you achieve your goal. There is no chance of Śiva getting a child.'

Listening to Pārvatī, Indra eagerly inquired thus: 'Oh Devī! I would like to listen to what Śiva did later. How was his penis cut off and after that, what happened to it?' 51, 52

योनिरूपेण तस्योर्ध्वे संस्थितः कमलेक्षणः ।

Thus questioned by Indra, Gaurī answered him thus: 'After the curse, the penis of Śiva, who was in the sky, got separated and began to drop down the sky. Seeing the falling genital, Brahmā urged Viṣṇu thus: 'Oh Viṣṇu! If this penis of Śiva falls on the earth, definitely the earth will split into a hundred pieces. There is none other than you who can bear this. Hence to avoid this calamity, become its support in the form of vulva. I will support you as your base.' Saying thus, Brahmā the creator placed himself as a pedestal. Above that Viṣṇu took the form of a vulva.

Then soon the Linga (penis) dropped in the middle of the vulva and by its impact the vulva got split. Breaking the vulva, the Linga entered the pedestal. Viṣṇu and Brahmā held that Linga with great effort. By its weight the trembling earth which was entering the Rasātala (a lower world) was firmly held in position by Viṣṇu in the form of Ādiśeṣa the serpent. 58 to 60

Seeing Śiva who was slightly peaceful having obtained His penis, Viṣṇu after bowing and praying repeatedly said with folded hands thus: 'Oh Mahādeva! Oh Lord of the Universe! Protect the moving and non-moving creations that are getting destroyed by Your flame of anger. Please withdraw the flame. We will always worship Your Liṅga which has fallen.' Saying thus Viṣṇu worshipped that Liṅga with several rituals as ordained and with circumambulatory prostrations prayed wonderfully.

Then Śiva pacified by the worship of his Liṅga went near Viṣṇu and addressed him this: 'Oh Viṣṇu! Listen. I have been worshipped by you for the first time in the Liṅga unconventionally to have my blessing. From this day I will be pleased by the worship of the Liṅga alone by all and not otherwise. Let all the gods and human beings install me in the form of the Liṅga and I will dwell there. The trinity with Brahmā as the pedestal, Viṣṇu as the yoni and me as the Liṅga will in conjunction be the fourth form of Parameśvara.' Saying thus the three-eyed Śambhu himself worshipped the Liṅga. Brahmā, Indra and all the other gods offered their worship.

"Oh Indra! I have told you the glorious story of Śiva. I have also told you from the start, the reason for His curse."

Then the pleased Girijā addressed Indra thus: "Oh Indra! Listen. I will tell you the purifying anecdote. People on earth came to know about the worship of the Linga by the gods and did not heed it perhaps considering it to be hostile to the world. Then Śiva, seeing the discontinuance of Linga worship on the earth, performed extremely severe penance to propitiate Devī Tripurasundarī. After ten thousand years, the pleased Devī presented Herself in the visible form. 2 to 5

Then Indra quickly returned to his abode and immediately remembered Manmatha regarding the job on hand. By that mere remembrance, Manmatha made his appearance at that same moment along with Ratī in the assembly of Indra. Manmatha, the juvenile repository of charm, wielding the flower-arrow and the sugarcane bow and embracing the indescribably beautiful Ratī, lured the sight and mind of the gods. 25 to 28

Then the extremely grieved Ratī embracing her husband around his neck and weeping, tried her best to stop him. She said, "Oh dear! How will I survive while your glory alone survives? Please withdraw your vow of self-annihilation. Let us get back to our city. Living persons alone will enjoy auspiciousness. Truth, penance, valour and all are for life only. What is their use if one dies. If you do not concede my words, I will in your presence discard this life and then you can go as you wish. Oh Dearest! I am telling you the truth. Separated from you I will be unable to live even for a second."

Listening to his beloved Ratī who had embraced him around his neck, the brave Manmatha said thus: "Oh My Beloved! Listen. The brave do not grieve in times of distress. Sorrow destroys all benefits. Even Brahmā and others cannot alter what is in store. Oh My Love! I will join you again soon. Till such time worship Devī Tripurasundarī with a pure mind who will grant you all your wants."

Seeing his Mother, Kāma placing Ratī on the ground, bowed to Her and narrated his story. "Oh Mother! Having promised Indra that I will accomplish his task, how can I go against it like a bad person on the earth? Hence I will go to Śiva to conquer him. Then Kāma quickly proceeded on his chariot by name Caitra, meditating on the auspicious lotus feet of the Mother Śrī Tripurasundarī. On his way on the banks of the beautiful divine river Gaṅgā, after bathing he propitiated with a steady mind the Supreme Devī. 1, 2

When Manmatha with subdued senses meditated on the feet of Śrī Tripurasundarī and became tranquil and introvert, then the Great Devī Śrī Tripurasundarī stood near him. She was, red like the rising Sun, wearing the Moon on Her head, with three-eyes, wielding in Her lotus like hands the noose, the goad, the bow and the arrows; shining with a crown bedecked with nine types of gems, young with exquisite charm, being praised by a host of gods. 3 to 6

Seeing Her, Kāma prostrated before Her feet. The Devī placed Her lotus hand on his head. Touched by Her lotus palm Manmatha felt blessed and was horripilated with tears of joy. After rising, he saw the Devī and filled with ecstasy praised Her with a choked voice unaware of his own existence. 7 to 9

Lakṣmī after bowing and praying to the Supreme Devī Śrī Tripurasundarī said thus: "Oh Mother! Manmatha who is the enhancer of my joy is the foremost among your devotees. Hearing Ramā, Devī Tripurā said in a dignified tone thus: "Oh Lakṣmī! Listen. My devotee will never perish. Till he gets a new body let him stay in my eyes. Let him be reduced to ashes by Śaṅkara according to the curse from Gaurī. Subsequently he will get a beautiful body and bring happiness to you and Ratī." Saying thus, Devī Tripurā looked at Manmatha and absorbed him in Her eyes and became famous as "Kāmākṣī". 14 to 17

Manmatha who merged in Her looked as if in deep sleep (susupti). Then his body dropped in front of Śrī Tripurā and Lakṣmī. From the hairpits of his body, crores and crores of Kāmas came out all around. After ordering them to induce desire in the living beings, the Great Devī Tripurā by Her power of illusion made the body of Manmatha rise. His body rose as if from sleep. The Supreme Devī called him by the name 'Kāma' and gave him magical flower arrows and sugarcane bow and blessed him to defeat Mahādeva who was performing penance. 19 to 22

Then Kāma riding his chariot and wielding the flower-arrows and the sugarcane bow reached the place where the blue-necked Śiva was in penance. Devendra, also to get his task done, followed Kāma and seeing Śiva absorbed in penance stood at a distance along with his retinue watching the victory of Kāma. 23, 24

Realising the disturbance in His mind, Śiva opened his eyes and saw the daughter of Himavān. Realising the mental aberration, the furious Śiva saw by his side Manmatha who was wielding the bow and the flower arrow and merely by that angry look Manmatha was reduced to ashes as Indra and others were watching, just like a heap of cotton by a destructive fire. 26 to 29

“Oh Venerable Guru! I heard the delightful wonderful glory of the manifestation of Gaurī and the burning of Kāma. Now I would like to listen how, after the union of Śiva and Gaurī, Kumāra was born and how he vanquished the demons? Also how Manmatha, the dear son of Lakṣmī and the dispeller of the sorrow of Ratī, who had merged with the eyes of Śrī Tripurasundarī, came into existence. Oh Guru! With compassion tell me, your disciple, who has surrendered to you. Who on earth including an ignorant person excepting non-moving things will become satisfied drinking the nectarian, juicy, auspicious story of the Great Mother flowing from your moon-like face which destroys a heap of misery. Please tell that story to me, who is bowing and requesting you.”

Thus inquired by Paraśurāma, Guru Dattātreya started narrating by addressing thus: “Oh Paraśurāma! Listen. After Manmatha who was reduced to ashes by Śiva, Indra was extremely sad for not having his want fulfilled and he requested Brahmā to achieve this desire. 6 to 8

Then Brahmā addressed Indra and others who were in front of him thus: "Oh Gods! Listen. You should know that Śiva, even after a thousand years of life with Pārvatī, has not released His seminal energy accumulated over a long period of penance. If he were to release that completely it would really burn the entire earth because of its mighty prowess. Hence we will go again to Śiva." Saying thus, Brahmā proceeded to Śiva along with Indra and other gods. 17 to 20

Thus requested by the gods, Mahādeva refrained from excessive copulation. Then the agitated mountain like seminal fluid dropped on the Earth who was unable to bear that power which was burning her. Then she went to Brahmā and said thus: "Oh Brahmā! I am unable to carry the power of Mahādeva. I am being burnt. Please protect me who is seeking shelter under you." 23 to 25

Brahmā thoughtfully told Agni thus: "Abandon the great power of Śaṅkara in this Gaṅgā who will carry it." Listening to Brahmā, Gaṅgā with folded palms said thus to him. "Oh Lord! Without any benefit I will never bear the energy of another person. If the child so born will soon become my son, I will bear it. But not otherwise." After Brahmā agreed, Gaṅgā carried that energy of Śiva and very soon being burnt by it became a boiling river with tears and fumes and dead water creatures. Approaching Brahmā, Gaṅgā with a lowered, shy face said thus: "Oh Brahman! I have no interest in bearing this power. Boiling as I am, I am emaciated. The water creatures are suffering. The ocean does not want my company. I will end up a dry river. With mercy please tell me where I should deposit this power of Śiva." 32 to 39

When the all consuming Agni, the all tolerating Earth, and me Gaṅgā the best among rivers are unable to bear, how can the bamboo grove take on the energy. Oh Brahmā! There must be a substantial reason for this. Please tell me, if I deserve to listen to it.” 42 to 44

Hence without any doubt you abandon there the energy of Śiva.” 45 to 48

Hearing thus, Gaṅgā deposited the potency of Śiva in the bamboo forest. With that energy the bamboo forest grew densely. At the proper time the energy of Śiva became the adorable child Kumāra. Brahmā saw him first and other gods reached there later. 49 to 50

There, all the gods saw the wonderful child Kumāra whose golden hue conquered the brilliance of crores of Suns, whose eyes were broad, whose chest was broad and arms long, whose charm put to shame the beauty of crores of cupids. "Oh Bhārgava! Seeing him Agni said 'He is my son'. Then Gāṅgā said 'He is my son'." 51 to 53

Along with Pārvatī, Śiva saw the child. Both of them were very happy knowing him as their progeny. 54

For the said reasons, Brahmā named the child thus: "He is 'Agnibhū' the son of Agni; Gāṅgeya the son of Gāṅgā, the son of Pārvatī as well; 'Skanda' born from the spilled virility of Śiva". Then Brahmā thinking about who will take care of the baby employed the Kṛttika stars for that job. Taking Kumāra as their own baby the Kṛttikas competed to feed the baby. Seeing their competition Kumāra assumed six faces and simultaneously drank their breast milk and thus got the names as "Ṣaṇmukha" and "Kārtikeyā". 55 to 59

Suckled by the Kṛttikas, he quickly grew like a mountain with six peaks and seeing him the gods were greatly astonished. Then seeing all the gods, Skanda said thus: "All of you offer your strength to me".

Then Brahmā offered his rosary; Śiva the trident, Agni the spear; Viṣṇu the disc; wind-god (Vāyu) the goad; Varuṇa the noose; Yama the staff; Kubera the mace; Ocean many gem-set ornaments; Viśvakarmā the sandals and very clean fans. All the gods offered worship to him and bowed.

Then a great war started between Skanda and Indra. Skanda was supported by the attendants of Śiva; Indra got the support from other gods. Seeing the mighty power of Skanda who was fearsome, Indra fled and hid himself within the Krauñca mountain. The angry Skanda shattered the Krauñca mountain which was in front of him, by many arrows.

Then the Krauñca mountain which was slackened with its many peaks broken, sought refuge under Brahmā. Then Skanda who was pacified by the prayer of Brahmā, returned the conquered wealth of the three worlds to Indra who had become obedient and thus became the chief of the army of the gods. As the chief of their army, Skanda along with Indra and others waged a war with the demons Tāraka and Śūrapadma who were known for their lordship over eighteen worlds.

Fighting for a long time with many groups consisting of crores and crores (100 crores x crores x crore) of demons and displaying his strength, Skanda killed Śūrapadma and Tāraka. Then Skanda made Indra and others as rulers of the worlds. By destroying the demons, Skanda the dispeller of difficulties, the Lord with Six faces established happiness in the world.

After hearing the ambrosial story of Skanda narrated by the great Dattātreya, the curious Paraśurāma inquired again thus: "Oh Lord! I heard your narration. But I have a great doubt. I will express that to you. Please clarify. How was Skanda able to destroy the Lord of the demons who was invincible by Śiva, Viṣṇu, and Indra. I am eager to know about it. Please tell me."

Then Guru Dattātreyā lovingly addressed Paraśurāma thus: "Oh Paraśurāma! Listen to the ancient secret. The venerable august Sanatkumāra the embodiment of all souls, the knower of the past and the future, who dwells in all, who is quiet, who revels in Self-joy was residing in the Rṣabha mountain. Then Brahmā went there to see his son. Seeing His father Sanatkumāra stood up and offered worship like giving a seat and other respects. After the worship he humbly expressed his mind to Brahmā. 79 to 82

Inquired by Sanatkumāra, Brahmā the creator said thus: "Oh My Son! Listen. In your earlier birth while learning about absolute knowledge you had heard about the war between the gods and the demons. Then you had determined to vanquish all the demons and hand over the wealth to the gods. To achieve that you practised "Vaiśvānara Vidyā", but died in between. Because of the partial practice even though you were fit to achieve the highest goal, you became my son. Your dream is the unconscious impressions in your mind and it will come true. 86 to 90

After a lapse of time once Śambhu seated along with Pārvatī on the bull was watching the world, reached the hermitage of Sanatkumāra. In that hermitage Girijā saw the son of Brahmā seated, who had a pellucid face, who was calm, tranquil and cool. Seeing such a sage, She inquired Sankara thus: "Oh Mahēśa! Who is this unperturbed, calm person, a kind not to be seen anywhere in the entire creation?" 94 to 97

Thus questioned by Girijā, the God with the bull-banner said thus: "He is the famous sage called Sanatkumāra the son of Brahmā. Having attained Absoluteness he is immersed in Supreme Bliss and ever detached and accomplished. Because of his detached nature, he has no anguish. Oh Pārvatī! Indulgence is the root cause of suffering." 98, 99

Thereupon Śiva told Pārvatī what was appropriate at that moment. "Oh Dear! Listen. We should not go anywhere without a purpose. By doing so one will suffer humiliation." Seeing Pārvatī anxious to go there even after his advice, Śiva along with Pārvatī reached the hermitage of Sanatkumāra. Alighting from the bull they stood in front of the sage.

Sanatkumāra did not look at them thinking that there was no use in their knowing his mind. Śiva and Pārvatī stood before him for a long time.

Then the neglected Lord Śiva taking it as an insult decided to test his maturity and angrily shouted at Sanatkumāra and said thus: "Oh wicked one! Your behaviour is uncultured. Insulting good persons will soon ruin one's glory. I have excused your misbehaviour because you are the son of Brahmā. Do not once more neglect persons like me."

Hearing Śambhu, Sanatkumāra spoke thus: "Oh Śiva! I cannot be frightened. I have no fear from anywhere. Swallowing the cause of fear I am doubtlessly free on my own. Heaving discarded the consequences of action I am not worried either about crores of curses or crores of boons. I do not experience any thing special or unspecial any time from any thing. He who is the support of all speciality does not depend on any thing special. I consume all distinction just as fuel by the burning fire. So curse me or bless me as you please quickly without hesitation. I am very much blessed by your presence here. Without effort I have propitiated you who are to be worshipped arduously with many services." Saying thus Sanatkumāra remained silent. 109 to 115

तथाऽप्यकंथं मत्वा तम् ओमित्याह महेश्वरः। यदि दास्यसि मे कामं प्रतीच्छ मम पुत्रताम् ॥

Then Mahēśvara seeing the firm Sanatkumāra agreed and said thus "If you desire to grant my desire, then you should be born as my son" 120

Granting that boon, Sanatkumāra spoke again thus: "Oh Śaṅkara! Your request is really trivial. I am the son of even the low-born creatures. Tell me what is difficult about becoming your son. I will be born as your son and not to Pārvatī anyway. I have granted the boon that was requested only by you." 121, 122

Then Devī Pārvatī spoke to the great sage thus: "Oh Son of Brahmā! Indeed I have also a request to you. Because we share our body, you will be my son as well. Equal worship to guests is the conduct of the virtuous. When Śiva has got the boon, how can I return with empty hands. The wise say that disparity is not a good trait." 123 to 125

Thus requested, the sage thought for a while and addressed Śaṅkarī thus: "Oh Devī! Why are you deluding me with primitive words. You are the Mother of the Universe who has accomplished everything. Listen to the truth which I relish. Your earlier body which split into pieces on the mountain has grown as a golden bamboo grove. I will be born there through contact with your earlier body and you will be happy."

Thus told and adored, Śiva and Pārvatī proceeded to the place of their liking. Sanatkumāra who had by the greatness of his excellent knowledge attained oneness with Brahmā and all the gods and demons, and grown in strength vanquished the mighty Tāraka and other demons. I have thus narrated to you Bhārgava, the legend of the birth of Kumāra.

I had mentioned earlier about the auspicious Sarasvatī, the sister of Śiva. She who is subtle, is known as Sāvitrī because she protects the three classes of people. She is the consort of Brahmā and her marriage was narrated to you earlier. Oh Paraśurāma! Once in the assembly of Satyaloka near Brahmā, she was variously praised individually by the Siddhās and Divine Sages who were present there. Brahmā was sitting with an indifferent smile towards the prayers. Observing his indifference, the angry Sarasvatī spoke thus: ‘Your disinterest in me is absolutely improper. You married me when you were unable to create the world on your own. Recollect your pitiable, unskilled condition prior to my entry, when you sought shelter under Devī Tripurasundarī. 2 to 7

Hearing Sāvitrī, Brahmā burning with fury said thus: ‘You should not talk like that to me. Husband is God unto women. Adoration of a wife in the presence of her husband is highly objectionable. Without knowing the conduct of an obedient wife you are abusing me in vain. By your misconduct you are unfit to be my wife. In future you will never be with me in any sacred ritual.' 8 to 10

Listening to the counter curse. Brahmā was again furious. 13

Then all the gods, seeing both Brahmā and Sāvitrī very furious, surrounded them and praised them. By their anger the entire world trembled. Then Nārāyaṇa and Śiva quickly arrived there. After hearing Brahmā and Sāvitrī they made them excuse each other. 14, 15

Then Śiva and Nārāyaṇa said thus: 'Oh Brahmā! It was improper and inauspicious that Devī Sāvitrī born of Śrī Tripurasundarī was disrespected by you.' 'Oh Devī! Listen. Your thoughtless curse on Brahmā was not right. We will suggest a solution to your mutual curses. The angry curse by Brahmā that Sāvitrī cannot partake in his sacred rites and the curse by Sāvitrī that she as a low-born one will partake in such rites—both these will not go in vain. Oh Sāvitrī! Born with a different body from your own aspect in the low-class clan you will be with Brahmā during the rites.’ 16 to 19

Hearing Śiva and Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Sarasvatī with residual anger again cursed each other. Brahmā said thus: ‘Born in the low-class let her be my wife during the rites; but for having cursed me without forethought she will not remember that she is born from the aspect of Sarasvatī.’ 20 to 22

After a lapse of long time, the creator Brahmā decided to perform a Yajña near the great lake Puṣkara and ordered the divine artisan Viśvakarma to build the place for Yajña. Viśvakarma made the hall ready for the sacred ritual. The hall was entirely decorated containing all the required material. The altars for the Yajña were set with nine types of gems. The hall had the combined ambience of the six seasons of the year and contained golden vessels filled with varieties of rice and drinks. 25 to 28

At that hall arrived prominent oblationaries like Bhṛgu, Kaśyapa, Kardama, Vasiṣṭha, Pulaha, Agastya, Pulastya—all experts in the performance of Yajña. Many other great sages well-versed in Yajña and erudite arrived there from all places. Indra and other gods, Gandharvas, Apsarasas, Vidyādharas, Kimpuruṣas, Kinnaras, Great Serpents, Demons, Rākṣasas and Humans arrived at Puṣkara the place of the ritual. The Gandharvas sang, the Apsarasas danced, the panegyrists chanted many praises to Brahmā and others. 29 to 33

अथ कालेऽतिकल्याणे सुनक्षत्रग्रहेर्युते। यक्ष्यमाणः प्रियां पत्नीमाह्वयजगतीपतिः ॥ ३४ ॥

Then at the most auspicious time when the stars and planets were favourable, Brahmā invited his dear wife to the sacred rite. 34

Indra and others invited Sarasvatī thus: 'Oh Devī! Brahmā is waiting for you from a long time to perform the sacrifice at the auspicious time. Please go there. Since the time is said to be auspicious it should not be lost at any cost.' Thus invited, Sarasvatī did not go thinking that what has to happen will happen. Brahmā, coming to know of her delay, was angry about losing the auspicious period and said thus to Viṣṇu who was there. 'Oh Hari! Bring me quickly another equally suitable wife before we transgress the auspicious period.'

Thus ordered by Brahmā, Viṣṇu searched on the earth and not finding one in the Brahmin-class, brought a cow-herd girl who was equal to Sāvitrī. Seeing her having auspicious qualities every one loudly exclaimed "Well done, Well done".

Then Brahmā married her and performed the great sacrifice. 42

Then Sāvitrī came to the sacrificial hall along with her friends and saw the most beautiful Gāyatrī by the side of Brahmā. Dimmed by the effulgence of Gāyatrī, just like a star by the full-moon, Sāvitrī was shy thinking that the assembly was laughing at her. Just like a lotus that shrinks exposed to Himālayan mountain, her lotus-like face shrunk and she looked as if her limbs were hiding in the mountain of shyness. For a moment she stood there still as if unconscious and as if a still-painted picture. Then getting to know about the deed of Brahmā, she was burning enveloped with anger that would reduce the three worlds to ashes. With throbbing lips she said thus: 'Oh Brahmā! Your conduct is fine'. Saying thus she departed from the sacrificial place. 43 to 48

Sāvitṛī settled on the central peak of a near by mountain. Then the sacrificial hall along with the priests and others was engulfed with the blaze of her fury which looked like burning the sacrificer, his wife and the entire arrangement. Augmented by the wind, as the flame started destroying all, the priests and members assembled there fled. The gods, Gandharvas, Sages, Siddhas, Cāraṇas, and Kinnaras discarded their gifts and without even bidding good-bye to each other ran in ten directions wailing and trembling with fear. The earth trembled like the leaf of a fig-tree shaken by a great wind. The horizons were enveloped by darkness, the oceans were in high tide; the Sun was swallowed by darkness as if by Rāhu, the mountains were splitting as if during dissolution.

When that was the condition of the worlds above and below, Brahmā and all others, uncertain about their course of action went one by one to pray to Sāvitṛī. To begin with, Indra with his retinue went to the mountain peak where Sāvitṛī stayed.

As Indra was proceeding towards the mountain, crores of Śaktis born out of Sāvitrī's anger wielding fierce swords started to destroy every one and among them Indra was captured, bound and imprisoned in the mountain cave. 58, 59

Similarly Yama, Agni, Varuṇa, Kubera, Nirṛti, Vāyu, Rudras, Vasus and all gods were bound. When all the gods were thus captured by the Śakti forces, Viṣṇu discussed with Śiva in the presence of Brahmā thus: "The fire of Sāvitrī's fury will burn the three worlds. All the gods are captured. What should we do to achieve good?" After deeply thinking about it, Viṣṇu sent Pārvatī and Lakṣmī to pacify Sāvitrī. 60 to 63

Pārvatī and Lakṣmī quickly reached Sarasvatī by overcoming all the angry forces and spoke to her sweetly. When Sāvitrī was not pacified even by their request, Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva approached her.

64 to 65

Sāvitrī whose anger had slightly reduced, seeing Brahmā before her started burning again with intense fury and because of that her wonderful form looked frightening and she emitted fire from her eyes. Brahmā,

Viṣṇu and Śiva were surrounded by that fire just as the elephants in rut enveloped by a conflagration. Seeing them who were being burnt, Lakṣmī and Pārvatī propitiated the Primordial Devī Tripurasundarī as there was no other succour. 66 to 69

Then the Supreme Devī, with a beauty surpassing the charm of a crore of cupids, appeared there. Seeing Her wearing a gem-decorated garment, glowing with a crown, and wielding attractively Her famous weapons in Her four hands, Gaurī and others bowed to Her with reverence. 70, 71

By the very presence of Devī Tripurasundarī the fire of anger that had pervaded disappeared just as the darkness with the rising of the Sun. Then She addressed Sarasvatī thus: 'Oh my dear daughter! Enough of your anger that is destroying the world. Withdraw the forces born out of your fury. Let the worlds be free from distress. Look at them with love.' 72 to 74

Then the virtuous Sāvitrī with extreme devotion praised Devī Tripurasundarī through many beautiful prayers and said thus: 'Oh Devī Tripurā! Pardon my mistake caused by my anger. I am here as Your servant ready to take Your instructions. Please do so.' 76, 77

Then by the compassionate glance of the Divine Mother, Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Śiva stood up and similarly all the gods were freed. The Devī Tripurasundarī said again to Sāvitrī thus; 'Oh My dear daughter! Be calm. Let Brahmā, the lord of living beings, complete the sacrifice by uniting again with you.' 78, 79

I will settle down here itself always drowned in the bliss of meditating on Your lotus feet. In this matter, Oh Mother! Please do not again prevent me.' 80 to 82

“Then Brahmā after repeated prayers and prostrations said thus to the Devī. ‘Oh Great Devī! I am wholly obeying your orders. Without Your orders, who will be able to move, I would submit my request to you. Oh Mother! Please listen with compassion. If Sāvitrī does not become calm, how will my Yajña be completed and how will the world be without trouble. In the past, cursed by the angry Sāvitrī that I will fall in love with a low-class woman, I completed the Yajña by marrying that woman—but how will I be appreciated by the great Brahmarṣis? Oh Supreme Empress! Set right all these and bless me.’

By a severe penance he pleased the Devī Sāvitrī who appeared before him. She said thus: ‘Oh Brahmin! I am pleased with your great penance. Tell me what you want. I will grant that to you. There is nothing which cannot be given to you. Are you aspiring the position of Indra or Candra (moon) or Kubera? Her heart was associated with the Paśyantī sound; Her speech was the audible Vaikharī; Her face, the alphabets; Her heart, the words; Her stomach, the sentences; She was both the audible and the subtle forms of Sound; Her head was Vedas, Her eyes were the luminous stars, Her mouth the science of grammar; Her voice the Vedic prosody, Her neck the science of euphony, Her ears the science of Law, Her heart the Sāma Veda; Her breasts the Ṛg and Yajur Vedas; Her stomach the Atharvaṇa Veda; Her ribs the Sāṅkhyayoga; Her hands the rites; Her thighs the science of logic; Her back the auxiliary Vedas (like Āyurveda, Dhanurveda and so on); Her glances, the Purāṇas; Her smile the science of rhetorics; Self-knowledge was her embodiment (disposition); Her nails and hair were the Buddhist and Jain philosophy; She was auspicious and transcendent. 48 to 55

Also she is protected by her brothers. Hence she cannot be enjoyed without their permission which has been so ever since creation. Hence if a strong person enjoys her, it would be destroying the bridge of righteousness. You will be born as Nandagopa the famous Lord of Cowherds. I will be born in your house as Kātyāyanī. The Supreme Nārāyaṇa will be my brother who will bring auspicious universal fame to you. In the Kaliyuga I will take birth on the Vindhyā mountain and redeem the misery of everyone. Repeatedly worshipped by the cowherd ladies for a month, I will grant their desire that is rare in the world.' Thus obtaining the boon all the happy cow-herds bowed to the Devī and other gods and returned to their houses. Then the Great Devī, the Universal Mother, disappeared. 67 to 75

Listening to the legend narrated by Guru Dattātreya, Paraśurāma eager to hear again inquired lovingly thus: "Oh Guru! I am not in the least satisfied by drinking the story from you. Just like the favourite elixir I feel like drinking more narrations. Please tell me the prayer by which Brahmā and others sang the Devī Tripurā associated with Gāyatrī resplendent with seed letters forming Her body. Then again, how and when the universal Mother was born in the house of the cow-heard along with Nārāyaṇa? How did Nandagopa gain wide fame? How was Kātyāyanī born? What did the Gopikas achieve? Tell in detail to me who is your disciple interested in listening."

Since I know the entire lore of the scriptures I will tell you about it. Starting from the first day in the Māgaśīrṣa month the worship has to be done up to the full-moon day. Only women are entitled to take this vow. After bathing at dawn in the river and wearing white garments they must make an idol of Devī Kātyāyanī out of sand and meditate on Her as taught. Garlands of white flowers, Akṣata (rice coloured with Kunkum) and eatables prepared with butter have to be offered. Then they should propitiate with prayers, songs and dance and immerse the sand idol in water. 89 to 94

Then they should bow to the Devī and Kṛṣṇa by chanting the following names—"Oh Lover of Gopis, Salutation to You, Oh protector of the Cows, Oh Lord of the Cows, Oh Stealer of the clothes of Gopis, Oh Revered by the cows and cow-herds! Oh Mother Kātyāyanī! Prostrations to You, Oh daughter of Nandagopa, Oh Usurper of Kamsa's valour, Oh the strength of Kṛṣṇa, Oh Dweller on the Vindhya mountain.

"Then they should circumambulate a cow along with its calf after feeding it with a handful of grass. For a month they should calmly sustain on sacrificial rice (ghee-rice + turmeric). At the end of the month, the Devī has to be worshipped and the brahmins have to be fed with preparations out of butter. By carrying out this vow, one will obtain all the wants. A virgin will secure a good husband who will provide all happiness. A married lady will beget a son and a lady with a son will see a grandson. There is no doubt that the women will enjoy happiness and prosperity by taking to this worship."

Thus inquired by Paraśurāma, Guru Dattātreya said thus: “Oh Paraśurāma! Listen. I will tell you the wonderful events that will happen in the future. After Kṛṣṇa kills his maternal uncle, Kamsa and makes his father the king, Kamsa's father-in-law, to please his daughter, invites all the Yādavas to the city of Madhurā. Then Kṛṣṇa, anticipating destruction from the ruler of Magadhā, moves along with the Yādavas to the city of Dwārakā situated on the western sea. 3 to 6

Then knowing that Kṛṣṇa is far away, the mighty and cruel demon kings Nisumbha and Śumbha, the brothers of the demon Aghāsūrā, along with their powerful army, go to Gokula and unscrupulously destroy it. They would capture Nanda and the cowherd women and loot their cows and wealth. Then Yaśoda, the loyal consort of Nanda, along with the Gopikas dear to Kṛṣṇa, approaches the sage Kātyāyana. He will narrate the legend of the incarnation of Devī Kātyāyanī to the distressed Yaśoda who surrenders to him. From that, Yaśoda amazingly realises that the Devī is her own daughter and worships Her with devotion. 7 to 11

Then the pleased Supreme Devī, Kātyāyanī appears before her and consoles Her mother. Riding a lion She chases Śumbha and Nisumbha, the lords of the demons. A fierce war will ensue for fifteen days on the banks of the river Yamunā and the demons will face defeat. After releasing Nanda and all the Gopikas, She will pursue the haughty and mighty demons, to kill them. Frightened by the valour of the Devī, the demons run away. 12 to 14

Then the people of Gokula will request the Devī thus: "Oh Mahesvarī! Oh Mother! These powerful demons do not deserve to be left out without being killed. In the Kaliyuga men will be weak and no one can destroy these demons. Hence, you should put an end to these demons. Even if one among them survives, the activities of the Kaliyuga cannot continue. Therefore, please destroy them completely." 15 to 17

Devī who was thus requested, pursues the demons to kill them. Then Niśumbha will hide himself inside his fearsome cave named Devakhāta in the Vindhya mountain. Likewise, Śumbha, after sending his troops to hide in another cave, will hide himself in the Gaṅgā river.

Devī Maheśvarī will chase the demons who fled in three ways, by assuming three forms. By entering the Devakhāta cave she will kill Niśumbha. In Her form as Kālī, She will devour the army and with Her third Supreme form kill atop Vindhya, the demon Śumbha on the banks of Gaṅgā. Thus destroying the demons through Her three forms, Devī Kātyāyanī, the Supreme, stays in three forms for protecting the world.

The gods arriving there will praise the Devī through many hymns. The pleased Devī will grant them boons. The gods then request thus: "Oh Maheśvarī! To redeem the Kaliyuga from the oppression of the demons, please stay firmly in these three places with Your three forms. Seeing You, the destroyer of demons, the demons will not exist. We will on the earth worship You on the full moon and new moon days.

The learned brahmins will take to fallacious tãntric practices and condemn the vedic path and perform sacrifices wrongly. The brahmins will drink liquor and toddy and eat meat with greed. They will manipulate scriptural injunctions to suit their fancy. By and large every one will be wicked, hard-hearted, fraudulent, and critical. The low-born will become preceptors to brahmins. 33 to 36

The brahmins will take to practices that offend the vedas and consume intoxicating drinks and cohabit with low-born women. Discarding the injunctions of the Veda, they will follow other religions like Bauddhism, Jainism and Islam. Such a lot, indulging in sensual cravings cannot find salvation anywhere other than beholding You in Your shrines.”

After hearing the legend about Devī Kātyāyanī, Paraśurāma who was enamoured spoke thus with ecstasy: "Oh Compassionate Venerable Lord! I will never be satisfied even if I listen to your narration again and again. Hence I would like to hear about the earlier story of Śumbha and Niśumbha. How were they destroyed? What was their prowess? With what form did Devī fight with them? Oh Adorable Guru! Please tell me all this. There is none other than you who is easily approachable to narrate.

"Oh Paraśurāma! Listen to this purifying story containing the glory of Devī Caṇḍikā that bestows all gain. This was earlier narrated by the brahmin Sumedhasa to Suratha. In ancient times, Madhu and Kaiṭabha were two powerful sons of Diti. Lord Viṣṇu battled with them for five thousand years and with trickery slayed them. The earth filled with their marrow got the name of Medinī. In their lineage were born the demons Śumbha and Niśumbha. They performed formidable penance for eighty thousand years. 6 to 9

Then Brahmā, who was pleased with their penance, appeared to grant them boons. They both wanted a boon by which they would be wholly invincible—a boon fearsome to creation. Knowing that, Brahmā declared a boon to Śumbha that they will not be defeated by any male person and disappeared. By that boon both the demons conquered the three worlds and became wealthy. 10 to 13

Śumbha became the lord of the heaven and Niśumbha the lord of the earth. Śumbha appointed his brothers and sons to the positions of Kubera, Yama, Varuṇa, Nirṛti, Agni, Vāyu and others. 14, 15

Having lost their wealth, the gods became pitiable and wandered in mountains and forests out of fear. Thus the dethroned gods moved incognito on the earth. They lived as humans in caves and forests. Indra and others lived like hermits with matted locks and wearing barks and tattered clothes. Some of the gods took the form of birds. Thus, for a million years, the gods had lost their position. 16 to 19

The demons governed by Śumbha, ruled the world. They usurped and appropriated the sacrificial oblations, the divine damsels, the nectar, the Kalpaka tree, the Airāvata and the Nandana garden. They hoarded all the precious gems of the three worlds. Nowhere on the earth, the sacrificial rites were performed for the gods. As ordered by Sumbha the rites were dedicated to the demons. Śumbha formulated and promulgated his own Veda and auxiliary texts, the Purāṇas, the religious procedures, the codes of conduct and so on and prescribed the results obtainable by practising them such as good, medium and bad—heaven and hell, according to his fancy.

Then the oppressed Indra and other gods together went to Brahmā's abode without being noticed by the demons. There they beheld Brahmā, who was being served by sages; who was glowing like blazing fire, whose effulgence had enveloped the world; who was wearing four crowns resembling the four peaks of a mountain; who was being attended by the embodied Vedas and branches of knowledge, and prostrated before him from a distance and rose up and praised him keeping their folded hands on their head.

Thus enquired, Indra with folded hands said to Brahmā thus: "Oh Creator! By obtaining boons, the powerful demons Śumbha and Niśumbha have driven us away from the lordship of the three worlds. Bound by them, we somehow escaped. Having lost our lustre and strength, we are living incognito like helpless ordinary persons. Snatching from us the positions of Indra, Candra, Kubera, Īśāna, Varuṇa, Agni and Vāyu, the demons are every day enjoying the power. Please tell us what is best to subdue Śumbha. There is none other than you who can protect the helpless."

Hearing Indra, Brahmā the creator thought for a while and said to Indra thus: "Oh Devendra! Listen to the future event. No male including Viṣṇu can kill these two demons. There is no woman other than Devī Tripurasundarī who can oppose them. Hence for the good of the world, let us, along with Viṣṇu and Śiva propitiate the Devī." Saying thus, Brahmā along with Śiva, Viṣṇu and other gods reached the wonderful Himālayan peak by the side of the river Gaṅgā and bowed to the Supreme Universal Devī and with folded hands devotedly praised Her thus: "Salutations to the Devī, to the great Devī; our constant salutations to the Auspicious. Salutations to prakṛti the Primordial force, the Good.

With restraint, we have bowed down to Her." With many such hymns, the gods with devotion praised the Devī. 35 to 41

Hearing them, Gaurī saying—"Who is being praised here?"—became fiercely angry like blazing fire and looked dark like a broken sapphire gem. From her body emerged a beautiful partial incarnation of Devī Tripurā, a Śakti desirous of slaying Śumbha. She told Gaurī thus: "Oh Kālī, interested in helping the gods! I was praised by the gods afflicted by Śumbha. In association with you, I will destroy those two demon kings Śumbha and Niśumbha." Brahmā and other gods cheered Her who was talking thus, with loud cheers of victory. 46 to 50

Then Brahmā after repeatedly bowing and praising the Supreme Devī said thus: "Oh Mahēśvarī! Because You have emerged from the angry Pārvatī, You will become known in the world by the name Caṇḍikā." 51

At the time, two leaders of the demons, the ministers of the demon Śumbha, who were famous as Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa, who were engaged in hunting in the forest, hearing the shouts of victory reached there to know about it. Seeing the wicked demons, the frightened Indra and other gods concealed themselves on trees, in caves and waters. 52 to 54

Then seeing the enchanting Caṇḍikā, Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa tormented by lust, went near Her to catch Her. They said thus: "Oh Lotus-eyed lady! Who are you in this lonely forest? Accept me or my brother, as you please. Oh Beautiful one! By a mere look at you, my mind has been snatched by your virgin charm. Please come close to me. I am the best minister of Śumbha who is the lord of the three worlds. Come to me with love. If not I will forcibly take you away." Saying thus, he quickly moved towards Her to catch Her hand. 55 to 58

Then getting back their consciousness, those two who were frightened and put to shame reached Śumbha and reported with respect thus: "Oh King of the demons! A woman of indescribable universal charm who is illuminating the directions is staying at the Himālayan mountain. We consider her as the most excellent gem among women. You are being served by damsels like Ūrvaśī, Pūrvacittī, Rambhā, Tilottamā and Menakā. All of these put together may or may not be equal to a fraction of the beauty of the nail in her toe. You should cleverly bring her here. If she does not come to me by one of the three strategies we will bring her by the fourth method of force. So, go soon and succeed.” 72 to 74

The demon Śumbha, the lord of the three worlds, considering you as the universally superior gem among women has this message for you—“I am the lord of all the gems. Hence, come and join me. If you do not yield to conciliation, you will be taken into my custody by force”—Our king wants to know who you are? Whose daughter? What is your plan?” 75 to 78

After fighting with the Devī for a long period, Dhūmrākṣa, the leader of the army of demons sprang up to catch hold the hand of the Devī. Seeing the approaching Dhūmrālocana, the Supreme Devī uttered the 'Hum' sound at him. Dhūmrālocana was enveloped by that sound and the flame released from Her mouth and within the moment of a wink was reduced to ashes like a moth. Then Viṣṇu who had taken the form of the Lion quickly subdued the army of the demons that was swelling like an ocean during tides.

Hearing about the destruction of his army along with Dhūmrālocana, the angry Śumbha ordered the great demons Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa who were by his side, thus: "Both of you, without delaying, bring her here by conquering her and her army. Also bring that Lion either tied or killed."

Hearing the instructions of Śumbha, those two who were frightened said to Śumbha thus: "Oh King! Please listen. She is invincible by both of us. Since Dhūmrālocana, the oppressor of the gods, has been killed in no time, we think it suitable to enter into a pact with the strong."

12 to 14

Upon hearing them, the angry Śumbha chided them thus: "Having started the war, out of anxiety you are thinking of alliance discarding your loyalty towards me. I even think that you may join the enemy."

15, 16

Hearing Śumbha, Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa proceeded, as otherwise it would be their self destruction. They reached Himālaya and saw the Devī seated on a Lion just like the Sun on the peak of Meru mountain. In order to catch Her, they with their army threw a bunch of weapons at Her. Caṇḍikā was infuriated by this. 17 to 19

Then the terrible Kālī, ordered through the angry eyebrows of Caṇḍikā, attacked the army of the demons and swallowed all of them. After destroying the army she severed the heads of the powerful demons Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa with the sword and offered them to Devī Caṇḍikā.

Then Śumbha agitated by anger at the death of Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa, proceeded with his entire army and Niśumbha to fight with the Devī who was staying on Himālaya. 22

Then the Devī saw the army of the lord of the demons which was boundless like an ocean in which the tall chariots were the tides, the dancing horses were the waves, the elephants were the crocodiles, the shields were the tortoises, the moving swords were the sharks, the white umbrellas were the foam, the sound of the trumpets was the uproar and in which the vibrant ring from the bells of the elephants was deafening the horizons. 23 to 25

Beholding this shoreless army and seeing the lonely Devī, the gods started worrying about the consequences. Realising their worry, the Devī created a group of motherly forces such as Brāhmī, Māheśvarī, Indrānī, Vaiṣṇavī, Śikhivāhinī (Kaumārī), Vārāhī, Nārasimhī, Āgneyī and Vāruṇī

Thus the army of the gods joined the motherly forces by wearing such dresses and wielding such weapons conforming to that particular motherly force and the huge army faced the demons. A battle began between the two armies.

A frightening, tumultuous war went on between the army of the motherly forces and the demons employing weapons like swords, axes, javelins, large axes, flat-strips, tridents, wheels, bolts, rods, iron clubs, maces and many other huge weapons. A river of blood with froth flowed, making the weak tremble.

At that time, seeing the army of demons diminishing, the demon by name Raktabīja came to the battle field and opposed the motherly forces. As he was fighting, as many powerful warriors as his drops of blood fell on the ground were born and again as many of such warriors were born from each of them and so on, every one equalling Raktabīja in form, intelligence and strength. The entire earth was pervaded by an extremely huge number of them. Seeing such a perplexing phenomenon the gods were terrified of the consequences. 33 to 37

Then Caṇḍikā seeing the off-springs of Raktabīja, very cleverly told Kālī who was by her side thus: "Oh Kālī! By spreading your tongue keep on drinking the blood that comes out of the injuries of Raktabīja". 38, 39

Obeying Her, Kālī with her mouth widely opened moved all around the war field drinking the blood of the demons and tormenting them. Thus as Kālī was consuming their blood, the great demons lost their strength and were cut to pieces by the weapons of the motherly forces. 40, 41

When Raktabīja was thus lost, Nisumbha, the lord of the demons, arrived with his army to fight with Devī Caṇḍikā. With fury he showered arrows on Her. Caṇḍikā destroyed them by a retaliating shower of arrows. The mighty army of the demons fought with the forces of Śakti and was destroyed by Kālī and the Lion. Seeing this, Nisumbha angrily went in front of Caṇḍikā. 42 to 44

Then Caṇḍikā poured weapons on Nisumbha who was approaching Her. The demons wailed as he was caught in that rain of arrows. But, Nisumbha immediately destroyed that shower by another one and emerged from the cloud of weapons just like the Sun. 45, 46

Then the angry Nisumbha discharged an iron weapon called 'Śakti' against the Devi. Caṇḍikā cut that in the space into three pieces. Similarly She quickly destroyed by arrows, weapons like rod, axe, trident, mace and spear that were repeatedly directed towards Her by Nisumbha. 47, 48

Seeing that fierce, brave and skilled Śumbha who was surpassing Kālī, Candikā approached him. Seeing her, Śumbha with a loud laughter said thus: "Oh Wicked woman! If you are interested in fighting with me, then let your other forces stay away for a while and you will know my strength. Out of compassion towards a woman, I was indifferent about them. Now, all alone you cannot survive fighting with me."

Hearing the words of Śumbha, Candikā holding back Her army fought with Śumbha by riding the great Lion. Then Śumbha quickly concealed Her in the mist of arrows. Seeing the Devī drowned in the ocean of arrows of Śumbha, the frightened gods cried in agony, where as the demons rejoiced and appreciated him with slogans of victory.

Hit hard on his head, he slightly lost control and released Her. She fought with him in the sky. After a long fight, when the great demon jumped with his mace to hit Her, Caṇḍikā caught him by his leg and swinging him many times dashed him on to the ground. Thus flapped on to the ground, the demon heavily vomitted blood. For a minute he was unconscious. As he was trying to stand up, Caṇḍikā pressed his chest with Her foot and with extreme fury pierced the trident into his neck. With his head severed the king of the demons died. 70 to 74

Hearing the death of Śumbha, the lord of the demons, the gods rejoiced and praised the Devī in many ways. The pleased Viṣṇu praised Devī Caṇḍikā thus: 76, 77

“Śaṅkarī, the best among gods, the slayer of Śumbha, the great strength of Parameśvara, the destroyer of the sins of those who behold Her, the warder of the afflictions of those devoted to Her feet, the dispeller of the ignorance of those who have realised Her truth, triumphs. 78

Oh Paraśurāma! Thus in the past, the Devī destroyed the valiant mighty demons like Śumbha, who were destroying the worlds. Worshipped by Brahmā and other gods whenever they are oppressed by the demons, Devī Tripurasundarī who is propitiated by every one, incarnates with a fraction of Her Power to protect the gods and the world also. Without Her involvement, how can even a blade of grass move, just like the waves without the sea. Therefore, Oh Paraśurāma! One should worship the Supreme Transcendental Devī Tripurasundarī, who destroys the sins of Her devotees, by keeping aside worldly actions. If not, the human beings would get drowned in the middle of the deep ocean of worldliness and touch its bottom resulting in disaster to the self.” 85 to 90

Having heard the honey-like legend of Devī Caṇḍikā, Paraśurāma, the scion of Bhṛgu race, became like an intoxicated bee that was drunk with honey. He was filled with ecstasy by hearing the great glory of Śrī Tripurasundarī and for a moment was still like a picture, unaware of in and out. Then, remembering his natural state, he was astonished and said with love thus: 1, 2

In the past, there were one thousand brothers, the sons of Diti, who were mighty and known as Kālakhāṇjās. They did penance for thirteen Arbudas (One Arbuda = One hundred million), which agitated the worlds. Indra's throne was shaken and the gods were frightened. 11, 12

Requested by the gods, Brahmā went to them and said thus: "Oh Demons! Tell me what boon you want from me. Stop your penance which is harmful to the world". The demons bowed and said thus: "We should never die". 13, 14

Requested thus, Brahmā meditated and came to know about the future prosperity of the demons and spoke to the gods thus: "Oh Gods! In this matter nothing can be done. They cannot be killed either by men or women who are living today. They could be destroyed by a woman who transcends worldliness. There is no woman of this kind anywhere in the universe. Hence the task appears impossible. To achieve our goal, let us propitiate Devī Tripurasundarī." Saying thus, Brahmā and others reached the Meru peak and praised Devī Tripurā who is the executor of the universe. 21 to 25

To protect the gods who were wailing and frightened by the demons, Devī Śrī Tripurasundarī made Her appearance. A loud fearsome sound was heard in the North-East direction. The entire sky and horizons were enveloped by a burning brilliance. By that sound the demons fell unconscious thinking that the universe was shattered. Then the Transcendent Supreme Devī Tripurasundarī appeared before the gods.

Seeing those demons, the furious Devī uttered the sound 'Hum'. From that 'Hum' sound, a great Śakti took birth, with four arms, with a complexion of the core of collyrium, with dishevelled hair, with space as the garment, with a frightening face, with protruding tongue and terrific countenance. Seeing her, Devī Tripurasundarī ordered her to destroy the sons of Diti.

Thus ordered by the Great Devi, Kālī born out of Her anger, was contrary to worldly characteristics. She was nude, her long hair was dishevelled; her cruel form was frightening; her protruding tongue was rendered prominent by her fangs; she was wielding a sword—this great Kālī after killing the demons, wore a garland made out of their skulls tied by their tufts and a skirt made out of the row of their hands and looked strange. Continuously consuming spirituous liquor and swallowing the demons, she was looking fearsome, smeared by their blood. She approached Devī Tripurasundarī and with a desire to cohabit said thus: "Oh Devi! Show me a suitable husband who can make me happy. If not, overcome by lust, I cannot destroy the demons." 44 to 49

Thus requested by Kālī, the Supreme Devī Śrī Tripurasundarī addressed God Sadāsiva thus: "Become a suitable husband to Kālī" Ordered thus, Sadāsiva assumed a matching form. Seeing him equal to Kālī, the Great Devī Tripurā gave him the name as Mahākālā and told Kālī to accept him. 50 to 52

Seeing him, the pleased Kālī united with him and getting into contact with his body proceeded to destroy the demons. With extreme lust she started sporting with him. Then Mahākālā also drank copious liquor. Kālī overpowered by lust, sexually united with the intoxicated Mahākālā. By putting the drunk Mahākālā down, Kālī who was not satisfied cohabited him in a reverse mode. 53 to 56

When Mahakali was united with Siva for a long time, the demons rose and planned to kill the gods. Then, praised by the gods, ferocious Kali relinquishing her strange sex, immediately battled with the demons by laughing very loudly. Occupying the entire space she started swallowing the mighty demons after cutting them with the sword 57 to 59

Thus Kali the conflagration unto the demons, terrifying the universe, wandered on the battle field swallowing them. By her mastication of the demons' blood flowed out from the corners of her mouth like streams from the mountain peaks. Swallowing thus quickly the entire lot of the demons. Kali, who was black like the core of dense collyrium, intoxicated by drinking their blood as well as the liquor, frantically danced looking like a dark blue mountain moved by the wind of dissolution 60 to 63

In the past, Devendra, arrogant because of his wealth, riding Airāvata and attended by Gandharvas and Apsaras, reached, out of curiosity, the top of Vindhya Mountain. There, the great sage Sunetra, the cousin brother of sage Kaśyapa, was doing penance and glowing with immense effulgence. His wife by name Sumitrā, the daughter of the sage Gautama, who was devoted to her husband, went near the river Narmadā to bathe. Seeing her, who was bulky, dark and ugly, Indra unmindful of his downfall, laughed loudly and haughtily went near her and spoke satirically to her thus: “Oh Auspicious Lady! Who are you? Who is your husband? You are looking like a buffalo to me. To which fat buffalo will you give birth?” 4 to 9

Even Sunetra, understanding the offence by Indra and seeing his furious wife, was shocked and in a manner that would please his wife, said to Indra thus: "Oh Indra! Listen. Have you not heard of the renowned glory of wives devoted to their husbands? An angry chaste woman can in a moment destroy the universe. If she is pleased, she can again create the universe. Once by the power of a loyal lady, the Sun could not move for a long time. In the past, Dākṣāyaṇī during a sacrifice, really caused dissolution of the world by the power of her penance. Hence, along with Śacī, propitiate Sumitrā. I, in no way have the power to undo the curse. 15 to 19

Long ago, there lived a great austere brahmin by name Mudgala. His beautiful wife Sānumatī was revered by all. Vāyu saw that attractive woman while she was taking bath in a river. Being tortured by lust because of her rich beauty, Vāyu entered her thigh to toss up her garment. 20 to 22

Realising the vileness of Vāyu, Sānumatī by her penance seized him by force and arrested him in between her thighs. When Vāyu was thus prevented, the life all over became static. Then the loyal Sānumatī considering the causeless destruction of the universe, released that much of air which was required for lives to continue. Apart from that, she throttled Vāyu between her thighs. 23 to 25

Then the worlds without wind were disquieted. There was no breeze any where in the world as Vāyu was suppressed. Knowing that even in the Vāyuloka there was no wind, the residents of that region reported the matter to Devendra." 26, 27

Hearing about the absence of Vāyu, Indra searched for him all over the worlds and sadly approached Brahmā and bowed to him and said thus: "Oh Lord! Without Vāyu the worlds will perish. Not even grass can grow and the three worlds will lose strength. We have not in the least offended Vāyu. We do not know by whose anger and how the mighty Vāyu has disappeared." 28 to 30

Hearing Indra, Brahmā meditated and understood the matter and said thus to Indra: "O Indra! Listen to the fate of Vāyu. In Kurukṣetra stays the loyal wife of the sage Mudgala. Vāyu, by his misdeed towards her, has been subdued, throttled between her thighs and having lost his strength and emaciated, is suffering. 31, 32

"Sānumatī who is devoted to her husband, is full of penantial glow. If requested cleverly she might release Vāyu. Oh Indra! Do not directly request her. She will burn you with her anger. Hence, you seek shelter under the sage Mudgala who will bring about good to you." 33, 34

Listening to Brahmā, Indra went to the hermitage of sage Mudgala along with the gods to fetch materials for worship. After approaching with fear, the sage Mudgala who was with his consort, Indra with obeisance requested for the release of Vāyu. 35, 36

Then the sage Mudgala spoke sweetly to Indra thus: "Oh Indra who are along with the gods! Listen. I will tell you the truth. I am really not competent to tell her to release Vāyu. I already know by my penance all about the incident. If I were to tell her to release Vāyu who has offended her, she would immediately burn me and my hermitage and the world. Hence, I will suggest a plan to you. You stay here along with Kubera, Agni and others in the guise of Brahmācārins and serve her with patience and please her. Pleased with you, she will oblige you in your task.”

Obeying the suggestion, Indra along with Kubera, Varuṇa, Agni and others stayed there in the guise of Brahmācārins and with devotion served Sānumatī comprehensively. Indra took care of her dear cows. Kubera was daily engaged in the supply of fruits and roots.

Varuṇa fetched water and washed clothes daily. Agni assisted in the performance of Agnihotra. Indra milked the cows daily and reared them. Thereby the milk was sweet and rich. Kubera supplied daily tasty fruits and roots. Varuṇa brought sweet enjoyable water.

In this manner the gods were daily pleasing Sānumatī by their service. The happy Sānumatī once said in privacy to her husband thus: “Oh Lord! These students who are dedicated to service deserve to be truly blessed. But, why are they specially serving me alone? Oh Lord! Tell me why you have permitted them to do so?”

Inquired thus, Mudgala spoke smilingly thus: "Oh Auspicious One! Listen with patience. Do not become angry. Anger destroys your penance. Hence be peaceful always. In the absence of Vāyu, who has been throttled between your thighs for offending you, the world is on the brink of dissolution. Ten years have passed after his arrest. These fear-struck pupils who are Indra, Agni, Varuṇa, and Kubera are serving you to have Vāyu set free. You should bless them." 50 to 53

Hearing thus the words of Sunetra, Indra and Śacī went to Sumitrā. Helplessly Śacī repeatedly requested for the grace of Sumitrā. Then with mercy Sumitrā spoke to Śacī thus: "Oh Auspicious Lady! Go and quickly give birth to a Bison and become relieved of the curse. Also, Indra, who will be deprived of everything, will by worshipping the Devī Tripurasundarī get back his position with his enemies destroyed by the Devī." Knowing thus about the termination of the curse, both of them proceeded from there.

Then Indrāṇī soon transformed herself into a formidable frightful buffalo looking like a mountain peak and entered a great forest killing tigers, lions and elephants and warding off the group of mountains. She entered a huge forest without animals. In that forest was hidden under the grass a solidified mountain-like semen of the mighty Kaiṭabha the first king of the demons. When the hungry buffalo started eating that grass, the crystal-like semen which was solidified due to chill melted gradually by the heat of her exhalation. When she swallowed the entire semen along with the grass, she became pregnant and gave birth to a Bison. After delivering the Bison, Indrāṇī relieved of the curse returned to the heaven.

That Bison grew gradually in that forest. With a mountainous body the mighty Bison hurled the mountains with his horns and split the earth with his hoofs. Approaching him, the demons made him their king. Incited by the demons the Bison demon fought with the gods and conquering Indra, Yama, Agni and others snatched their wealth and became the ruler of the three worlds. 68 to 72

Thus subdued by the wicked Mahiṣāsura, Indra and other gods went to lotus-born Brahmā and reported their defeat thus: "Oh Lord! We have lost our wealth and power to Mahiṣāsura and are wandering on the earth like human beings. Please think of a plan to protect us who have surrendered to you." 73 to 75

Hearing the words of Indra and other gods, Brahmā thought for a while and realising the gravity of the task remembered Viṣṇu and Śankara. Then Brahmā stood up and received with love Viṣṇu and Śankara who arrived there and worshipped them after seating them suitably. 76, 77

Then Viṣṇu and Śaṅkara, hearing the deeds of Mahiṣāsura from Indra and the gods who had supplicated, spoke to Brahmā thus: "Do not take this as a trivial issue. A great fear is in front of us. By his penance this mighty demon is invincible by any of the gods. Having obtained the boon in the past from you, this Mahiṣāsura cannot be killed by gods or by demons or by human beings or by animals. He cannot be conquered by men individually or in groups. No woman can vanquish him. He cannot be destroyed by any other group of gods as well. A difficult situation has been created by the boons obtained by him in the past. We are unable even to think of killing him. He cannot be killed neither by us nor by any one else. Hence let us worship the Great Devī Tripurasundarī who will bring about auspiciousness to us." Deciding thus Viṣṇu and other gods jointly prayed loudly to the Great Devī to alleviate the difficulty. 78 to 85

Viṣṇu and Śaṅkara became angry. From their angry face and that of Brahma, Indra and other gods came out a great effulgence which united immediately. This unique mass that was refulgent, emerging out of the faces of the gods, took a feminine form that enveloped the three worlds by its lustre. Viṣṇu and others bowed and asked the Devī who She was. 87 to 89

Then Durgā said to Hari thus: "Oh Viṣṇu! Forget your worry soon. Born out of all the gods I am neither different from them nor one among them. I will kill Mahiṣāsura. Let all the gods arrange for my vehicle and weapons. I will conquer your enemy." 93, 94

Then Devī Durgā who was shining like a myriad Suns, who was wielding many shining weapons in Her thousand hands, the edge of whose crown was touching the orbit of the Sun, who had three eyes, who was dressed in a golden garment, who was ornamented with diamond jewels, with great joy blew the conch given by the Sea. Her Lion roared. The gods reiterated the roar with voices of victory to the Devī. The frightening sound from the conch mixed with hails of victory and the roaring of the Lion was as if tearing the three worlds which had gone unconscious. 1 to 4

Ugravīrya, Ugrāśya, Pralamba, Prabhañjana, Sāraṇa, Kṛkalāsa, Kākavaktra and Viśaṅkaṭa, the valiant sons of Mahiṣāsura, wielding missiles furiously followed to fight with the Devī. 9, 10

The nine ministers of Mahiṣāsura by name Bheruṇḍa, Kākatuṇḍa, Kuraṇḍa, Caṇḍavikrama, Bhāṇḍīra, Ḍimbha, Krakaca, Kācakānta and Kaṭotkaka each with a myriad warriors followed him to attack the Devī. 11, 12

Seeing the defeat of the gods, Devī Durgā prompted the Lion and the Lion that carried Devī Durgā flew into the sky and pounced on the army of the demons like Garuḍa on the serpents. It destroyed some demons with its nails, some with its mouth, some by lashing with its tail, some by the swing of its mane, some by its chest and also by its speed. It was as if Garuḍa was destroying the snakes. 16 to 18

Then seeing their army being quickly destroyed, Udagra and other chieftains wielding weapons moved to kill the Lion. But the Lion which was protected by Devī Durgā fought them alone. It tore with its nails their diamond-like hard bodies. Then jumping into the sky it pounced with force on the head of Udagra and pulverised him with its chest, even as the demons were witnessing. Noticing the remarkable valour of the Lion, the gods and demons admired it. 20 to 23

Then again quickly catching Cikṣura and others simultaneously, the Lion jumped into the sky like a vulture holding flesh with its claws and tore their stomach like a wolf, an antelope. With their stomachs torn, all of them fell dead on the ground. After thus killing the five chieftains, the Lion destroyed their army. 24, 25

Seeing the chieftains killed, Bheruṇḍa and others, the nine mighty ministers advanced at once to slay the Lion. After fighting with those nine for a long time, the Lion killed Kurāṇḍa of fierce prowess by striking him with the sole of its foot. It ate up Bheruṇḍa and tore apart Bhāṇḍīra. It killed Dimbha with its chest. It dismissed Krakaca, Katotkaka and the stout headed Kācakānta by lashing them with its tail. Kākatuṇḍa was sent to the abode of Yama by a slap. Killing thus the group of ministers, the Lion shook its mane and roared like the thunder from the monsoon clouds.

Seeing the dead chieftains and the strong ministers, the eight powerful sons of Mahiṣāsura who were exponents in war missiles and weapons advanced to fight with the Devī.

Ugravīrya wielding a mace fought with the Lion for a long duration and hit by its paw fell unconscious on the ground.

Ugrāśya, Pralamba, Prabhañjana and Sāraṇa the mighty four wielding weapons like the trident, bolt, spear and sword combated with the Lion. Single handed, the Lion fought with them who were like the god of death during dissolution.

At that time Ugravīrya who regained his consciousness hit with great force, by revolving his mace on the head of the Lion. The mace which collided with the thunderbolt-like head of the Lion sprang out like a ball rebounding from the earth and on its downward course killed Sāraṇa by pulverising him.

Then the remaining six powerful sons of Mahiṣāsura, thinking that the Lion was invincible, jointly fought with it. Seeing the brave and strong Lion that was combating with them, Devī Durgā realised that the Lion was tired enough and spoke to it thus: 40, 41

साधु साधु हरिश्रेष्ठ प्रसन्ना तव विक्रमात्। एतैर्नियोद्धुमिच्छामि विरम त्वमितः परम् ॥ ४२ ॥

श्रुत्वैवमम्बिका वाक्यं विरराम महाऽऽहवात्।

“Oh Great Lion! Well done. Very good. I am happy with your valour. I would like to fight with these demons. You can relax now.” Hearing the Devī, the Lion withdrew from the great battle. 42

अथ दुर्गा तैर्युयोध मुहूर्तं घोरविक्रमैः ॥ ४३ ॥

Then Devī Durgā fought for a while with those mighty demons and using Her Trident despatched them to the abode of Yama. 43

Witnessing the death of the sons, the ministers, the army chiefs and seeing very few soldiers remaining, Mahiṣāsura with eyes reddened by fury proceeded like a huge mountain to fight with Devī Durgā. Seeing him, who was splitting the earth by pounding it with his hooves, who was dispelling the clouds by his breath, who was dislodging the stars by the lashes of his tail, who was roaring and emitting fire from his mouth, who was releasing dung and urine and dancing with a bent neck, Durgā invited him with a thundering voice. 44 to 47

“Oh Wicked Demon! Come and battle firmly with me for a while. You will soon reach the abode of the manes.” Saying thus, She showered arrows on Mahiṣāśura like rain-bearing clouds on a blue mountain. Just like the rain on a mountain, the shower of arrows did not in the least hurt Mahiṣāśura. 48 to 50

Seeing the failure of the shower of arrows, Durgā struck him with javelin, trident, bolt, spear, sharp weapons and club, without any use. Upon touching his body the weapons were powdered like the hail-storm on the mountain stones. 51 to 53

अथ मत्वा महासारवर्ष्माणमसुरेश्वरम्। बबन्ध पाशैः सुदृढैः शाक्तैर्मन्त्राऽभिमन्त्रितैः ॥ ५४ ॥

Then considering Mahiṣāśura as strong like a diamond, Devī Durgā bound him with ropes imbued with powerful hymns (Mantras). 54

बध्यमानः क्षणेनैव सिंहो भूत्वा युयोध ताम्। शक्त्या हतः सिंहतनुं त्यक्त्वा निमिषमात्रतः ॥

युयोध दुर्गा परमामस्त्रशस्त्रप्रवर्षणः।

As he was being bound, Mahiṣāśura transformed himself into a Lion and fought with Her. Struck by the spear he quickly discarded his form as a Lion and riding a chariot drawn by thousand Lions, he started to fight in a manly form well armoured. Mahiṣāsura who was like a huge mountain, who had thousands of faces and eyes, who had thousands of limbs, who was wielding varieties of weapons showered many missiles and weapons on the Supreme Devī Durgā. 55 to 57

निमेषेणैव तं वर्षं शरवर्षमहेश्वरी ॥ ५८ ॥

Then the Great Devī very soon warded off as if by wind that shower of arrows by pouring her deep-drawn arrows. Severely hit by the arrow Mahiṣāsura was unconscious for a moment and resumed the fight adopting his magical powers. When the mighty demon showered boulders, Devī Durgā was totally immersed in it and the gods wailed seeing Her condition. 58 to 61

ततः सा मारुतास्त्रेण वर्षन्तं नाशयत्परा । एतस्मिन्नन्तरे सिंहो वहन् दुर्गा महाबलः ॥ ६२ ॥

चूर्णीकृतोऽथ सा देवी तं पाशेनाऽनुपाशयत् ।

Then Devī Durgā, using the wind-missile destroyed the shower of boulders. At that time the powerful Lion carrying Devī Durgā flew like a bird and pounced on the huge chariot of the demon. Mahiṣāsura, thinking that his death was near, struck the Lion on its head with his mace and he sprang out of the chariot. His huge chariot of thousand Lions was powdered by the power of the Lion. Then the Devī tied the demon with the rope. 62 to 64

As he was being tied, he grew like the high Sumeru mountain. Then the Devī shattered his mountainous form by the thunderbolt missile.

But, Mahiṣāsura took the form of an elephant and battled with Her. While he was trying with his trunk to toss up the Devī along with the Lion, Durgā with the sword cut off his trunk. 65 to 67

अथ भूयोऽभवद्दैत्यः पूर्ववन्महिषाऽऽकृतिः । शृङ्गाभ्यां शैलशृङ्गाणि चिक्षेप समरेऽनु ताम् ॥ ६८

Then, Mahiṣāsura assumed again his previous form of a bison and threw with his horns the peaks of mountains at Her. 68

Then the Lion jumped into the sky and fell on the demon. Seeing the mighty demon overpowered by the Lion, Durgā with Her great sword severed the mountain like head of Mahiṣāsura. Then from the body of the bison emerged the mighty demon wielding a sword and a shield. Durgā quickly tied him with the rope and struck the powerful demon who was fighting, with Her sword. With his head severed by the sword Mahiṣāsura dropped lifeless. 69 to 72

When Mahiṣāsura was thus killed, the remaining demons with fear went underground. The horizons brightened, the wind was soothing, the fire looked peaceful, the rain god showered fragrant flowers on Devī Durgā. Brahmā and other gods loudly hailed Her. 73, 74

When the tormentor of the worlds was thus destroyed, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva and other gods prostrated before Devī Durgā and with joy praised Her, the Supreme aspect of Śrī Tripurasundarī. 75, 76

By the grace of Bhagavatī we have regained our respective status. Being sheltered under You, the Kalpavṛkṣa, we have nothing more to desire. Even then, in the interest of the world, we would like to ask You something. “Pleased by which prayer will You quickly protect a person who is suffering? Oh Devī! Please tell us this even if it is a great secret.”

All actions must be preceded by Puraścaraṇa. One should make in pure clay My idol having eight arms wielding the mace, the sword, the trident, the arrow, the bow, the lotus, the shield and the club; with three eyes; decorated with the crescent moon on the head; with red garment; seated on the Lion and killing Mahiṣāsura with the trident. Repeating the names hundred times, fragrant red oleander flowers should be offered. Oblations of small round cakes of flour should be offered by repeating My mantra. Varieties of dishes including flesh and wine has to be offered. By doing such a worship for forty-eight days one will achieve the impossible. He who worships Me daily will never meet with danger." Saying thus to the gods, Devī Durgā disappeared. 107 to 112

“Oh Venerable Lord of the ascetics! Oh Ocean of great compassion! I feel blessed and accomplished by your narration of the wonderful legend of Durgā, because it is indeed rare on this earth to have your merciful glances. Nothing can equal the bliss of a person like the partridge (bird) who drinks the elixir of the glory of Śrī Tripurasundarī flowing from your moon-like face. Drinking the honey of the story from your lotus visage, I am not contented just like a lustful person from a woman. Hence I yearn to listen to the rebirth of Kāma who had earlier merged in the eyes of Śrī Lalitā Devī and his body had been reduced to ashes by the fire of anger of Śiva and how his melancholic dear wife regained him. Oh Intelligent Guru! Please tell me about this.” 1 to 6

Thus inquired by Paraśurāma, Dattātreya the Lord of the ascetics was deeply immersed in the ocean of exhilaration. With tears of joy and horripilation, Dattātreyā for a while became unconscious of inner and outer activities. Then regaining consciousness and with a voice choked with joy, Dattātreyā, rich in austerities, addressed Paraśurāma thus: "Oh Paraśurāma! You are extremely blessed because you are not in the least satisfied even after listening to the legend of Devī Tripurasundarī. Cultivation of such a desire in the ambrosial story of the Devī, which terminates rebirth is uncommon in this world, is really your great fortune. I am also fortunate to recapitulate the grand glory of Devī Tripurasundarī while narrating it to you. 7 to 12

"Oh Paraśurāma! By listening to the stories about Devī Tripurā one gets the ability to undo worldly administrative plots. The stories about the Moon, Indra and others are auspicious than worldly accounts. The stories about Brahmā, Śaṇmukha, Gaṇeśa and others are better than the earlier ones. Even better and cleansing are the stories about Viṣṇu and Śiva. Superior to these are the glories of Lakṣmī, Gaurī, Bhārati and others. The supreme is the legend about Parāśakti the Devī Tripurasundarī. Who, on this earth, can describe Her Glory? With great effort it might be possible to count the stars in the sky, to enumerate the raindrops in space, to confirm the number of dust particles on the earth but not the countless glories of Devī Tripurasundarī. 13 to 17

"I have presented Her important legends in a brief way No one can narrate Her entire glory. Even Maheśvara, the Vedas and the Tantras are stranded without grasping Her form. The sensory organs cannot understand themselves on their own. The fire cannot burn its own self. The air cannot enter a stone. Similarly the Vedas that are born out of Her and which shine due to Her, cannot comprehend Her totally. Existing as the power of Consciousness prior to the three aspects viz., Icchā, Jñāna and Kriyā, She is called as Tripurā who is beyond enunciation and explanation. 18 to 22

“Devī Tripurā, who has no beginning, middle or end, by virtue of Her excessive glory assumes varieties of illusory forms of creation. For the sustenance of the creation caused by Her great glory She takes visible forms. Earlier I have told you the legends about Devī Tripurasundarī. Now I will narrate Her wonderful legend dealing with Her incarnation as Kumārī and other aspects. The form of the Transcendental Tripurā from which Kāma (Manmatha) came out is called as Śrī Lalitā because She sports happily in all. Her wonderful story filled with astonishing display of valour, might, intelligence and action is the vanquishing of the demon Bhaṇḍa. 23 to 27

altar as Śrī Lalitā the embodiment of Śrī Tripurā for the sake of the gods and redeemed the misery of the world by killing Bhaṇḍa and his army. 28 to 30

Then Viṣṇu and other gods after praising Devī Lalitāmbikā requested Her to resuscitate Kāma by putting Ratī at Her lotus feet. "Oh Mother! This Ratī the wife of Kāma as a widow is suffering from the pangs of separation from her lover. She is emaciated and dishevelled like a lotus whose stalk is cut-off. Please compassionately save her who is drowned in the ocean of sorrow. We do not consider it proper that Your great devotee, Kāma is defeated by Śiva. Hence show mercy on her."

Hearing the request of the gods, the Devī with a beautiful smile said thus: "Oh Gods! Listen. Nowhere in the world will my devotee face defeat. This is the truth. Even Kāma has not been defeated. Owing to the special respect to the curse by Gaurī on My devotee, only his physical body was defeated and Kāma was not burnt. Kāma, the best among My devotees is residing in My eyes. Just as darkness cannot exist during the day, how can my supreme devotee Ratī the loyal wife of Kāma become a widow? Born again from Me, Manmatha will join Ratī. Watch, how in a moment this Manmatha will remove the grief of Ratī. 36 to 40

Saying thus, Devī Lalitā bathed the Supreme Lord Kāmeśvara with the ambrosial showers of Her beautiful side-glances. Through this look Manmatha entered the heart of Kāmeśvara and out of his body emerged with a new body. Manmatha felt as if he had got up from sleep and soaked in the milky ocean of devotion and bowed to the Great Devī Lalitā. After bowing to his father, mother and all other gods, he praised Devī Lalitāparameśvarī with many excellent hymns. 41 to 44

Then hearing from his mother Lakṣmī, the destruction of his body and his rebirth from the eyes of Devī Lalitā, Manmatha requested Śivā thus: "Oh Universal Mother! I do not desire this ephemeral body. I would be without a body and have no fear of destruction. Defeated by Maheśvara, I do not deserve to be alive. I solemnly declare before You that there will be sense in my living if the three-eyed Lord is vanquished by my arrow. When I have been reduced to ashes like a moth encountering the fire from his third-eye in spite of my serving Your feet, I feel my life as futile. Hence, Oh Devī! enough of this body and life for ever. I do not like to have a body. Please have mercy on me. Having been born to Lakṣmī and devoted to Your feet, fie upon me! If after defeat I live amidst heroes as an unworthy person." 45 to 50

Hearing Manmatha, Devī Lalitāmbikā said thus: "Oh Vanquisher of enemies, Oh Manmatha! My child! Do not worry. Nowhere will My devotees face defeat. You were staying in My eyes as if in deep sleep. By the curse of Gaurī, only your body was reduced to ashes. Countless number of Kāmās born out of your body who are equally powerful will conquer the entire world and you will become their lord." 51 to 54

Then Devī Tripurasundarī called the Kāmās who had come out of the body of Manmatha and talked to them thus: "Oh Kāmās! My dear Manmatha will be your leader and all of you who have taken birth from his body shall be always obedient to him. Oh Kāma! By having a body vanquish Śiva in a moment. Śiva who is being propitiated by the gods to beget a son is detached and calm like an ocean. Hit by your arrow He would really become fickle and disturbed and unite with Pārvatī and later also with Viṣṇu in the form of Mohinī." 55 to 57

Thus ordered by the Devī, Kāma well prepared went to Śaṅkara his enemy and staying invisible struck him with an arrow. Extremely troubled by Kāma's arrow, and requested by the gods as well, Śiva went after Pārvatī and begot Guha who killed Tāraka and other mighty demons who were friends of Bhaṇḍa. Later Śiva, struck by the arrow of Kāma, fell in love with Mohinī and his semen dripped. "Oh Paraśurāma! I have thus narrated completely the story of the rebirth of Kāma."

After hearing about the rebirth of Kāma, Paraśurāma with great interest inquired Dattātreya again with humility. “Oh Compassionate Lord! I would like to hear how the desireless Īśvara was infatuated by Mohinī.”

Requested thus by Paraśurāma, Dattātreya the Supreme Yogi said thus: “Oh Paraśurāma! Listen. I will narrate the most sacred story. In the past during the war between gods and demons, the demons stole away the pitcher of nectar born out of the milky ocean and Viṣṇu assuming the form of Mohinī snatched the nectar from them and distributed the same among gods by deceiving the demons. 3 to 5

Śrī Śaṅkara hearing this episode asked Viṣṇu, when he met him to show the form of Mohinī. Viṣṇu said to Śiva thus: “The form of Mohinī is extremely infatuating and seeing that your semen will trickle down”. 6, 7

श्रुत्वा जहास सुतरामब्रवीद्वचनं पुनः । नाहं दैत्यसमो विष्णो ये त्वया मोहिता भृशम् ॥८॥

Hearing Viṣṇu, Śiva laughed loudly and again said thus: “Oh Viṣṇu! I cannot be compared to the demons who were very much deluded by you. The wind cannot show its power at the peak of the Meru Mountain. Is there any infatuating power that can delude me?" Despised thus Viṣṇu said "I will show you after some time". Talking thus Viṣṇu and Śiva returned to their respective abodes. 8 to 10

Thus discarded by Śiva, Viṣṇu brooded thus: "Truly Śiva is most brilliant, self-controlled with an upward flowing semen. Even Kāma could not delude him. How can I attract him who destroyed Kāma in a moment? Surely I will lose my honour by showing the form of Mohinī. How can I with my appearance as Mohinī attract Him whom Pārvatī my sister the most enchanting born out of the aspect of Śrī Tripurasundarī could not distract inspite of her proximity." Drowned in such a worry Viṣṇu later analysed thus: "In the present situation indeed without the grace of Devī Tripurasundarī I cannot achieve my goal. Hence I will propitiate Her." Deciding thus, Viṣṇu worshipped the Devī Tripurā the Supreme Beauty, for sixty thousand years. 11 to 17

Then the pleased Great Devī Tripurā appeared and addressed Viṣṇu thus: "Oh Viṣṇu! My child! Ask for your desired boon. There is nothing that cannot be granted to you because of your long worship." 18, 19

एवं नियुक्तः श्रीदेव्या नमस्कृत्य परां हरिः। प्राह देवि महेशानं कामारिमपि मोहितुम् ॥ २० ॥

Ordered thus by the Devī, Viṣṇu bowed to Her and said: "Oh Devī! I want to assume the form of Mohinī by which I can infatuate even Śiva who has vanquished even Kāma." 20

श्रुत्वा विष्णोः प्रार्थितं तत्रोवाच त्रिपुरेश्वरी ॥ २१ ॥

Hearing the request from Viṣṇu, Devī Tripurasundarī said thus: "Oh Viṣṇu! As and when you desire you will be able to assume such a form either man or woman, which will enchant the entire universe. Take Manmatha along with you. Seeing you, the infatuated Śiva the Lord of Yogis, the vanquisher of Kāma and whose semen flows upwards will fall in love with you. For this to happen I will give you an aspect of My beauty by which he will be deluded utmost and you will earn universal fame." 21 to 24

Thus obtaining the boon from the Devī, Viṣṇu proceeded to the great Kailāsa mountain where Śiva was dwelling. Then on the beautiful banks of Divine Gaṅgā amidst blossomed garden filled with parrots and cuckoos, Viṣṇu taking the form of Mohinī wandered along with Manmatha not far away from the place where Śiva was with Pārvatī. 25, 26

Mohinī had symmetrical limbs that were the store house of all beauty; with a lovely body shining like molten gold; with a full-moon-like face marked with the deer-musk representing the black mark of the moon on the forehead; with a rising moon like face on the back-drop of dark tresses resembling dense clouds spread on her shoulders; with eyes like the blue lily blossomed in the milky ocean of her smile; 27 to 29 with a face decorated or painted as if by the alarmed bees driven away by the fragrance of her Campaka like nose; with eyes resembling fishes moving briskly in the ocean of her beautiful face; 30 with a row of glittering teeth similar to the row of jasmine buds; charming with the gem-set ear rings shining on the broad cheeks; 31 with a pair of ball-like breasts similar to ruddy geese; with a pair of arms that have conquered the shine of the coral creeper; 32 with a beauty doubled by the lustre of the gem studded amulets, bangles and rings; with lotus-like palms at the end of coral-like arms; 33 with bud-like fingers at the tip of the arms that are like the branches of her creeper-like body; with a pair of breasts looking like inverted drums on her broad chest; 34 with dark nipples beneath the chest band (brassier); with a serpent like thin hair coming out of the navel hole; 35 with a slender waist whose existence is inferred by its bearing the upper body; with three folds representing three golden steps at the bank of her navel pond; 36 with lovely posteriors covered by red garment with its redness doubled by the red gems studded to the waist- band; 37 with pleasant jingling of the anklets set with diamonds; with beautiful slow gait shaming the swans, 38 with such an exquisite charm, Viṣṇu the lord of the sacrifices, moved around in front of Śiva, as Mohinī playing with the ball in the blossomed gardens and singing melodiously. 39, 40

Hearing the melodious music, Śiva saw Mohinī in the front garden and said thus: "Oh Gauri! Look at that extremely enchanting lady playing with the ball. She is like a bent creeper and lustrous like a streak of lightning. Her large breasts are protruding out of the dangling garlands while she is immersed in playing with the ball. With the garment soaked in sweat, her breasts, waist and thighs are clearly visible. She has slightly bent forward by the weight of her breasts that are dancing like buds. Oh Pārvatī! Let us eagerly go fast to see her whose lotus-like gaze is fixed on the flight of the ball. 41 to 44

Then from proximity, Manmatha with a flower arrow hit the heart of Śiva who was approaching her. Hit by the arrow of Manmatha, Śiva seeing Mohinī close-by, started burning with libidinousness and leaving

Gaurī behind, he proceeded quickly to Mohinī. With agitated senses Śiva reached near her and questioned thus: "Oh Beautiful young lady, who are you? Why have you come here? You have captured my mind. Look at me. I am Śiva who is talking to you." 45 to 47

Then Viṣṇu (Mohinī) assumed his real form in the presence of Śiva. Realising this the agitated Śiva was shy. Viṣṇu said to Śiva thus: "Oh Śiva! I showed you my enchanting Mohinī form which you wanted to see." 51, 52

Hearing the words of Viṣṇu, Śiva bent his head with shame. That was how in the past Śiva seeing the beauty of Mohinī lost his sensory control and lost his potent energy. There is nothing impossible through the grace of Devī Tripurasundarī. Thus Viṣṇu, Brahmā and other gods achieved the impossible by securing Her blessings by worshipping Her. 53 to 55

Thus Brahmā and all other gods are the devotees of Devī Tripurasundarī and they worship Her alone and recite Her sacred Mantra. Among them Manmatha the crowning devotee is the best. 56, 57

Manmatha is the promulgator of Śrī Vidyā. By the grace of the Devī many others also mastered the cult of Śrīvidyā and twelve among them are prominent. "Oh Paraśurāma! I will narrate their names. Listen with self- control. They are: Manu, Candra (Moon), Kubera, Lopāmudrā, Manmatha, Agastya, Agni, Sūrya (Sun), Indra, Skanda, Śiva, and Durvāsa.

By remembering them on each morning one will be free from sins. Because these twelve have obtained the grace of the Devī, remembering them daily will confer all-round auspicious prosperity. The worshippers of Devī Tripurasundarī should as a rule remember them by which they will acquire pure devotion that will cut asunder worldly bondage. "Oh Bhārgava! The twelve exponents of Śrīvidyā have by the blessings of Devī Tripurasundarī are empowered thus: Manu creates the world; Moon sprinkles ambrosia into plants; Kubera is the lord of wealth; Lopāmudrā got good fortune; Manmatha conquered Śiva; Agastya (drank) dried up the ocean and so on; Agni became the foremost among gods; Sun illuminates the world; Indra is the lord of the gods; Śiva vanquished

(Yama) death; Skanda shattered the Krauñca Mountain and Śiva is the lord of Yogis. They are all masters of Śrīvidyā. There are others who worship Her through seed letters. 61 to 66

“Among the others three foremost preceptors named Mitreśa, Ṣaṣṭhīśa and Uddīśa who are born from the body of Śiva are universally revered.

“They have attained a position in the abode of Maheśvara by intently meditating on the kūṭas (i.e., the groups in Śrīvidyā) [Viz., Vāgbhava, Madhya and Śakti kūṭas] 67

“Thus the Devī Tripurasundarī assuming many forms protected the universe and pervaded it by one of Her aspects (portions). On the shores of the eastern ocean She stays in the form of Kāmagiri. At the foot of the Meru Mountain She stays in the form of Jalandhara. On the shores of Western ocean She stays in the form of Pūrṇagiri. 68 to 70

Even as She has assumed the above three forms, She has many different forms. She is Kāmākṣī in Kāñcīpuram; Bhrāmārī on the Malaya mountain; Kumārī in Kerala; Ambā in Saurāṣṭra; Mahālakṣmī in Karavīra; Kālikā in Mālava; Lalitā in Prayāg; Vindhyavāsiṇī on the Vindya mountain; Viśālākṣī in Kāśī; Maṅgalāvātī in Gayā; Tripurasundarī in Bengal; Guhyakeśvarī in Nepāl. She is situated in these twelve places in India. Just a visit to these places will destroy all sins. A person who is unable to visit them will be free from all sins if he calmly thinks about them every morning. Similarly Devī Tripurasundarī stays in this world in hundreds and thousands of forms intent on protecting the human race.

“Oh Paraśurāma! I have thus narrated how Śiva was deluded by Mohinī”.

How did She fight with Bhaṇḍāsura? How strong was that demon? Whose son was he? How did he conquer the gods? Tell me all this, your close disciple. Compassionate Gurus will not feel troubled by the questions of their disciple. Just like a bee, I am never satisfied drinking the essence of the stories of Devī Tripurasundarī from the blossomed fragrant lotus of your face.” 2 to 6

Kāñcīpura he pleased Mahāviṣṇu who blessed him. Asked regarding the welfare of the world, Viṣṇu told the sage about various glories of the visible Devī Tripurasundarī such as the killing of Bhaṇḍāsura by Devī Lalitā. Oh Paraśurāma! Listen. I will narrate that long account to you.

‘In days of yore there was a very powerful demon named Bhaṇḍa who obtained rare boons by propitiating Lord Śiva. Then without fear that demon conquered the three worlds and ruled as if he was Viṣṇu the lord of the universe. He vanquished Indra and other gods in the war. Having lost their wealth the gods wandered helplessly on the earth like human beings. The demons ruled by Bhaṇḍa, extremely enjoyed the oblations to the gods, their damsels, their garden Nandana and their Kalpavṛkṣa. 33 to 36

‘In this manner Bhaṇḍa after conquering Indra, Kubera, Varuṇa, Vāyu, Agni, Yama and Soma became the ruler. Staying himself in the heaven he placed Viśukra in the Earth and Viṣaṅga in the Nether region and ruled the three worlds. Binding Indra and other lords of the directions, he made them carry heavy loads like servants. 39 to 41

‘After some time Guru Śukrācārya released the gods. Bhaṇḍa was thus troubling the gods. Once, upon the advice of the demons, Bhaṇḍa invited Maya the sculptor and ordered him to rebuild the city Śoṇitāpura which was ruined in the past by the gods. 42, 43

Then Maya who was instructed rebuilt the Śoṇita city. Seeing that beautiful city which excelled the heaven Bhaṇḍāsura destroyed the heaven and transferred its assembly hall Sudharmā and garden Nandana to the Śoṇitapura and converted it into another heaven abundant with prosperity. 44 to 46

Staying in that city Bhaṇḍa the powerful lord of the demons created demonic leaders who were equal to the Divine lords of the directions in lustre and valour and appointed them as lords of the directions. Everything was indeed filled by Bhaṇḍa and his followers. 47, 48

Then the exceedingly brilliant Bhaṇḍa ruled the universe. He renamed Śoṇitāpura as Śūnyakapura. Thus Bhaṇḍāsura who had great power of penance captured many universes by splitting them. He brought under his control hundred and five universes and became their overlord. In all these universes his orders were carried out unhindered. Thus Bhaṇḍa ruled all the universes by conquering the gods.

“Oh Paraśurāma! Hearing Hayagrīva, the wonder-struck Agastya again inquired thus: “Oh Hayagrīva! Oh ocean of mercy! Your narration was wonderful. To whom was Bhaṇḍāsura of such a might born? Was his valour inborn or due to penance? How did he conquer the gods? How did he vanquish Brahmā and others? Please tell me verbatim all this who is anxious to hear.”

Thus inquired by Agastya, the pleased Hayagrīva said thus: “Oh Agastya! Listen to the ancient legend of Bhaṇḍāsura. After Manmatha was reduced to ashes by the anger of Śiva, child-like Gaṇeśa heaped the ashes and made a beautiful human doll out of it. He showed that lovely doll to Gaurī his loving mother. Seeing that Gaurī in order to please Gaṇeśa requested Śiva thus: “Oh Auspicious Lord! Please impart life to this idol which is dear to Gaṇeśa. Let my dear son play with him.”

Requested by Pārvatī, Śiva in view of the future events gave life to the idol by casting a shower of nectarian glances. That enlivened boy was extremely beautiful because of his connection with Manmatha, but was demonic by nature because of his association with the anger of Śiva. He was a good friend of Gaṇeśa and played with him. 9 to 11

Then, once the lords of the directions reached there. Seeing them the demon questioned Gaṇeśa thus: "Who are these? How did they become that prosperous and wealthy? 12

Thus inquired, Gaṇeśa said thus to his dear friend: "Oh My dear friend! I will tell you. Listen. They are the lords of the directions who are revered by the world. They have acquired the lordship over the directions by propitiating through penance the great God Śiva. If Śiva is pleased by the penance there is nothing that is not achievable just like one can get everything through the Kalpavṛkṣa. 13 to 15

Hearing Gaṇeśa, that boy decided to perform penance. Permitted by Gaṇeśa, he went to the banks of the divine river Gaṅgā and did a long-drawn self-controlled penance sustaining himself on fruits for ten thousand years propitiating Lord Mahādeva. 16, 17

Then the pleased propitious Mahādeva appeared before him and said thus: "My child! Tell me about your intention. Pleased with you I have come here to grant your wants". 18

Hearing Mahādeva, the demon bowed and with folded hands requested the lord thus: "Oh Lord! I should become the ruler of the universe. I should vanquish everyone. I should be able to create gods, demons and excellent worlds. I should be able to create weapons, missiles, scriptures and magic. All the gods including Brahmā should be always obedient to me. I shall not fear anything and I should not die." 19 to 21

Hearing his words, Śiva said thus: "You are not fit to have such boons". Then Śiva disappeared. The disappointed demon performed again a severe penance for a lakh years staying in the sky, sustaining on smoke and braving cold and heat. 22 to 24

Then, once again Mahādeva presented himself and said thus: "Oh Intelligent demon! Stop your frightening penance. I will grant that you become the ruler of the three worlds; that you will conquer gods and demons; that you can create gods, human beings and demons; that you can create weapons and scriptures; that you will have nothing to fear from the gods, human beings and demons; that Brahmā and others will not be controlled by you and that you cannot escape death." Saying thus, Śiva disappeared. 25 to 27

After Śiva disappeared, the demon thought again thus: "Of what avail are these desired boons without my becoming immortal? I will again perform penance till Lord Śiva grants me this boon". Thinking thus, he started a severe penance dangling from a tree with his feet up and head down just above a burning fire, controlling his breath and desires. "Oh Sage! As he, who had totally controlled his senses was being burnt by the fire, did penance for twenty-thousand years, smoke came out of the pores of his hair. 28 to 32

The three worlds were filled with that spreading smoke. The throne of Indra trembled, the gods became unconscious, fear and sorrow struck the gods, the earth trembled, the seas transgressed their shores, the directions were set ablaze, the rivers were polluted. Then Indra and other gods prayed to Brahmā. 33 to 35

Brahmā after thinking about the matter went to Śiva along with Hari and after deliberating for a long time said to Śiva thus: "Oh Mahādeva! You should grant all the boons that the demon wants except immortality. Otherwise the worlds will be reduced to ashes by the fire of his penance." 36, 37

Recommended thus by Brahmā and others, Śiva went near the demon and saw him in concentrated penance with an emaciated body, with visible veins and burning like fire and said thus: "Oh Demon! I am pleased with your penance. Tell me your want. You will have it fulfilled."

38 to 40

Addressed thus by Śiva and seeing the God in front, the demon prostrated before Him and praised Him and with folded hands spoke thus: "Oh Maheśvara! Earlier you granted me everything except immortality. In addition I would like to conquer Brahmā and others in war. I should have the strength to split the universe."

इति दत्त्वा वरं तस्मै शिवोऽन्तर्धानमाययौ।

Hearing the request of the demon, Maheśvara said to him thus: "Oh Demon! Listen. You shall not be killed by gods, demons, human beings, those born from the womb or mind. You shall not be killed by trees, mountains, wild animals, serpents, birds, worms, insects, bees, Yakṣas, Vidyādharas, Kinnaras, Devils, Kimpuruṣas, Rākṣasas, The Trinity, weapons, and popular missiles in any manner. Your other wants also will be fulfilled." Giving boons thus to the demon, Śiva disappeared.

Then the demon reflected thus: "If I cannot be killed by gods and others, then where is death for me. I have really become immortal." Assuming himself to have accomplished everything he went to Kailāsa mountain. Joining his friend Gaṇeśa he narrated everything to him. Then along with Gaṇeśa, the demon bowed to Devī Pārvatī and told Her about the boons he had obtained. Pārvatī also congratulated him and said thus to the demon: "Oh! My Child! You have obtained great boons. You should not offend the gods. Otherwise you will face fear. Plotting against gods, brahmins and citizens, the demons have been destroyed. Keep away from the company of demons because you will lose your wisdom by associating with them. Go to the Nether region which is better than heaven and righteously rule there."

Agreeing with Her and bowing to Her, the demon went to Pātāla (nether region) and ruled there along with the demons. Then by the repeated advice of the demon leaders, he, supported by his army, started conquering the three worlds and waged an astonishing war against the Kurus in the north.

Seeing his excitement in war, Brahmā amicably addressed him thus: "Oh Lord of demons! Right now it is improper to fight. All the gods will pay you taxes. You can entirely rule the Nether region and the earth. Let the gods live in the heaven. Let there be no enmity with gods." 57, 58

Hearing the improper words of the demon, the angry Brahmā said thus to the demon: "Oh Bhaṇḍa! You are wicked". Saying this Brahmā disappeared. 60

Then the most arrogant Bhaṇḍa and other demons fought an extremely fierce battle with the gods and after vanquishing them captured Indra and others and engaged them in the task of carrying heavy loads. Conquering thus the three worlds, the highly haughty Bhaṇḍāsura, created from the either sides of his ribs, two demons Viṣaṅga and Viśukra. Along with his hundreds of sons and grandsons he enjoyed stupendous wealth. He brought under his sway hundred and five universes. 61 to 64

A demon by name Tāraka seeing the preponderant valour of Bhaṇḍa made friendship with him who in turn was pleased with Tāraka and made him the lord of eighteen universes. Tārakāsura gave in wedding to Bhaṇḍāsura his four sisters by name Sammohinī, Sundarī, Citrāṅgī and Kumudotkarā who were charming and beautiful like Devī Lakṣmī.

Ugrakarmā, Ugradhanvā, Vidyunmālī, Vibhīṣaṇa, Indraśatru, Amitraghna, Vijaya and Viśvatāpana were the wise and dear ministers of Bhaṇḍāsura. The pleased Bhaṇḍāsura made them the lords of the directions. 68, 69

Having got such prosperity Bhaṇḍāsura in the course of time became arrogant. On his own he created, protected and destroyed the worlds. After discussing with his wicked ministers he reached Satyaloka haughtily to conquer Brahmā. As he was reaching that place Brahmā vanished along with his abode. The same thing happened with Vaikuṇṭha also. Then he reached Kailāsa. 70 to 72

Ordered by Bhaṇḍāsura, the demon Vibhīṣaṇa said thus: "Oh Gaṇeśa! Go quickly and tell your father Śiva thus—"The lord of the demons has arrived. Quickly surrender to him. If not boldly fight with him and face the consequences. If you are strong, do not run away from the battle."—Also tell your mother thus: "The lord of the demons wants Śacī who is under your protection. Offer her soon to him. If not both of you will be dragged to me by your hair by the demons and you will lose your dignity"—Oh Ignorant Gaṇeśa! Go and convey this and do not get killed here."

Meanwhile Pārvatī hearing about the war between the demons and the Pramathas arrived there out of love to save Her son Gaṇeśa. She was accompanied by crores of Śaktis. Seeing the fierce battle between the Pramathas and the demons and realising the dwindling strength of the Pramathas, Pārvatī along with Her Śaktis fought the demons for a while in a most frightening way. Firmly hit by the strong Śaktis and the Pramathas, the demons unable to withstand the attack started running away with their limbs cut off, heads broken and pulverised bodies even as they were being killed and swallowed by the Pramathas and the Śaktis.

Seeing his forces thus destroyed, the angry and fierce Bhaṇḍāsura came on a chariot to fight. Chiding Bhaṇḍa, Gaṇeśa holding the mace quickly stopped him like the Vindhya mountain stopping the Gaṅgā on the earth. Then a battle began between them employing fierce thunderbolt-like missiles which looked as if Lord Viṣṇu was fighting with the demon Kaiṭabha. Both of them worthy of praise and both intoxicated, fought with rage like inebriated elephants in a forest. 88 to 91

Then the angry Gaṇeśa flung his raised mace on Bhaṇḍāsura just like Indra his thunderbolt on the mountain. By that the chariot, horses, the flag and the charioteer of Bhaṇḍa were reduced to ashes. Then quickly Gaṇeśa with the same mace which was like a thunderbolt hit Bhaṇḍāsura severely and Bhaṇḍa who was like a speeding bull, fell down unconscious on the earth like an uprooted tree. All the demons wailed while the Pramathas and the Śaktis who were happy, honoured Gaṇeśa with slogans of applause. 92 to 95

The mighty Bhaṇḍāsura who quickly regained consciousness rose up fast and with great force hit Gaṇeśa on his head with the goad. Hit severely by the sharp goad Gaṇeśa dropped on the ground like a mountain struck by the thunderbolt. The Pramathas and the Śaktis wailed very much. 96 to 98

Then the angry Pārvatī uttering a sound 'Hum' stupefied Bhaṇḍa who was trying to catch hold of Gaṇeśa. As She was about to kill Bhaṇḍa with the trident after binding him with the noose, Brahmā appeared there and requested Pārvatī thus: "Oh Devī! According to the boon by Śiva this Bhaṇḍāsura should not be killed by you. Hence retire from fighting and let the demon go back to the earth." 99 to 101

Reminded thus about the great boon of the demon, Pārvatī cursed him thus: "You worthless demon! Get back to the earth. You are set free now and you do not deserve to visit this Meru-peak (Kailāsa) at any time. If you enter here, your head will surely break into hundred pieces." Then Pārvatī helped by the Śaktis and the Pramathas pushed Bhaṇḍa and other demons to the earth just like the palmyra fruits by the wind. 102 to 104

That was how Bhaṇḍa who was defeated by Pārvatī returned depressed, dejected and sad to his Śūnyaka city along with the demons. 105

"Oh Agastya! I have thus narrated to you about the valour of Bhaṇḍāsura filled with penance. Because of the curse on him from Pārvatī, Brahmā and others were not defeated. That was how Bhaṇḍāsura became the lord of the demons by conquering the worlds and was troubling the heaven just like a wolf in a city. 106, 107

इति श्रीत्रिपुरारहस्ये माहात्म्यखण्डे पञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः॥

Māhātmyakhaṇḍam of Śrī Tripurārahasyam.

Oh Agastya! Listen. The sad gods who were thus driven away by Bhaṇḍāsura, hid themselves for a long time in forests, mountains, caves and river banks fearing the demons. Some of them who were seen by the demons were dragged and beaten and engaged like servants. Like this twenty lakh years lapsed. 1 to 3

Then once Indra came across somewhere, Brhaspati the Guru. Bowing to him with folded hands Indra said thus. "Oh Guru! Look at me the lord of gods who am sad and surrendered to you. I am seeing you after a long time. Please have mercy on this disciple. 4, 5

"Oh Lord! I cannot anymore bear such hardship. Even after my repeated prayers, Brahmā said thus—'Oh Indra! Listen. This is not the time to retaliate. Wait for the time. Without a proper time nothing can be achieved'—After this innumerable Yugas have passed without a sign of happiness. Look at me who am sullied, helpless, emaciated and totally frightened. This thorny arbour has become my heaven and Nandana garden and my assembly, Sudharmā; the mosquitoes are the singing gandharvas; the crows are the panegyrists, the birds are the bards; the fire-flies are the group like Rambhā; the stone slab is my bed; the base of the bush is my pillow, the cry of the foxes is the sacred chant; cranes and vultures are the members of the assembly; the dust from the earth is my garment; the thorny branches of the trees shaken by the wind are my fans. Such is my fortune indeed." Saying thus Indra became unconscious.

Seeing the plight of Indra who had gone unconscious, Brhaspati was soon filled with compassion. Then consoling Indra, he said thus: "Oh Best among gods! Listen. The wise are never sorrowful. They will be happy in distress and balanced in prosperity. Broad-minded great people will never be perturbed. Instead they will overcome grief through discrimination and wait with courage for good days. Listen. I will tell you the method of obtaining your results.

"This demon is fearless by propitiating Lord Śiva who has declared that he cannot be killed by persons born out of the womb or even mind. Other than these two kinds there is no one anywhere in this universe. Also he is declared deathless either by gods or men. Hence surrender to Devī Tripurasundarī. Other than Her, there is no one who can protect you."

18 to 20

इत्युक्त्वा मारुतं देवं दध्यौ देवगुरुस्तदा। ध्यातमात्रो जगत्प्राणः प्रणम्य समुपस्थितः ॥ २१ ॥

Saying thus Br̥haspati remembered Vāyu who immediately appeared and bowed to the Guru. 21

Then Br̥haspati addressed him thus: "Oh Vāyu! Listen. You are always moving and you are the life of all and powerful. You carry quickly along the sky path, Indra and all the gods including Agni to the Himālayan peak and bring them back after their work unnoticed by the demons. There they will by their effort obtain their wants." 22 to 24

ओमित्युक्त्वा निमेषेण देवान् सर्वान् समानयत्।

Agreeing to this, Vāyu carried in a minute all the gods. Indra and other gods congregated on the Himālayan peak. They sent Vāyu to bring the trinity gods. Then they decided their course of action to vanquish Bhaṇḍāsura and thought that there was no one other than Devī Tripurasundarī who can help them. Thus Brahmā and other gods, controlling their senses and breath meditated on Devī Tripurasundarī the supporter of the universe. They spent hundred years meditating on Her. 25 to 28

Then the gods after deliberation propitiated Devī Tripurasundarī through a great Yajña with t̃āntric rites. In that Yajña Brahmā himself took the place of Brahmā and Br̥haspati was the chief priest. Viṣṇu, Śiva and others were other priests in that Mahāyāga which was replete with Vedic chants and sacrificial material. 29, 30

On the concluding day Br̥haspati meditating on the Transcendental Devī offered the consummating offering into the fire representing consciousness that was ablaze in the great altar. Then as the gods were praising, Devī Tripurasundarī manifested out of the core of that burning sacrificial fire of consciousness. 31 to 33

With the consummatory offering, the fire in the altar brightened and its flame spread upto a distance of one yojana creating a sound as if a mountain was shattering and as if a hundred thunderbolts had struck simultaneously damaging the ears of the celestials. Then from the core of the flame emerged a great effulgence equal to a myriad lightnings striking simultaneously that blinded the gods. Blinded and deafened by that brilliance and the sound, all the gods, excepting Br̥haspati, Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva fell unconscious on the ground. Then from within that brilliance manifested Devī Tripurasundarī. 34 to 38

There Brhaspati after bowing many times to the Transcendental Devī rose up and seeing Her, he was immersed in a ocean of joy. Keeping his lotus like palms folded on his head, he was drenched in the flood of tears flowing out of his lotus eyes. Overpowered by extreme devotion he praised Devī Tripurasundarī in a choked voice pleasing Her with his poetic skill. 64 to 66

Praising Her thus, Brahmā and other gods prostrated at Her feet.

Then the Supreme Devī addressed them thus: “Oh Children! Rise quickly. I have manifested like this ready to kill your foe. Oh Gods! Ask for your wants. Oh Brhaspati! You also speak out your desire. I will grant it to you.”

“Oh Sage Agastya! Listen to what was spoken by Brahmā and others. Brahmā and others with reverence to Devī said thus: ‘You are again ready to protect the world from danger. You should destroy the demons who are our enemies. But please listen. How this demon Bhaṇḍa who has by the blessings of Śiva become deathless, will be killed by You? How will our work be done? How will the demon be destroyed?’ 1 to 3

Hearing Brahmā and others, Devī Śaṅkarī spoke thus: “Oh Brahmā! Do not have any doubt about the killing of the demon. I am not born from the womb or even the mind of anyone. I am a supernatural woman born out of the fire. I will kill the mighty demon employing a rare unknown missile.’ 4 to 6

Hearing the words of Devī Lalitā, the trinity gods were free from worry. Then Bṛhaspati with folded hands said thus: “Oh Devī! Let Indra and others have a vision of Your Supreme Universal Motherly form by which they would be sanctified.” 7, 8

Hearing Br̥haspati, Devī Tripurasundarī said thus: 'Oh Br̥haspati! Listen. Indra and others are incompetent to see My All-powerful form which has not been seen by others. Ordinary beings can never see this form of Mine. Because you (i.e., Trinity of Gods) are My devotees who are constantly meditating on this form are shown this form which has not been seen by others. Let Indra see My different limited form.'

Then Br̥haspati requested the Devī many times to show Her form to Indra. The Devī told Guru thus: 'If Indra has to see this form of Mine let him worship Me through the Śrīsūkta method and later I will surely show him My form.' Saying thus the Devī by Her ambrosial glances awakened the unconscious gods and disappeared, witnessed by Brahmā and others.

“In between Śukrācārya the preceptor of the demons having known the activities of the gods, completely informed Bhaṇḍāsura and said thus: ‘Oh Lord of the demons! Listen. Your enemy Indra is propitiating Devī Parāśakti in the Himalayan Mountain with devotion. Pleased with his worship She will quickly ruin you along with your children and relatives just like a fire that will burn a heap of grass and wood. Hence try to save yourself before getting destroyed. There is no other way out other than conciliation when the enemy is protected by a strong one. So, to escape peril, handover the Heaven and the earth along with the riches and the retinue to Indra and rule only the Nether region and surrender to the Universal Devī.’ Saying thus and accepting worship from him Śukrācārya went away to his desired place. 19 to 24

“Ordered by the king the ministers expressed their individual views. One of them suggested conciliation. Another one preferred sowing dissensions. The third one recommended the path of bribery. Some others were for attack. Thus there was great confusion in the assembly. The famous Śrutavarma, the son of Viśukra, who was considered as equal to Śukrācārya, bowed to Bhaṇḍāsura and said thus: ‘Oh king! Listen. I will talk based on political science. 26 to 28

‘External appearance is naturally unsteady and defective. Hence the reality of everything has to be known through intelligence. One who acts thoughtlessly perishes like a moth in the fire. Prosperity follows him who acts thoughtfully. A minister who is uselessly adamant, who lacks clarity, who is hasty, who always agrees with the king and who is selfish will surely ruin the kingdom and the king just like a leaky boat drowns the passengers and the navigator. Therefore a king who cares for his kingdom must abandon bad ministers. 29 to 32

We have heard that in the past the demons Śumbha and Niśumbha who were extremely powerful and who had a huge army were killed in the war by Caṇḍikā. An intelligent person should by all effort avoid peril. Might is best when there is no fear. Only peace is the recourse during danger. A wise person should use all his strength to prevent destruction of the root. Where is the hope for fruits without the root? If the root is protected there would be fruits. At that time one demon intoxicated with arrogance addressed the king thus: "Oh Lord of the demons! Listen to my words that will delight you. Frightened young boys should not be allowed to counsel. This young boy does not at all know about your strength. He is frightened by the words of the scared brahmin Śukrācārya. What can a brahmin understand about the war of a king? Brahmins might know about sacrificial rites; they might be experts in vedic texts; they might know the methods of invoking, but how can they know about war? (49 to 52) They might know the sharpness of their studies; they may be adepts to handle kuśa grass and the sacrificial wood, but they are ignorant about the sharp sword and the arrows (53). If the brahmins can win a war by chanting mantras then really elephants will urinate being afraid of dogs that are village lions (54). If the brahmins can show their strength and fight a war then even jackals can tear the temple of an elephant. (55). Oh king! Rise up. This is not the time for taking rest. An enemy, man or woman should not be ignored (56). Alas! Today if a woman can conquer you who can uproot the Meru mountain, who can scorch the three worlds by the heat of valour, then the petals of the blue lily can split the mountain and a massive iron mountain can be shattered by sacrificial grass (57, 58). Or else, Oh king! You stay back enjoying royal pleasures and order me your servant. I will quickly capture Her and Brahmā and others or even kill them and place them before you' (59).

Then seeing the Supreme Devī, Indra and others requested Brahmā and others that the Devī should be provided with a place to stay. 1

“Oh Agastya! After hearing the gods, listen to what Brahmā and others after bowing requested the Universal Empress. ‘Oh Parameśvarī! Indra and others desire Your presence here by which they can see You everyday. By Your grace, we the lords of the tendencies (Sattva, Raja and Tamas) can see Your lotus feet by reaching Your abode. But Indra and others subjected to the conditions of creation cannot penetrate the Universe and see You. They however long to see You. Hence create an abode here itself and stay here.’ 2 to 5

Then the universal Mother as requested by them fashioned Kameśvara from Her half body and wedded Him and stayed with Him. 6 to 8

Hearing the narration from Hayagrīva, Agastya keen on knowing the glory of the Supreme Devī inquired again thus: 'Oh Compassionate Hayagrīva! Where is that city wherein stays the Transcendental Devī? How does it look? How vast is it? How did the universal sculptor get to know about it which is unapproachable by Indra and others? What is its design? Did not Devī Tripurasundarī who was worshipped through the method of Śrī-Sūkta by Indra and others, bless them? What is that method? What is that mantra? What is its greatness? Oh Hayagrīva! Tell all this to me who is your disciple and devotee and bless me.'

'Oh Agastya! You have devotion and faith. I will answer you. This knowledge should never be disclosed to him who has no belief and devotion and who is perfidious. You are blessed on this earth because you are very much enthusiastic to listen to Her story. Your interest is not a result of small merit. Devotion towards gods with tendencies is quite common. But devotion to the feet of Devī Tripurā is rather rare.

*Only if conjoint with Śakti, would Śiva become capable of creating the universe.
Otherwise the God is unable to even

Saundaryalaharī, Stanza 1

‘The birth in which a person attains devotion to Devī Tripurasundarī will be his final birth. Devotion towards Śiva, Viṣṇu and others is considered as the beginning of the path. After gradually worshipping Viṣṇu and others, a person will get into the worship of the Sacred Feet of the Devī and get completely released. Other than this method one cannot attain liberation even after myriads of Yugas. 19, 20

‘Regarding this I will tell you the reason so that you will have no doubt. In this world an emperor will have a graded attachment towards his people, like important, average and least important. These persons if pleased will grant higher positions to their juniors. Oh Agastya! It is like this. If the gatekeeper is pleased there will be no problem for entry. Similarly if the one in charge of the courtyard is pleased, further entry can be had. Thus let there be no doubt in the well-known fact that Brahmā and others born out of the tendencies are the worshippers of Devī Tripurasundarī. Though in reality there is no difference between Devī and all, from the worldly angle differences like important, subordinate and so on exist just like the importance to the head in a human body. 21 to 25

‘Oh Brahmin! You are very fortunate in having devotion to Devī Tripurā which is the result of good association. Your wealth and your penance are really wonderful. Listen. I will tell you the reason for your devotion to Devī Tripurasundarī. I will tell you how the royal girl Lopāmudrā who is your dear wife while she was in her father’s house long ago acquired devotion towards the lotus feet of Devī. No one knows about this. 26 to 28

“The prominent Śakti of Devī Tripurasundarī is known as Bhagamālinī. The king was always engrossed in Her worship. The pure-minded Lopāmudrā right from her young age, was engaged in the service of her father and was exposed to the procedures of the worship of Devī. While the king was taking care of the kingdom, Lopāmudrā worshipped the Devī. Thus after a long period of devoted and contemplated worship, Devī was pleased with her and prompted her to seek a boon. Lopāmudrā sought the service of the lotus feet of the universally adored Devī. Pleased with her, the Devī initiated her into the auspicious mantra of Śrī Tripurā. Lopāmudrā picked up that Vidyā which was like a diamond immersed in the ocean of vocabulary. Then by the grace of that mantra she came to be known as its seer and the mantra was termed by her name. Because of your association with her as her husband, you are also devoted to Devī Tripurā.”

Then Hayagrīva pleased with Agastya said thus: ‘Oh Agastya! Listen with concentration. I will tell you the extremely sacred procedure of Śrī Sūkta about which you had inquired. This should not be disclosed to a non-devotee and also to him who is devoted to another deity. Just like the Śrī Vidyā mantra, this should be secretly guarded. 36 to 38

‘Śrī Sūkta with its origin in the Veda has sixteen mantras (Rks). In the past it was sighted by Lakṣmī and drawn out of the ocean of Veda. By worshipping the Transcendental Śakti with it Lakṣmī became the universal Mother and universally worshipped. Propitiated for twenty hundred million years [one Arbuda = one hundred million years] the pleased Supreme Tripurasundarī offered a boon to Lakṣmī. 39 to 41

Without protection the world will perish. This would mean the flouting of the laws of My creation. At present you will not be liberated. But I will always bear your appellation in My mantras and retain your form. Listen. I will tell you about this. 42 to 44

At its top there is a region of four hundred Yojanas. [One Yojana is eight or nine miles). You have to build the city of Devī Tripurasundarī according to architectural rules for the benefit of the world after hearing from me. It should be attractive and beautiful with many ramparts representing a replica of the universe that I am going to explain.’

'Beyond many myriads of universes, lies the ocean of nectar which is infinitely huge with dancing tides as high as the Sumeru mountain. In the centre of that ocean is the attractive island of the gems that is driving away by its effulgence the array of darkness and which is spread over hundred crore Yojanas. It has many forests of Kalpaka trees that are wonderful. In that island is the city of Devi Tripurasundari containing all kinds of diamonds and spread over four lakhs of Yojanas. Of the same dimension is the strong Iron square fort which illuminates the directions. The iron fort is four thousand Yojanas wide with ramparts, main gates in the four directions and trench all around. 1 to 6

'In the interior of the iron fort at a distance of seven thousand Yojanas lies the bronze shining fort. Between the iron and the bronze forts there are hundreds of Kalpaka trees, hundreds of wells each ten yojanas wide, lotus ponds each hundred yojanas wide, the flooring is made up of equal proportion of iron and bronze; There are many kinds of birds and animals; in the eight directions there are eight bronze houses situated on lotus-shaped platforms and each house has many paintings and five enclosures and hundred yojanas high and beautiful. In those eight houses is seated on a high throne Mahākāla assuming eight forms and embraced by Kālī and attended by a large number of servants and filled with pomp acquired by serving the feet of Devī Tripurā.

'In the interior of the bronze fort, at a distance of seven thousand yojanas is situated the copper fort, bright like the rising Sun and has the same number of gates, wells and lotus shaped dwellings. The ground between the bronze and the copper forts is made of bronze and copper and has the Kalpaka garden wherein exists the lovely spring season served by the śaktis Madhu and Mādhava worshipping the Devī. The spring season shines there with its attendants. The dimension of the fort, the gates, wells are as described earlier. Anything special will be told as it comes up.

Hearing such wonderful description, the surprised Viśvakarma again inquired Brahmā thus: "Oh Brahmā! I am asking you again because I have many doubts about what I have heard. You are competent to answer me. Who built this city and why? You have said that those born out of the three tendencies have no entry into this city. Again you have described the existence of serpents and men in this city. How is this possible? Oh Lord! show mercy on me." 1 to 4

Inquired thus Brahmā said in this manner to Viśvakarma; "Oh Viśvakarma! I will tell you about the secret account. Long ago we were created by the universal Devī for creating, sustaining and destroying activities according to the three tendencies Sattva, Rajas and Tamas. Then while we were carrying out our duties we were always perplexed and propitiated the Devī. Then the Supreme Power Tripurasundarī who is immutable and who is just an embodiment of Consciousness and Sound incorporeally addressed us thus: 'Oh Children! What is your desire.' 5 to 8

Hearing the transcendental words we praised Her in many ways with folded hands and love and said thus, "Oh Great Devī! You have engaged us in the worldly tasks in which we are not interested. Nothing other than meditating on Your form is pleasing us just like the salt water to the persons who have tasted nectar. Oh Devī! we are not interested in our activities. Hence have mercy on us." 9 to 12

Requested thus by Brahmā and others, Devī Tripurā again said thus: "Oh Brahmā and other gods! At present your request cannot be granted. It is impossible to avoid the duties which have been formulated by Me earlier. You have no freedom to worry about this. If you desire I can grant an alternate request." 13, 14

Then the Devī Tripurā was requested by us thus: "Oh Mother! If this is so, we want You the Great Devī to assume the form of Śrī Rājarājeśvarī with the three Guṇas (tendencies) and rule the assembly of universes and there we can serve you daily and become interested in the worldly duties and obey Your orders as well." 15, 16

Hearing us, Devī Tripurasundarī said thus: "Let it be so. For your good I will assume a visible form. But I will not be within the universes. Even then I will create another gem island in the nectarian ocean and let the lords of the worlds worship me there and offer oblations into the altar containing the fire of consciousness and meditate on Me as desired by them either as an auspicious female or puruṣa. Assuming that form which was meditated by you I will rule the host of the universes. In that island I will be visible to all the lords of the different universes, in my gross form." Saying thus to Brahmā and others the Devī disappeared.

17 to 22

अथ तस्या वचनतो ब्रह्माण्डाज्जिर्गता वयम्। पीयूषाब्धिं समासाद्य रत्नद्वीपं समन्ततः ॥ २३ ॥

चिन्तां प्राप्ता वयं तत्र नाऽग्निरस्ति न चेन्धनम्।

Then according to Her instructions we came out of the universe and reached the nectarian ocean and after searching for a long time found the gem island which contained nine types of diamonds whose effulgence had spread to all directions. Going there we constructed the most auspicious altar and worried about installing the fire that was mentioned by the Devī, as there was neither wood nor fire.

23 to 25

अथ देवः शिवः कुण्डे स्वाक्ष्णोऽग्निमनुकल्पयत् ॥ २६ ॥
अनिन्धनं तु तं दृष्ट्वा प्रशमाभिमुखं शुचिम्। विष्णुः स्वयं स्वचेतोऽश्रैरेधांसि समकल्पयत् ॥

पराशक्तिरियं तत्र ततोऽस्माभिरभिष्टुता। निर्ययौ पावकात्तस्माद्बहिस्त्रैलोक्यसुन्दरी ॥ ३१ ॥

Then Lord Śiva created fire in the altar from his own eyes. Seeing that fire diminishing for want of fuel Viṣṇu created the fuel from his own mind. Then as the fire was ablaze, Brahmā made his own mind as the sacrificial animal, his intellect as the ghee and his ego as the oblation and used his senses as the vessels in that sacrifice for the Transcendental Devī. Then after meditating on the feminine form of the Devī when Brahmā offered the oblations then the Supreme Devī manifested in the middle of the altar as meditated upon. As we were praying to Her, the Supreme Devī came out of the fire in a most attractive form. 26 to 31

अथाऽवदन्मां परमा क्वाऽऽसनं मे विनिर्दिश। आदिष्ट एवं परममासनं कल्पितं मया ॥ ३२ ॥

सर्वसामर्थ्यविहितान्यासनान्यपि तानि मे। परःशतं विशीर्णानि तदाऽहं लज्जितोऽभवम् ॥ ३४ ॥

Then the Supreme Devī asked me for a seat. Ordered thus I created an excellent seat which was shattered by Her touch. Again I created another seat made of many strong material and it was also shattered. I was put to shame on seeing all the seats that were created by all my power being shattered into hundreds of pieces. 32 to 34

अथाविरासीन्निमिषात् सर्वदेवः सदाशिवः। तदिच्छयैव तुर्यश्च तौ तां देवीं प्रणोमतुः ॥ ३५ ॥

Then immediately there appeared Sadāśiva the lord of all. As desired by Her the fourth god Īśvara also appeared and both of them bowed to Her. 35

तावन्नवीत्यरा देवी सा कल्पयतामासनम्। दध्यौ सदाशिवः श्रुत्वा वाक्यं तस्याः क्षणादथ ॥

फलकं कल्पयत्तस्य मूर्त्या संघटितं शुभम्।

The Supreme Devī told them to prepare a seat. Hearing Her, Sadāśiva quickly meditated and there appeared myriads of Sadāśivas and Īśvaras. Then pulling out the essence from all of them five extremely beautiful forms were generated. From the aspect of Sadāśiva was formed an auspicious crimson red plank having the form of Sadāśiva. 36 to 38

ईशरुद्रहरिविधिशक्तिसंघचतुष्टयैः ॥ ३९ ॥

पादांस्तन्मूर्तिघटितान्निर्ममे स सदाशिवः। अशेषपृथिवीसारसंभृताऽऽस्तरणं ततः ॥ ४० ॥

उपधानं विरचयद्देवदेवः सदाशिवः। प्रणम्य प्राह तां देवीं सिद्धमम्ब समारुह ॥ ४२ ॥

Then from the strengths of the groups of the four deities Īśāna, Rudra, Viṣṇu, and Brahmā, Sadāśiva prepared the four legs for the seat.

Then He prepared a soft swan feather-like seat spreading on it from the essence of the entire lot of earths. After making ready a pillow out of the group of peaks of Meru mountain, Sadāśiva bowed to the Devī and said "Oh Mother! The seat is ready. Please be seated." 39 to 42

तन्मध्ये तं गुणेशाना नमस्कृत्य सदाशिवम् । प्रोचुर्देव नौपयिकं पीठमेतद्धि मन्दिरम् ॥ ४३ ॥
आकाशसंश्रयं तस्मान्मन्दिरं कुरु सुन्दरम् ।

Meanwhile Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra bowed to Sadāśiva and said thus: "Oh Lord! without a dwelling (shelter) this seat will be useless. Hence create a beautiful shelter for this in space. 43

सदाशिवोऽपि युक्तं तन्मत्वा चक्रे गृहं शुभम् ॥ ४४ ॥
चिन्तामणिगणैः कीर्णं नानारत्नोपशोभितम् । योजनानां द्वे सहस्रे विस्तृतौ गृहराजकः ॥ ४५ ॥

मत्वा गृहं तदाकाशेन मनोहरमुत्तमम् । ससर्ज तस्य परितो महापद्मवनं शुभम् ॥ ४७ ॥
संप्रोक्तलक्षणं तेन मन्दिरं तद्व्यराजत ।

Agreeing with them, Sadāśiva created an auspicious dwelling made of Cintāmaṇi gems and many beautiful diamonds. That great house covered an area of two thousand yojanas and had four gates representing the four Vedas. It was beautiful with the vast sky as its roof. Taking the house as grand with that roof, Sadāśiva created a huge sacred lotus garden around it. With all such features the dwelling looked bright and grand. 44 to 47

सदाशिव ममाख्यानमनाख्यायाऽद्भुतं कुरु । आख्याताऽहं येन लोके भवामि विदिताऽऽकृतिः ॥

In that dwelling sat on the diamond throne the Great Devī Tripurasundarī illuminating the surrounding. She was praised in many ways by innumerable Brahmas, Viṣṇus, Rudras, Īśānas. She said to Sadāśiva thus: "Oh Sadāśiva! Meditating on My accounts, bring out My legend by which My form will be known to the world." 48 to 51

एवं तथा नियुक्तोऽथ देवदेवः सदाशिवः। यावत्तस्याः समाख्यानं चिन्तयामास मानसे॥ ५२ ॥
तावद्ब्रह्मविष्णुरुद्रमुखैः संप्रार्थितोऽभवत्।

Directed by Her thus, when the Lord Sadāśiva was thinking about Her legend, he was requested by Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra and others thus:
52

देव नोपयिकं होतद्भासते नः पराम्बिका ॥ ५३ ॥

चितिर्द्रष्टृमयी नित्या सदसद्रूपकारणम्। ध्यानानुरोधवपुषा दयया दृश्यतां गता ॥ ५४ ॥

तदेतस्या जगद्धात्र्या अनुरूपं पतिं शुभम्। वरं कल्पय यन्नः स्यात् सर्वेषामभिवाञ्छितम् ॥

“Oh Lord! We think that the Devī in this form will not be of any use. She who is consciousness, witness, eternal and responsible for existence or otherwise has with kindness become visible in the feminine form corresponding to our meditation. It is opposed to the worldly etiquette that a woman does not shine without the support of a man. It is rare in the world that a woman is without the support of a man just as a creeper without a tree. Hence find a suitable husband for this Devī, the protector of the universe and fulfill our desire.” 53 to 57

श्रुत्वैवं गुणमूर्तीनामुक्तं देवः सदाशिवः। चिन्तयित्वा चिरं वाक्यं ग्राह्यव्यवसितान्तरः॥ ५८ ॥

नैतस्याः सदृशः कोऽपि कुत एवाधिको भवेत्। तदस्याः सर्वलोकैकमातुर्भर्ताऽत्र को भवेत्॥

Hearing them who are born out of tendencies, Sadāśiva after thinking for a long time and deciding said thus: “Oh Trinity Deities! Listen to me with patience. This trans-transcendental Devī is nothing but existence and knowledge. Existing alone before everything, She is the independent Consciousness. Before Her there was no existence, non-existence, differences or non-differences. She was shining by the greatness of Her intrinsic nature. This wheel of the multitude of creation is just a reflection in the mirror of Her Consciousness. When there is no one equal to Her, who can excel Her. Hence who can be the fit husband for this unique Mother of the universe?

न हि मेऽत्र भवेच्छक्तिः कर्तुं स्यात्खलु किञ्चन। वदत्येवं सदा पूर्वे शिवेऽस्माकं प्रपश्यताम्॥
विदित्वाऽस्मत्समीहां सा त्रिपुरा परमेश्वरी। ईषत् स्मितं कृतवती कोटिपूर्णेन्दुभासनम् ॥ ६४॥

“I am unable to do anything in this matter.” As Sadāśiva was saying thus and as we were watching, the Supreme Devī Tripurasundarī understanding our desire, gave a little smile which was luminous like a myriad of full-moons.

63, 64

अथाऽभवन्महाशब्दो ब्रह्माण्डौघविभेदनः। विदलन् श्रोत्रजालानि बधिरीकृतदिक्तटः ॥ ६५॥
प्रजज्वाल महातेजः सर्वदिङ्मण्डलादनम्। तटित्कोटयुदयाभासं सर्वचक्षुःप्रमोषणम् ॥ ६६॥
तेन शब्देन महता तेजसा च समन्ततः। बधिरान्धीकृताः किं तदित्याश्चर्यं समागताः ॥ ६७॥

Then a loud sound that would split the heap of universes was heard deafening every one in all directions. A great effulgence bright like a myriad lightnings that would swallow the entire directions and blind all eyes, started ablaze. Rendered deaf and blind by that sound and brilliance, we were wonderstruck as to what it might be.

65 to 67

दृष्टाऽस्माभिः क्षणेनैव ततः सा परमेश्वरी। समानसुन्दराङ्गस्य पर्यङ्कमणिशोभिनी ॥ ६८॥

क्षिपन्निव तन्मिथुनं परीरम्भसुखोत्थणम्।

Then immediately we saw Devī Parameśvarī seated brilliantly on the left thigh of an equally beautiful god who was as if coupled with his own image in a mirror. Oh Viśvakarma! We enjoyed unrivalled happiness having achieved our desire. The pair displaying excessive joy of mutual embrace were surpassing each other by their beauty and charm.

68 to 70

अथाऽब्रवीन्नः परमा देवा वः सिद्धमीप्सितम् ॥ ७१॥

अहं द्विधा हि संजाता भवदीप्सितहेतवे। वदन्त्वावयोर्नामनि यावः ख्यातिं यतस्त्वह ॥ ७२॥

. Then the Supreme Devī told us: “Oh Gods! Your desire has been fulfilled. For that I have appeared in two forms. Tell us by which single name both of us will become famous.”

71, 72

Hearing this Sadāśiva who saw us ignorant, bowed to her and said thus: "Oh Devī! Because You have fulfilled our desires (Kāma) You will be Kāmeśvarī and the lord will be Kāmeśvara. Because You are the governors of us the king of kings You will be Rājarājeśvarī and the lord will be Rājarājeśvara. You will be Tripurasundarī and He will be Tripurasundara." 73 to 75

Then we, Brahmā and others prayed to the Supreme Devī and seeing Her alone requested Her thus: "Oh Mother! You should have a retinue. We are not very much pleased to see You lonely." 76, 77

Hearing that wonderful account, the divine architect Visvakarma who was eager to listen again inquired thus: "Oh Lord! How many Saktis did Devi Tripurāmbā create? What are their forms and work? Which is their abode? How many Saktis did Mahātripurasundarī create and what are their forms? How and where is the abode of these Saktis, which is said to be a replica of the universe, which was created by Devi Tripurāmbā? I am interested in listening? Please narrate all this to me." 1 to 4

Thus inquired by Visvakarma, the pleased Brahmā said thus: "Oh Visvakarma! Listen with patience to this great secret. To start with, Devi Tripurā created Mahātripurasundarī who in turn created nine Saktis and ordered them to create a host of Saktis. They asked Mahātripurasundarī thus: "How do we create other Saktis mentioned by You?"

Hearing them Devī Mahātripurasundarī said again thus: "By your self-power you create. Do not delay." Saying thus She created ten Śaktis with red complexion. These Śaktis were wielding a noose, a lotus, and a goad and decorated with the digit of the moon on their tresses. They are Aṇimā, Laghimā, Mahimā, Īsitvikā, Vāsitvā, Prākāmya, Bhuktī, Icchā, Prāpti, Sarvakāmasiddhi.

Thus requested the Supreme Devī created a good place. It has a square platform two yojanas high and two hundred yojanas wide. On that in the four directions, after a free space of four yojanas, are four beautiful gates. Connected with it, within, there is a beautiful space twenty yojanas wide and six yojanas long having another square platform two yojanas high. Further within, there is the third platform two yojanas wide and one yojana high. Thus there are three platforms. 15 to 19

She is seated shining on the lap of Kāmeśvara on the throne made up of five Brahmās (i.e., Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśāna and Sadāśiva). The sixteen Śaktis created from Her own body are serially located around the triangular land below the bindu. These Śaktis representing the digits of the moon are the ruling deities of the days in a fortnight and are called Nityās. I will mention their names to you. The first one is Kāmeśvarī, the second Bhagamālīnī; then Nityaklinnā, Bheruṇḍā, Vahnivāsinī, Mahāvidyeśvarī, (Mahāvajreśvarī according to Lalitopākhyāna), Śivadūtī, Tvaritā, Kulasundarī, Nityā, Nīlapatākā, Vijayā, Sarvamangalā, Jvālāmālā and Citrā. They are located on the left, right and back sides of the triangle in groups of five on each of the sides. The Supreme Devī Rājarajeśvarī is Herself the seventeenth Nityā. The sixteenth one viz., Mahānityā who was the first born has attained union with the seventeenth by virtue of her penance and powers. Mahātripurasundarī who came first has been absorbed into the bindu and located there. 27 to 34

The nine śaktis created by Her earlier are individually named as Prakatā, Guptā, Guptatarā, Sampradāya, Kulottirṇā, Nigarbhā, Rahasya, Atirahasyā and Parāpararahasya yoginis. They are individually located at the square, sixteen petalled, eight petalled, fourteen triangled, two ten triangled, eight triangled, single triangled, and bindu enclosures of Śrīcakra. 35 to 38

Again she created eight Śaktis Brāhmī and others who represent the groups of alphabets and located them in the second platform of the square enclosure. Then the Prakatā nitya created another ten Saktis (known as Mudrā deities) and located them in the third platform of the square enclosure. 40, 41

Then the Nitya by name Guptā seeing the sixteen petaled enclosure created sixteen Śaktis. Then the nityas called Guptatara, Sampradāya, Kulottirṇā, Nigarbhā — separately created wonderful Saktis corresponding to their enclosures. The Rahasya nityā created seven saktis and the Atirahasya nityā created one Śakti. 42 to 44

The ten Śaktis of the third platform in the square enclosure are the embodiments of the Mudras (seals or locks) envisaged with that knowledge. They are termed so because they bring happiness (मुदम्), to the Devī. By generating happiness in beings they bring about agitation (क्षोभनं), repulsion (द्रावणं), attraction (आकर्षणं) control (वश), passion (उन्मादनं), seeds (बीजं), sprouts (अङ्कुर), movement in space (खेचर), trisection (त्रिखण्ड), and genetic cognisance (योन्यात्मभाव). These powerful Mudras are well-known as Samkṣobhinī, Vidrāviṇī, Ākarṣiṇī, Vāṣaṅkarī, Unmādinī, Mahāṅkuśā, Trikhaṇḍā, Khecharī, Bījā and Yoni and are situated in the directions and angles of the third platform of the square enclosure of Śrīcakra.

This moving and non-moving universe is the sport of the Supreme Great Devī Tripurā. By partially manifesting in Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva, She is managing the activities of this dynamic world. She, the Mother who is merely Consciousness and the indivisible unique essence of the universe becomes many by virtue of Her freedom. Just like Sun the jewel of the sky who is a single mass of thousand rays appears variously or just like the single sea appears as waves, tides and foam or just like a single mirror shows thousands of images, She the transcendental One appears differentiated as well as unique. 6 to 10

Animā and other Śaktis are the partial manifestations of the Devī Tripurā who assumes a gross form by virtue of Her freedom. The names of the different Śaktis are according to their actions. 11, 12

The Śaktis thus born deluded by the Great Devī started competing with one another as low and high in their positions. 13

Seeing the disgraceful quarrel among the Śaktis, Mahātripurasundarī directed by the Great Devī said thus: "Oh Śaktis! Now all of you listen to me. There is no place in the vicinity of the Devī to those having jealousy and anger. You have to acquire your status through the power of penance. There is no other means." Saying thus, She herself started first doing an astonishing penance. 14 to 16

Seeing Mahātripurasundarī engrossed in penance, all the other Śaktis did penance with controlled minds. 17

A long period passed while the Śaktis were engaged in penance. Then the pleased Great Devī addressed them. 18

“Oh My Children! I am pleased with your penance. I will allot your deserving place.” Saying thus the Great Devī made Mahātripurasundarī in charge of the entire Śrīcakra. Then the Nityās were located in the triangle, five on each side. Though the sixteenth nityā was given a prominent place in the front, she considered that as not befitting and again started a great arduous penance. Similarly Kāmeśvarī and Bhagamālīnī also considering their allotment as insufficient, started doing a great penance.

When all the Śaktis were engaged in penance Devī Rājarājeśvarī seeing Herself alone felt it not right. Catching Her intention Mahātripurasundarī dislodged ten Śaktis from Her limbs and weapons. The Śaktis thus produced asked Mahātripurasundarī for a place to stay. She told them to find it through penance. Thus advised the Śaktis did penance along with the previous Śaktis.

Again seeing Herself alone, She cast Her glances around by which four śaktis were created. They were golden coloured holding a lotus and dressed and decorated with white jewels. Seeing the entire group of śaktis doing penance they also, Oh Viśvakarma! decided to join them.

Again by seeing around another four Śaktis came out wielding the noose, sign of protection, sign of boon and the goad, all red in colour and decoration, who seeing their predecessors took to penance. Again were created four Śaktis wielding the noose, the book, the beads and the goad, all red in colour and decoration. Another four were again created, who were crystal clear coloured wielding the noose, sign of protection, sign of boon and the goad, who also started penance. Again another four Śaktis red coloured and decorated were created. The Devī Tripurā saw all of them engaged in penance. Seeing the mature penance of the sixteenth Nityā, Devī Tripuresvarī asked her to seek a boon and she asked for merger with Devī Tripuresvarī since all other states are ephemeral. Thus the sixteenth Nityā got united with the Transcendental Devī.

Along four Śaktis born in five groups from Her body, She Herself joined each group as the fifth one and stayed happily. Hence they got the name as Pañca-pañcakas. In the first group She is called Ratnesvarī, in the next, Kāmadhuk, then Kalpalatesī, then Kośesvarī and finally Lakṣmīśvarī.

Siddhalakṣmī, Rājamātanginī, Bhuvaneśānī and Vārāhī are the Ratneśvaris. Sudhāpīṭheśvarī, Sudhāsūṭh, Amṛteśānī and Annaprapūrī are the Kāmadughas.

Parañjyotiḥ, Niṣkalaśāmbhavī, Ajapā and Mātṛkā are the Kośeśvaris. Lakṣmī, Mahālakṣmī, Triśakti, Sāmrajyalakṣmī are the Lakṣmīśvaris. These are the pañcaka Goddesses.

46, 47

एवं पञ्चकदेवीनां तपसा परितोषिता। ददौ समीपसंस्थानं बिन्दुचक्रोपरि क्रमात् ॥ ४८ ॥

Thus the Devī pleased by the penance of the Pañcaka deities gave them in an order, place near the Binducakra.

48

To Mātangī and Vārāhī who did special penance in the NE direction, the Devī gave immense wealth.

Mātangi was made the minister to take care of the administration of the worlds. Vārāhī was made the chief of the army to punish the wicked. 50

Then after a lapse of time the Devī Tripurā pleased by the services of these two deities gave them place in the golden fort and the emerald fort respectively. 51

ताभ्यः समयदेवीत्वं दत्त्वा स्वाऽग्रे च पृष्ठतः । वामे च दक्षिणे पार्श्वे स्थानं देव्यभिकल्पयत् ॥

Similarly, specially pleased by the penance of Kāmeśvarī, Vajreśī and Bhagamālīnī, the Devī provided them place in the front and on either sides of the back of the triangle and called them Samaya Deities who control the concept of time. 52, 53

The Śakti created by the Rahasyatara Yoginī got a place and power by virtue of her great penance in the diamond fort and stayed in the place by the river Vajra and being in charge of the diamonds she got the name as Vajreśvarī. 54, 55

Kāmeśvarī, Vajreśvarī and Bhagamālīnī deities because of their great penance obtained positions in the three angles of the triangle. Kāmeśvarī by Her penance secured the second place in the eight triangled enclosure. The other Śaktis were also located in suitable places by Mahātripurasundarī. 56, 57

 मूलदेव्याऽऽभिमुख्येन संस्थिताः सर्वशक्तयः।

After thus dividing and locating the Śaktis in the nine cakras, Mahātripurasundarī assumed nine forms each presiding over one cakra. The nine forms are—Tripurā, Tripureśī, Tripurasundarī, Tripuravāsinī, Tripurāśrīḥ, Tripuramālinī, Tripurāsiddhā, Tripurāmbikā and the ninth Herself Mahātripurasundarī. These nine Śaktis are situated in front of their enclosures all facing the Devī Rājarājeśvarī. 58 to 61

Then Brahmā and others saw the Śrīcakra surrounded by the group of Śaktis and thinking that it was not proper, requested Kāmeśa thus: "Oh Lord Kāmeśa! Please create from your power your retinue, because, only Śaktis will mean an imbalance. 62 to 64

Then Kāmeśvara from His power and the power of Kāmeśvarī created four forms named Mitreśa, Ṣaṣṭhīśa, Uddīśa and Charyānātha wielding the book, sign of protection, sign of boon and sign of knowledge in their hands; crystal-clear hued; dressed in white garments; with three eyes, seated in a lotus posture along with their consorts red in colour and having a pleasing face and look. Making them as the preachers of the Śakti-Mantras, Kāmeśvara asked them to create other teachers of the Śrīvidyā. 65 to 68

Then Mitreśa created the Divyas, Śaṣṭhīśa created the Siddhas; Uddīśa created the Mānavas with seven, four and eight members in each group respectively. The fourth one viz., Caryānātha created nine effulgent Nāthas who are the teachers of all knowledge and who are the embodiments of time. 69, 70

The Group of Gurus thus created performed penance and secured places behind the location of Tvaritā Nityā. There in three different rows the abodes of Divya, Siddha and Mānava Gurus were located. A person who propitiates through pūrṇābhiṣeka the Great Devī Tripurā according to the ordained procedure will secure a place in the above abode. Later instructed by the Gurus, he will reach the highest abode of the Devī. Thus I have narrated to you the great and highest secret about which you asked me.” 71 to 74

Then, Viśvakarma with devotion, again inquired Brahmā thus: "Oh Brahmā! I want to ask why the group of the Gurus were not equal in number. What are their names? Tell me about the fire altar. How did the fire of Consciousness appear there? Why did you think of Parāśakti in the female form in that altar? I am never satisfied even after hearing the wonderful legend repeatedly. Which being other than an unfortunate pillar will be satisfied drinking continuously the nectarian legend of the Devī who is our own Self? Oh Lord! Please tell me if I can listen to it?"

Hearing Viśvakarma, Brahmā was pleased and said thus: "Oh Viśvakarma! Listen carefully to the ancient purifying legend that has been kept a secret. Pleased with you I will narrate it to you. Mitreśa and other Gurus created by Rājarājeśvara are the teachers of speech and mantra and all of them represent pure knowledge. Devī Parāśakti appears as four forms of sound—Paśyantī, Madhyamā, Vaikharī and Parā. I will narrate this.

“The Power called Tripurā is Pure Consciousness. It is beyond speech, senses and mind. She, the Parameśvarī exists as Ātma in everything. She is beyond codes of conduct, free from conduct and the conductor. She is merely Pure Consciousness supporting all and beyond speech. She is just the soul and consciousness. By virtue of Her freedom She is termed as Māyā (illusion). Her glory that encompasses all is beyond logic and questioning. The being gets deluded in many ways by Her who is the pure soul. The creation is said to be the sport of the Devī. 12 to 14

This modification or uncertainty is the sound form manifesting in four ways as the gross, the middle, the subtle and the causal. Here the gross sound (audible) is termed as Vaikhari. In these the implied state preceding the articulate sound is indistinct and the distinct one are the alphabets. Even the articulate sound that exists everywhere is of two types namely common and supernatural. The supernatural sounds are the seven subtle states of the Nāḍabrahmā. They are Ṣaḍja, Ṛṣabha, Gāndhāra, Madhyama, Pañcama, Dhaivata and Niṣāda notes that are generated in the strings and throat. The tunes are counted as four, five, three and sixteen. Further they are countless because of different ramifications.

The three groups total to nineteen. The eight Mānavaughas are created by Uḍḍīśa. 24

इतीमे नवनाथस्तु ओघानामधिनायकाः ।

The sound is of the form of time limited to three syllabic instants. It consists of a group of inarticulates and eight articulate groups. The Navanāthas created by Caryānāthā determine the time frames and occupy the fourth state. They are named as Prakāśa, Vimarśa, Ānanda, Jñāna, Satya, Pūrṇa, Svabhāva, Pratibha and Subhaga. These nine are the lords of the Oghās. 25 to 27

Because of the varieties of knowledge (Mantra) the Oghas are of four types. Because of mixture (overlap) these Gurus are known as Miśras. There is a fifth Ogha (group) that preaches the knowledge about the Gurus. They are twelve, eleven and nine in number situated outside the cakra. They are Divyas, Kumāra and others as Siddhas. Nṛsimha and others are Mānavas.

In the centre of the human body there are three pure paths. They are Pingalā, Idā and Suṣumnā to the right, left and centre respectively. Among them the paths of desire and action are on either sides and the path of knowledge is in the centre as said by the learned and the cultured.

33, 34

Because of the obstruction (to the upward flow of Consciousness) human beings are engaged in action and desire. They are said to be conscious because the Consciousness that supports their action flows upwards.

In animals since the path of consciousness is prevented by lateral growth, they are unaware of the past and future events. Hence all animals are equal to inert things. 37

As such the three-eyed God Mahādeva excels all intellectuals. 38

Within the human body the central nerve (Suṣumnā) which is split supports the intellect. Hence there is the possibility of complete knowledge within us. 39

But within lord Mahādeva because of the excessive Consciousness the central nerve is unbroken in the region of the forehead. Since there is no ignorance within Mahādeva, the consciousness which is situated in His third eye is known as Cidagni (fire of consciousness). 40, 41

“Oh Viśvakarma! Listen. Now I will tell you why Brahmā meditated on a feminine form. Happiness in this world is nothing but the consciousness of being. Therefore even among animals love for happiness is common. It is quite clear that beauty is the cause for happiness. Because a woman is beautiful everyone in this world looks at woman as the source of happiness. 42 to 44

Hearing the pleasing narration from Hayagrīva, sage Agastya keen on listening to the story of Devī inquired again thus: “Oh Lord Hayagrīva! What did Bhaṇḍāsura, who came to spoil the penance of the gods, do after he went back disappointed to Śūnyanagara seeing the gods surrounded by fire? Please tell me about this in detail. Hearing your narration about Devī Lalitā, my desire to listen is really increasing very much.”

Thus inquired by Agastya, the sage Hayagrīva said thus: “Oh Agastya! Listen to the most wonderful and lovely story. After Bhaṇḍāsura returned to Śūnyakapura, the divine sage Nārada landed there from the sky like the autumnal cloud. Bhaṇḍāsura saw the divine sage who was playing his sacred Vallakī and descending from the sky like a white cloud. Immediately Bhaṇḍāsura rose and brought the sage and suitably worshipped him and with folded hands said thus:

“Tell me about the gods, who I hope are dwindling day by day. Generally brahmins are cowards. Even my guru having no idea about my strength that frightens gods and demons is caught by fear. Informed that the gods are propitiating Parāśaktī who if pleased will definitely vanquish me, and that I should spoil their worship, I went there to destroy them. Seeing the gods along with Indra surrounded by fire, I happily returned to my abode. I want to inquire about this. How were the gods caught by the conflagration and burnt? Has any one among them escaped? Oh Best among sages! Please tell me about this.” 10 to 14

The divine sage who was thus inquired, said with a laugh to the lord of the demons thus: “Oh Lord of the demons! I am never jealous about you people. We, who are wedded to truth never utter a lie. Though you are learned, you are talking like an ignorant one. Seeing you happy when you should be sorrowful, I feel that such a state of your mind is really because of bad luck. 15 to 17

Hearing Nārada, the lord of the demons laughed satirically and said thus: "Oh Sage! I had already told you that brahmins are by nature cowards. You are unaware that I frighten even death. Viṣṇu who is the strongest among gods, was defeated in war by me. I am the lord of hundred and five universes. I am the creator of a host of gods, demons, universes, missiles and weapons. Brahmā, Viṣṇu and so on are under my control. Why are you afraid of a woman? Women are by nature weak."

At that time the wives of Bhaṇḍāsura, Sammohinī and others brought the divine sage to their inner apartment through attendants. After worshipping the lion among the sages with services like offering a seat, washing the feet and hands and offering eatables, they said with devotion to him thus:

gurus some terrifying news. We understand that Devī Lalitāpāramēśvarī worshipped by the gods, has manifested to protect them and kill our husband. Hence, please advice the demon king so that he escapes from the peril. Drowned in the sea of sorrow we have surrendered to you. Please save us who are your servants, from the ocean of distress." Saying thus the wives of the demon Bhaṇḍāsura touched the feet of the sage and wept.

Seeing their tears, Nārada overcome with compassion got the demon king there and spoke thus: "Oh Lord of the Demons! Listen to my ambrosial words. Do not put your wives into grief and destroy your relatives. In this world it is extremely rare to find a person who gives an affectionate advice. A person who talks sweetly without considering the prognostic danger is an enemy in the form of a friend. He who intelligently analyses the impending danger and talks bitter like a medicine is to be taken as a friend.

Hearing Nārada, Bhaṇḍāsura laughed jokingly and holding the divine sage by hand, climbed to the top of the palace. On the top floor, which had a golden dome resembling the peak of the Meru-mountain, he sat on a gem-studded soft seat by the side of a window. He seated the divine sage on a soft cotton seat. Then he said thus: "Oh Divine Sage! You should not become angry on me who is your disciple. I know that you are a great devotee of the feet of Parāśaktī. I am his dear wife attached to him like a shadow to a tree. On no account I will disobey him. It is said in the Dharmaśāstrā (religious codes) that a person, who saves from danger or takes care during childhood, is like a father. Hence I am your daughter according to dharma and you should not talk to me badly. A person treading a wrong path should take his mind as his enemy. If the mind is not controlled it will destroy him. Analyse the worldly activities with a bold and pure mind. The pleasure derived from a woman is universal with no difference even among animals. Therefore have love only towards your own wives and not others. Do not get reduced to ashes by the fire of anger of loyal wives.'

“Afraid of her curse I sought the blessings of Devī Lakṣmī by praying and bowing to her. After a long time she was pleased with me. When I requested for the release of the curse she said thus—“Oh Maṇisekhara! Your deed is very much despicable. I do not see anything that can nullify my curse which is irretrievable. You have to suffer for your action. Losing your body, you stay as air for a long time and then become a demon. But because you showed compassion and saved the woman drowning in water you have earned a merit by which you will become prosperous and the lord of many universes and enjoy desired comforts. You will get killed by Mahādevī and reach Her abode. You will stay there for a long period being worshipped by demons and finally you will unite with Her and become free from rebirth.” 77 to 83

Hearing her, I again inquired the universal mother thus: “Oh Devī! Who is this Great Devī by whom I will get killed in war? Is She greater than you? I do not know any one superior to you. Tell me Her rank and form. What is Her glory? 84, 85

Thus inquired, Devī Ramā the universal mother said thus: “Oh Maṇisekhara! Listen. That Devī is the Supreme and the Great Universal Consciousness. From Her own attributes, are born Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Hara possessing attributes like Satva, Rajas and Tamas in each of the universes. Īśvara who is born of all the three attributes does the work of concealing the destroyed universe. Sadāśiva obliges new creation. The entire creation is from Her glances and blessings. Sadāśiva creates newly to help liberate those souls that are bound to illusion from time immemorial. The souls existing in the dissolved state are not liberated because of their void non-recognisable nature. When they are created again with a body they acquire consciousness. 86 to 91

“Even Maheśvara is born from Her small portion. Therefore She is the essence. She who is termed as Supreme Consciousness is the soul of everyone. Like the wall to a painting and a mirror to an image She is predominantly present in this creation. Because of Her all pervasiveness, She is called ‘Brahmā’. That Tripurā is not feminine, not eunuch and not a man. She is the embodiment of Consciousness not realisable through words and mind. Free from inertness She is just Consciousness. She is the seventeenth Nityā inseparable from Parameśvara. Parameśvara has two aspects like action and the actor. The action is of sixteen types but the actor is only one. 92 to 95

Now I am despondent and desire to be killed by Her. I have decided to reside near Her in Her abode always meditating on Her lotus feet. I am waiting for the day when She will come and kill me in war along with my children, grand-children and wives. I am in a hurry to dwell in Her abode. Hearing the narration by Hārītāyana which was a demonstration of his self-experience, the extremely pleased Nārada said thus: "Oh Hārītāyana! You have very well narrated the ancient glory of the Devī which was lingering within and without my mind. Though the legend is ancient, your verbatim methodic exposition has envisaged an internal experience in me. You are really blessed on this earth because by the grace of the Supreme Devī you have known the ins and outs of Her glory. Therefore I will seek an answer from you about a doubt that is hidden in me over the years. How did you get to know about the ancient facts both open and hidden. Oh Disciplined One! How are you aware of the unseen and unheard incidents?" 1 to 5

Hearing Nārada, Hārītāyana smiled and said thus: "Oh Divine Seer! Listen. What has been narrated is very scanty. You will know the reason for this later. Just like people remember their experiences, I too recollect the past. By the grace of Brahmā I can see the ins and outs. By your grace and the blessings of the Devī I can recollect without distortion the past as if it is present experience." 6 to 9

"Knowing the thoughts of the gods, Brahmā and others born out of the three tendencies meditated upon Kāmeśvara who manifested then and there from Her with a form and ornaments matching with the Devī Mahādevī. “At that time the divine sage Nārada arrived at the feet of the Devī. After prostrating before Her and praising Her with many hymns, he spoke to Her humbly with folded hands and bent head.—‘Oh Devī! I have come from the residence of Bhaṇḍāsura. He is arriving here with a huge mighty army. I am sent here by the great lord of the demons to convey this message to you—“You weak woman! With whose support are you wanting to fight with me? Without knowing about my strength do not get foolishly destroyed. Discarding Brahmā and other gods who are cheats and who have been vanquished by me several times, join me. Opposing me, no man or woman can ever be happy even as in the jaws of death.”—Saying thus, Nārada expressed to the Devī the need for the highest preparation for war and also said thus “Oh Devī! I think you are as if defeated by the bold demon.”

“Oh Devī! Permit me quickly to ask You about a secret.” Hearing Nārada, the Supreme Devī looked at Mantriṇī. The clever Mantriṇī grasping the mind of the Devī took Nārada by holding his hand to a lonely place. There taking her seat, Mantriṇī said thus: “Oh Nārada! Ask about the point in your mind. I know that you are a great devotee of the feet of the Supreme Devī. In fact, there is nothing unknown to you in this world because of your devotion to Her. Even then, ask what you want. I will clear your doubt.” 26 to 29

Ordered thus by Mantriṇī, the Divine sage Nārada with folded palms sweetly put his questions to her. “Oh Devī! Bhaṇḍāsura who was examined by me really looks like a paramount devotee among us. How will that devotee of the Supreme Devī be defeated? Even then, he has himself told me that he would, after getting killed by the Devī in the war, will stay in Her sacred abode for a long period and finally merge in Her feet. How is it that such a wicked torturer of the world gets liberated? How can we obtain that state? Please answer me. 30 to 34

Just like a mother intent on protecting does not give her sick child what it likes, but forcibly feeds the disliked medicine, the Devī by killing Her great mighty devotee who has sinned heavily will grant him a place at Her feet even without employing methods like granting vision, speaking and using weapons. Let me tell you about this. Listen.” 35 to 39

To the right of Bālā Tripurasundarī joined Sampatkārī seated on a great elephant named Raṇakōlāhala which was resembling the huge peak of the Vindhya mountain, and which was creating three types of terrifying onomatopoeic sounds and which was naturally inebriated. She was wielding the great goad. Following her were myriads of intoxicated elephants hailing from Vindhya mountain, Malaya mountain and Prāgyotiṣa country. They were all well-trained in the ways of war and were sixty years of age. Mounted by persons wielding weapons and missiles and experts in warfare these elephants moved briskly along with the group of śaktis of Sampatkārī. 63 to 66

On the left side of Bālā, the great Devī Āśvārūḍhā was sitting on a tall excellent golden-hued horse named Aparājītā which was born in the Gandharva breed and which sped like wind and with auspicious signs like Śukti, Ardhaśuktimaṇi, svastik, lotus and pebbles it outweighed with its characteristics Uchchaisravas the horse of Indra. Its fine hoof was invisible even to a crafty careful eye. It had understood the mind of the Devī Āśvārūḍhā and also the movements of the enemy. Following Her were innumerable horses from Sindhu, Taṅkaṇa, Āradā, Pārvaṭī, Vārvarā, and Sutejanā with various hues like red, black, white, yellow, brown, pink, green, grey, spotted and bluish red and with dense hair. They were well trained to move in various ways, to dance to tunes. They were mounted by śaktis wielding varieties of missiles and weapons. They moved forward like the waves of the sea and appeared like splitting the earth by beating with their hoofs. 67 to 75

Hearing the big sound of the procession leading to victory of Śrī Lalitādevī, the demons were frightened as if from the god of death. Hearing that sound, Bhaṇḍāsura expecting his long-desired death from Her, quickly got ready to fight. Seeing the demons with faces like dried lotuses and terrified, Bhaṇḍāsura filled with compassion thought within himself thus: 79 to 81

नूनं हीमे मम कृते विनश्यन्ति सबान्धवाः ॥ ८२

लोके मृत्योर्नातिरिक्तं भयमस्ति कदाचन। मत्कृते निहतानेतान् शोचिष्यन्ति प्रियात्मजाः ॥

तच्छस्त्रानलपूतात्मा प्रपद्येऽभिमतं गतिम्। शोचयामि कुतस्त्वेता वियोज्य स्वस्वबान्धवैः ॥ ८५

“These persons (demons) for my sake will die along with their relatives. In this world there is no greater fear than death at any time. With their death for my sake their dear children, sisters and mothers will grieve. Alas! This would be painful. Therefore, I will go first and fight with Śrī Lalitāmbika and get purified by the fire of Her weapon and attain my desired end. Why should I cause agony to these demons by separating them from their relatives? 82 to 85

तदलं घोरनिघनारोदनेन कृतेन मे। शक्तोऽरक्षन् स्वीयजनं शोकस्थानात् कथञ्चन ॥ ८६ ॥

“Therefore I should not become the cause of such horrendous death. If a strong person does not protect his subordinates somehow from distress, he will become a sinner. Thus, if I go first and get killed by the Devī, my relatives will suffer the same agony of being bereaved from me. After my death my relatives will face harassment and shame from the gods and lose their wealth and will be miserable. Hence this is also not correct. 86 to 89

 अप्रतीकार्यमेतत्तु दैवमत्र परायणम्।

“How can a person at the helm of affairs face defeat? After my death my brothers, children and other mighty relatives overcome by valour and anger would undoubtedly get themselves burnt like moths in the fire of war. Then the remaining cowards with less strength would helplessly like gods get separated from their wives and children and hide beneath the earth. Mutually grieving they would be worse than the dead. In any case it is impossible that the relatives will not suffer. Hence what is the use of my worrying? The best thing would be this—I will get killed by the Devī after all the demons are killed. I think this is auspicious because of many advantages. Getting killed by the weapons of the gods is purifying and confers stay in heaven. Women and children cannot have this chance. There is no way out. God only should help.

“Or else I had heard in the past from Brahmā that the Supreme Tripurā Devī will really fulfil the wants of Her devotees. Hence let Her not trouble my group of people. In reality they do not belong to me and I do not belong to them. Though I know about this, the Devī is deluding me. Therefore my worrying is a waste about this world which is like a dream. Hence I will completely surrender to Her. I will act only according to Her command and in no other way.

I am death unto death. I have created before you, weapons, missiles, magical experts and many worlds having moving and non-moving objects. I am the powerful lord of hundred and five universes. I did not hurry to kill the Devī thinking that She was a woman. Now seeing Her vehement desire to fight I will easily vanquish Her and bring Her to my harem and rejoice very much.” 101 to 107

Saying thus, the great demon with eyes reddened by fury instructed his charioteer Dīrghagrīva who was near-by to make ready his chariot. Then the charioteer within no time presented with humility the well-equipped excellent chariot to the lord of the demons. The mighty Bhaṇḍāsura holding the bow and the arrow boarded the superb chariot and furiously proceeded to fight. 1 to 3

Hearing about and seeing the departure of the lord of the demons to the war, the angry demons got ready quickly and proceeded. The soldiers holding weapons set out in groups surrounding Bhaṇḍāsura on all sides. 4, 5

The sons of Bhaṇḍāsura, all were equal in might to him. The valour of Kuṭilākṣa, the eldest among them was immeasurable. All of them who never failed in war preceded Bhaṇḍāsura well equipped in their chariots accompanied by hundred Akṣauhiṇī army. His two brothers Viṣaṅga and Viśukra with a valour matching that of Viṣṇu, and who always compete to fight first, moved in their chariots on either sides of Bhaṇḍāsura. Their eyes were red with anger. Holding a great bow, they looked as if they would swallow the enemies. Each of them had an army of one hundred Akṣauhiṇī. 6 to 10

When the lord of the demons thus set out for war the royal roads appeared like a river during rainy season eroding the banks, with vortices of chariots, with obstacles of horses, with crocodiles of elephants, with tortoises of shields, with waves ejecting frothy balls of flags, with serpents of long swords, with fishes of quivers, with lotuses of the faces of demons, with small fishes of their eyes, with swans and other birds of the variegated umbrellas, with many sea-horses of high raised billows, and with the gushing noise of the chariot wheels which flowed out of the gem-set city gate like the water diffusing into a field from the canal. The army came out of the gate very quickly. 12 to 17

Meanwhile, Vijaya, the minister quickly went near the demon-lord and seeking his permission, bowed and with folded hands said what was appropriate at that time. "Oh king of the demons! Your fame has spread everywhere. The Sun of your valour is scorching the universes up above. Viṣṇu who is considered as the mightiest was defeated facing you in war. Therefore it is certain that no one can conquer you in war. Notwithstanding this it is the duty of a minister to analyse and give timely advice to the king in accordance with the codes of administration. If he does not express what has to be said on time then he is unfit to be a minister. Four methods have been said in political science. Each one of them will be suitable under proper circumstance. By listening to the advice of a foolish minister, if the king adopts an unsuitable method, he will be ruined like a patient consuming unwholesome item. It is better to fight after diligent discussion with the intellectuals the information gathered by messengers and spies about the opponent. Therefore send dependable messengers and spies to the enemy. By the time they return our army will get ready and we can suitably safeguard the city. I have submitted before my lord what was to be said. It is for you now to act suitably."

Hearing the minister, Bhaṇḍāsura to satisfy his relatives accepted his advice as good for the kingdom and divided his army among the army chiefs. He deputed Kuṭilākṣa to guard the city. Bhaṇḍāsura addressed his able minister Amitraghna thus: "Oh Amitraghna! Go with my permission and convey my mind to that Lalitā.—'Oh Beautiful Devī! I would never fight with you who deserve to be protected. Then why have you come to fight with me? Your interest in war is acceptable to me. When I am not afraid of a great war, where is the fear to fight with you. But I am enticed by your charm. Hence discard the gods and join my group. Either by peaceful method or by war, I will bring you under my control. By opposing me you will definitely suffer. Think about this and quickly decide to join one of the sides.'—Convey this peacefully to her and return soon after finding out her intention, her strength and her further course of action.

Thus ordered, the two demons proceeded to the army of the Devī. Amitraghna somehow entered as if by a boat the ocean-like endless army which was guarded by śaktis wielding swords. As soon as he entered, the mighty demon was captured by Kāñcanābhā a servant-maid of Daṇḍanāthā. Slapping him and holding his neck she angrily scolded him with terrific words. "You fellow! Who are you who have entered stealthily our army protected by Daṇḍanāthā? Having entered the army without the permission of Daṇḍanāthā you will not return alive, just like yourself entering the jaws of death."

Amitraghna bowed and said thus: "I came here as ordered by Bhaṇḍāsura and I am his messenger. I will speak out his message— 'Oh Devī! There is no enmity between us. Why have you come to fight? Whether you fight or not you will become my captive. Tell me, how I can battle with you who are pleasing and dear to my heart? Therefore abandon the gods and take shelter under me.'—After giving this message I was asked to find out the strength and weakness of your army. Killing of a messenger is defaming. The learned say that the scriptures forbid killing of a messenger. Thinking thus I entered. Seen by the śaktis, I was captured by them as soon as I entered and I am brought before you. Now you are my refuge. Killing me is unethical. 51 to 56

Hearing the messenger and understanding the views of Devī Lalitā, Mantrinī smilingly spoke sweetly thus: "Oh Demon! Have no fear. Be happy. You will never be killed. Remember my words and convey them to Bhaṇḍāsura thus: "If you desire to live, leave away your empire and without fear come and surrender to Devī Lalitā. Let Indra rule the three worlds and you dwell in the nether region. Along with your children and army make friends with Indra. Otherwise you will not find relief and you will not live." 57 to 61

Instructed thus, Vārāhī after showing to the demon her army, released him at the outskirts of the army. Then considering himself as reborn, the demon with fear and confusion went to the king. 63, 64

Seeing the tortured Amitraghna, Vidyunmālī the great magician out of fear transformed himself into an owl and flying in the sky surveyed and counted the entire army of śaktis. While doing so he was caught by a śakti who was guarding the sky during night. Immediately he flew fifty yojanas upward and fought with her fiercely. After a long combat hit by her spear, he somehow escaped and in the early morning dropped himself almost dead in front of the lord of the demons. 65 to 69

Seeing the demon before him, who was heavily injured and about to die, Bhaṇḍāsura chanted mantras and touched his body by which he was restored to life and was free from agony. Then he rose and saluted the king of demons who was in front of him. Questioned by the king, Vidyunmālī reported the incidents thus: "Oh King! I went from your place along with Amitraghna and saw the army of the goddess which was like an ocean at the time of dissolution. Then Amitraghna first entered that army. 70 to 73

Then soon Amitraghna perturbed with fear arrived at the demon's assembly and fell at the feet of Bhaṇḍāsura. Consoled by the ministers and questioned he trembled and narrated the incident thus: "Oh King! Ordered by you I went to the great army of śaktis. As soon as I entered I was with great force caught by them. My strength and valour were useless before them just like light from a fire-fly during the day. Caught by them, I was immediately unconscious. 1 to 4

Please listen with patience.—“Inform the lord of the demons thus: ‘If you wish to live, give away the three worlds to Indra and surrender to the Devī. You can live in the nether region along with your relatives. Befriend Indra along with your children and ministers. If you fail to do this, you cannot be free in any world. I will bring you, the enemy of Indra, under my control.’—Return and pass on this message to Bhaṇḍāsura.” 12 to 16

"Born because of great sins, this body is the shelter for sins and with demonic nature it has become unbearable. Just like a person carrying a load runs away discarding it, I will abandon this body of mine which is the cause for misery and run to a place of peace. I have no grief in this matter. Though I have had happiness from this body for myriads of years, I am not interested in this. The same pleasures, women and contacts that were continuously enjoyed by me are disliked by me. I am distressed. I desire the destruction of this insipid body just like a man who is diseased for a long period. But my loved ones will grieve without me. In the same manner I will also be unhappy without them. Death brings sorrow before and after. The situation is painful. Devī Tripurā should show Her grace so that there will be no agony for me. I feel it would be good if She can kill all of us simultaneously. How She, who by nature grants more than the wants of a devotee, will not fulfil the desire of mine who is devoted to Her feet.”—Thinking thus and bowing to the Great Devī, Bhaṇḍāsura exhibited his extreme outward anger just like a performer in dance. 35 to 44

“Oh useless demon! Fie upon you. How are you shamelessly uttering displeasing praises about our enemy in front of me. Praising the opponent is resorted to by a coward. Even though the enemy is stronger, a brave person will not praise him. Whether the enemy is strong or weak, the bold soldiers will not be frightened”. Saying thus, the angry Bhaṇḍāsura vomiting the poison of anger from his eyes like a black cobra, set out from the main gate of the city as if out of a hole holding high his sword and shouting thus: “Let all those demons who are afraid of Her see my might. Facing me today in the war She will not survive any more.”

Then the people took him to be the personification of death determined to devastate the world. They said that the world caught in the fire of his anger cannot exist. The naturally angry Daṇḍīnī with swollen anger because of the war was looking as though she would quickly burn the worlds with the fire of anger. Then accompanied by innumerable śaktis, Daṇḍīnī overpowered by anger proceeded soon in her Kiri-cakra chariot. The sound from the wheels of the chariots and the army was breaking the hearts of the enemies as they heard it. The echo assumed frightening levels. Thus Śrī Daṇḍanāthā set out to triumph. 76 to 79

Hearing the tumultuous sound from the army of Bhaṇḍāsura, the young beloved daughter of Śrī Lalitāmbikā very much anxious to fight looked at the northern direction and saw the rising dust caused by the movement of the army of the demons as if it was the wind of dissolution. Realizing the arrival of Bhaṇḍāsura along with his army, the jubilant Bālā Tripurasundarī mounted the Laghu-cakra chariot and directed the charioteer.

Anticipating the obstruction from Devī Lalitā, Bālā Tripurasundarī proceeded with great speed towards the army of the demons, without taking leave of the Devī Lalitā, Mantriṇī and Daṇḍinī. Her chariot was speeding ahead like the autumnal clouds dragged by the wind. Observing the journey of Bālā as dangerous, Aśvārūḍhā followed her very quickly along with her army of horses as tall as the tides of an ocean that would quench the flame of trouble from the enemies.

Then Sampatkarī riding the elephant Raṇakōlāhala and accompanied by myriads of elephant forces, speeded behind Bālā to protect her. But inspired by Bālā to speed up, her charioteer an expert in that art and who resembled Bālā drove the chariot with great speed and entered the army of the demons like a river in spate that enters the ocean. Twanging her bow and raining arrows on the army of the demons she entered the army with her chariot cutting into it like a boat in an ocean which is being split by the force of a river.

The chief of the army of demons, the mighty Kuṭilākṣa riding an elephant and accompanied by a huge army opposed Bālā Tripurasundarī. The chief of the army seeing the soft eight-year-young Bālā who was sitting alone in the chariot and showering arrows, thought her to be of great prowess. He wondered who that young girl was who was battling single handed without fear with the demons who have tormented Indra and other gods. He took her to be Devī Lalitā by the features reported by the messengers. But he had a doubt because she was not grown up. "If she is the daughter of Lalitā, how could she come alone ready to fight without an army? It looks as though she will conquer all of us. I think no one can face her in war, be it Viśukra or Viṣaṅga or the king or myself. Then how can the princes either individually or jointly fight her?"

Wherever she sees our army, she is quickly dwindling it then and there by the bunch of her arrows. Myriads of demons of our army have been killed and our huge army is frightened. With their hands, legs, chest, arm-pits and heads cut-off some have fallen, some are dead and some others are running away with great fear. Being unable to cross the river of blood hundreds shivering with fear are drowned in the pool of blood. 22 to 25

This girl will in no time break into our army. She should be obstructed by me with effort. Fie upon me who is staying without action. This young girl is entering into our army in my very presence, an act which neither Indra nor Maruts nor the Wind could do in the past. Conquering her, looks impossible." Thinking thus, the powerful demon Kuṭilākṣa riding his huge elephant, faced her and fought with her by despatching a bunch of arrows. While fighting with Bālā, Kuṭilākṣa an expert in warfare and use of magical missiles and weapons showered arrows and covered her as if a rising Sun by snowfall. 26 to 30

Then, even Bālā Tripurasundarī who was red like a rising Sun, very quickly destroyed that shower by the sharp ray-like arrows and tormented the demons by sharp arrows. The quickness of her shooting the arrows could not be seen even by a skilled observer. It was like a continuous flood of water flowing from the mountain peak during rainy season. Within no time she destroyed the huge army and going near Kuṭilākṣa, injured him with sharp arrows. 31 to 35

The mighty Kuṭilākṣa also fought with all his energy. By rendering all his missiles and weapons futile by counter weapons and hitting him with sharp arrows, Bālā with one sharp arrow broke his bow and struck the face of his elephant by another arrow. Hit on the face, the mountainous elephant yelled and revolved and fell dead on the ground. Seeing the dead elephant, Kuṭilākṣa holding a mace angrily rushed towards Bālā, who was sitting in her chariot, to kill her just like the quick Rāhu chases to swallow the young red Sun. 36 to 40

The gods and the siddhas watched this from the sky. Observing Kuṭilākṣa who was holding his mace and speeding towards her, Bālā struck his heart with a deep-drawn arrow. Pierced by the arrow, Kuṭilākṣa heavily vomitted blood and dropped unconscious on the ground just like a mountain hit by the thunderbolt. 41, 42

Then Bālā smiling, addressed her charioteer thus: "Oh Friend! Quickly take our chariot near Bhaṇḍāsura. Daṇḍinī with a swine-symbol flag is coming behind me. I am longing to fight with Bhaṇḍāsura. I am sure, if Daṇḍanāthā reaches me, she will prevent me. Therefore take me in such a way that she will not catch up with me." 43 to 45

Thus instructed, the friendly charioteer said thus to Bālā: "The golden high-flying flag which is seen in the centre of the army must be of the chariot of Bhaṇḍāsura. It looks he is surrounded by great fierce demons with huge chariots. I am not finding a way to take the chariot there. Hence with your weapon create a path by which I can drive my chariot." 46 to 49

The chariots of some were broken; some lost their horses and elephants. Unable to bear the shower of arrows the demons ran helter-skelter. Some lost their arms, eyes, legs, stomach and head. Some were pulverised by the force of her weapons. There was a frightening ocean-like river of blood containing foaming hot currents and waves. The rays from the Sun were masked by the cloud of arrows and the fleeing demons could not see the directions. They thought that it was the great god of death who had appeared in the form of Bālā Tripurasundarī. The heads of the demons were dropping in bunches like the ripe palm-fruits by a strong wind. There was a loud cry of the distressed demons such as 'Oh father, Oh Son, Oh Friend, Oh Brother, I am doomed.' 52 to 57

Seeing Bālā forcing herself into his army and eager to fight with Bhaṇḍāsura, Viśukra the younger brother of Bhaṇḍāsura thought that the eight-year young girl with unlimited strength and valour would fight in an astonishing way and she cannot be conquered even by the strongest of the demons. But strong persons should fight in the war. There is no doubt that this girl will destroy all the demons. Later what will Devī Lalitā do in the war? We should fight with all our energy. God should protect us. 59 to 63

Deciding thus, the brilliant Viśukra riding his elephant, that hailed from the clan of Irāvata, which was white like the snow-covered mountain and which had four tusks, showered arrows as if from the dark rain-bearing clouds on the top of Kailāsa Mountain. He obstructed by a shower of arrows, Bālā who was speedily moving into the army of the demons and taking away their lives. Then he roared like a lion.

He by inviting his army which was fleeing, made them return to the war-field. He said thus: "Oh Demons! It is improper for the high born to run away from war. If you do so with fear, you will lose righteousness and wealth. Hence imbibe anger and prowess and get back from all over. Defeated by a woman in war, if you go to your houses, how will you answer your wives who will ask about your return? Death is better than the insult from a woman."

Hearing the friend, the pleased Bālā said thus: "Quickly drive the chariot to the great demon Viśukra who is with his army of elephants and who is being praised by the panegyrists." 1

Ordered thus, she drove the great chariot to that place. By a continuous shower of arrows of Bālā, the ocean-like huge army of the demons dwindled. Again Bālā, seeing powerful groups of demons surrounding her and trying to kill her, destroyed them using a thunderbolt. Some were reduced to ashes, some lost their limbs, some their eyes, feet and so on. 2 to 6

Hearing the distressed loud wailing of his destroyed army, Viśukra sent his elephant belonging to the Irāvata clan, to fight with Bālā who was displaying wonderful prowess and showered arrows on her just like a cloud on a gem peak. 7 to 8

Bālā also retaliated hitting each demon with an arrow. The showers of arrow from both sides caused darkness in the war field. 9

Then with a deep-drawn arrow having a curved bent tip Viśukra struck the hand of the charioteer of Bālā. Hit hard by the arrow she was slightly unconscious. Seeing this Bālā with angry red eyes struck with four sharp arrows the shouting demon on his forehead. Injured by this Viśukra became unconscious and again rose up immediately and showered sharp arrows on Bālā. 10 to 12

Seeing Bālā being taken away, the charioteer said thus: "Oh Bālā! Enough of your sport which may end up in danger. Kill the demon by your power before he goes far away." 21, 22

Hearing the words of the friend and considering it as apt at that time, Bālā hit the demon on his head with her strong fist. Hit by the thunderbolt-like fist he fell down unconscious on the ground with his head split and vomiting blood. 23, 24

Then Bālā climbed her chariot and urged her friend thus: "Oh Dear Friend! Drive this chariot quickly in front of the lord of demons who being served by white umbrellas is looking like a blue mountain surrounded by swans and streams and shining. Daṇḍanāthā is catching up with me along with her army. I am hearing the frightening roar of the lions. Definitely she will prevent me from fighting. Till that time I will battle with the strong Bhaṇḍāsura. I am anxious to fight. Take me there somehow." 25 to 29

Getting to know everything about Bālā, Viṣaṅga thought that she was unconquerable by gods and demons. Fighting with her, there is no scope of living to the lord of the demons. Defeated by her, all his long-standing fame will vanish. The situation will be same if Devī Lalitā defeats him. Hence I should strive to fight with all my might. Deciding thus, Viṣaṅga obstructed Bālā. 31 to 33

Seeing the demon approaching in his chariot, Bālā considering it as an obstruction to fight with Bhaṇḍāsura addressed her friend thus: "Oh Dear Friend! A great obstacle has appeared when I wanted to fight with Bhaṇḍāsura. Watch my skill. I will drive him away." Saying thus she despatched four sharp arrows at him. 34 to 36

By those arrows his tall horses, having the speed of the wind, were killed. With another arrow his flag was broken and his charioteer was hit by one more arrow. Then the enraged demon Viṣaṅga seeing his plan spoiled, riding a different horse and holding a fierce bolt rushed towards Bālā. 37, 38

Seeing the approaching Viṣaṅga like a wind-driven cloud, Bālā showered arrows on him like a rain on a mountain. When he continued rushing towards her without caring about the shower of arrows, Bālā with a deep-drawn arrow killed his horse. Viṣaṅga without a horse, holding high the strong bolt and roaring like a sea moved nearer frightening like the god of death. Bālā hit him with a feathered arrow in his chest. Severely injured he fell unconscious on the ground after revolving and vomiting blood just like a mountain with its wings chopped.

Seeing the astonishing act of Bālā, the gods and the demons were wonderstruck and exclaimed thus: "This demon Viṣaṅga who is as powerful as Viṣṇu had many times vanquished Indra and others in war. But he has been easily struck down by this young girl who will conquer everyone. Then what will Devī Lalitā do?"

As they were saying thus, the charioteer drove her chariot to Bhaṇḍāsura. Seeing the great demon Bālā said to the charioteer thus: "You have done the right thing which was my long-pending desire. By fighting with him I will satisfy my long-pending desire." Saying thus, Bālā showered arrows on Bhaṇḍāsura.

Then Bhaṇḍāsura seeing Bālā in front of him, was happy that his age-old desire was getting fulfilled. He thought thus: "Appropriate long-awaited time has arrived according to the words of Lakṣmī. I have seen the great goddess who fulfills the wants of Her devotees. This is indeed the time to discard my body. Killed by her, I will reach Her abode. This girl who is the daughter of the Empress Lalitā, has wonderful valour. Born out of Śrī Lalitā, she is like Her reflection. I have no doubt that Devī Lalitā also will appear to destroy me respecting the words of Lakṣmī. The words of Lakṣmī are unfailing. Let it be so. I will show my respects to this embodiment of the reflection of Devī Lalitā in a manner presently suitable by offering arrows." 49 to 54

Thinking thus, Bhaṇḍāsura picked up his strong bow and the arrow. He sent one arrow charged with water mantra to her feet and another one charged with flower mantra to her head. One arrow washed her feet with pure cold water and the other one showered flowers on her head.

Watching this wonder, the charioteer questioned Bālā thus: "Oh Young girl! I am seeing a wonder in the demon. Is it caused by him or is it happening because of your greatness? Though you are showering arrows in the war-field, how can he be worshipping you? Please clarify soon my doubt about this." 58 to 60

Inquired thus, Bālā said thus: "Oh Dear Friend! Listen to this great secret which was told long ago by Devī Lalitā. This demon, a great devotee of Devī Tripurā, was Maṇiśekhara, the messenger of Lakṣmī and became a demon from a curse. Killed by Devī Lalitā, he will reach Her abode. He has worshipped me with arrows because I am the daughter of Lalitā. Now watch my response." Saying thus, Bālā discharged an arrow which divided itself into five and touched the head of Bhaṇḍāsura. By this the great demon felt happy that the Devī has placed Her hands on his head and blessed him. 61 to 65

Also they discharged missiles of Yama, Varuṇa, Kubera, Nirṛuti, Indra, Rudra, Mohana, Pināka, Vaiṣṇava and Brahmā. The war between Bālā and Bhaṇḍasura was frightening.

The demons and śaktis who had come to help saw the wonderful war with great surprise. As the battle progressed, when Bhaṇḍasura was losing by the skill of Bālā, then Viṣaṅga, Viśukra and Kuṭilākṣa with their army surrounded Bālāmbikā and fought with her using weapons ejecting heavy fire. Bālā fought with them effortlessly.

Then by the valour of Daṇḍanāthā the army of Bhaṇḍāsura was shattered just like a mountain by Indra's thunderbolt. As the army of the demons was being pounded by her pounder Vārāhī saw to her surprise Bālā who was fighting again with great interest all alone with the great demons. 1 to 3

Then Vārāhī said to Bālā thus: "Oh Bālāmbikā! Enough of your brave war which is unparalleled. I have never seen anywhere such courage by which all alone you have vanquished mighty fierce demons in the war. Hearing about your lonely battle with the demons, the Great Devī your mother is worried. You should go and meet the Great Empress right now." 4 to 6

After reaching Devī Lalitā, Aśvārūḍhā handed over Bālā to Her and said thus: "Oh Mother! This girl has been brought back with compulsion from the war-field. She is extremely brave and has wonderful valour and prowess. When we went as ordered by You to bring her back from the war, she had entered the ocean-like army of the demons and had destroyed myriads of mighty demons. She had vanquished Viṣaṅga and Viśukra, the brothers of Bhaṇḍāsura, known for their fierce nature. Then she fought for a long time with Bhaṇḍāsura who had conquered all the worlds and rendered his magical skill useless. With great effort Vārāhi reached her and stopped the war." Saying thus, Aśvārūḍhā returned to the war. 10 to 15

Then the Great Empress Lalitā took Bālā soon on Her lap and embraced her and with love smelt her head and said thus: "My Child! Do not repeat any more such brave deeds. It was improper that you went to fight without informing Me." 16, 17

Then Bālā with red eyes and sighing frequently said to her mother Lalitā thus: "Oh Mother! From a long time I was excited about playing in the war. Fearing that You will prevent me, I did not inform You of my going to the war. Even before I was satisfied enjoying the war sport, Your Daṇḍanāthā pulled me out. Respecting Your fear about my war craze I returned. Otherwise I would have humbled her by fighting with her." 18 to 21

The Transcendental Great Devī embracing Bālā who was saying thus, consoled her and asked her not to talk like that. 22

Then Daṇḍanāthā seated in the Kiri-cakra fought with Bhaṇḍāsura who was accompanied by the army of demons. Both the śaktis and the demons encroached on each other and fought with rage. The demons were hitting the śaktis with weapons like pounders, tridents, iron clubs, iron arrows, javelins, swords, spears and axes. The śaktis also were killing the mighty demons in the fierce battle using varieties of weapons. 23 to 26

This way the demons were reduced to ashes by the fire of the weapons of śaktis. The remaining demons started running away with fear. Soon none could step into the battlefield which was filled with the frightening noise of the foamy rivers of blood. It was a feast for the departed spirits, foxes, eagles and jackals. 29, 30

Fighting with Viśukra, Sampatkari riding Ranakolāhala and followed by a huge army of elephants, showered arrows on him and using an anti-magical missile destroyed his frightening magic. Even Viśukra showered opposing arrows. As the war was continuing for a long period, Sampatkari broke his bow into two. He picked up another bow, which was also broken by her. Like this, his hundred bows were destroyed. Then the powerful Viśukra with great anger hit the shoulder of Sampatkari with a spear by which her huge bow dropped. Seeing this he roared. 37 to 42

Then the angry Sampatkari sent her elephant to fight. Her great elephant started fighting with the elephant of the demon. It looked as though two mountains were fighting. They fought severely for some time interlocking their trunks, dashing their temples, rubbing their sides, sieging with their tusks and making loud noises. Then the strong Ranakolāhala quickly sieged the elephant of the demon and putting it on the ground pierced its stomach with the tusk and lifted it up and angrily dropped it. By this the mountainous elephant yelled and revolved three times and fell dead. 43 to 47

Seeing his elephant fallen, the great Visukra jumped with a goad and angrily hit the elephant Ranakolāhala in between its temples by which its head was injured and it receded just about a distance of five bows. 48 to 50

Visukra jumping again with the goad on the elephant, fought with Sampatkari. Snatching her bow and breaking it into two, he angrily hit with one portion of the bow severely on her head 51, 52

Thus hit with force she was unconscious for a while and again the angry Sampatkari returned a strong punch with her diamond-like fist on Viśukra's head. 53, 54

With his head split by the blow of the fist, the bleeding and unconscious Viśukra dropped on the ground like a mountain with its wings chopped. Then as the angry elephant of Sampatkari was about to trample him, Bhaṇḍāsura's son who was fighting near by saw that and thinking that his uncle was getting killed took him away by magical power. Like this the great demon was defeated by Sampatkari. 55 to 57

Then Āśvārūḍhā fought with the mighty demon Viṣaṅga who on his horse was fighting using many types of missiles and weapons. Āśvārūḍhā riding her horse struck his chest with a mace by which Viṣaṅga became slightly unconscious but again quickly picking up weapons like flat sword, shield and śatacandra roamed in the army of the śaktis. By his weapons, the śaktis losing their heads, bodies and limbs were falling in bunches. 58 to 61

Āśvārūḍhā furiously bound him, who was thus destroying her army, by a rope and as she was about to kill him along with his horse by a mace, the great demon, a master of magic, realising his defeat magically disappeared along with his horse. Like this Viṣaṅga was vanquished by Āśvārūḍhā. 62, 63

When Viṣaṅga was thus driven away from war by Áśvārūḍhā, Daṇḍanāthā accompanied by her army fought with Bhaṇḍāsura. The swine-faced Daṇḍanāthā overpowered Bhaṇḍāsura by destroying his missiles and weapons using counteracting missiles and weapons. She excelled him in sword fight, mace fight, bow fight, axe fight and even in boxing.

When he was thus defeated in combat with weapons, Bhaṇḍāsura thought about it and being an exponent in magic resorted to magical war. He created darkness, whirlwind, lightning, deafening showers of stones, serpents, corpses and fire. He created hunting dogs, wolves, tigers, hyenas, demons, lions, śarabhas, Gaṇḍabheruṇḍas. Daṇḍinī by employing retaliating missiles destroyed his repeated magical creations.

Then tormented by the luminous weapons of Daṇḍanāthā, Bhaṇḍāsura hid himself in the sky and started fighting from his chariot. He showered boulders that made huge sound along with weapons and thunder which frightened the army of the śaktis.

Seeing the disturbance, Daṇḍanāthā with violent wrath jumped fast into the sky holding a weapon. Breaking into the shower of boulders she started searching the demon in the sky overcast with darkness. Then she illuminated the sky by her self effulgence and reached the demon by warding off his magic. With the mace she struck the huge demon, who was sitting in his chariot and causing showers of boulders, on his head by which he fell down unconscious on the ground like a mountain hit by a thunderbolt and like a river breaching its banks. Again with great fury Daṇḍanāthā with her mace destroyed his chariot, horses and the charioteer.

Meanwhile the great demon Bhaṇḍāsura regaining his consciousness jumped into the sky with his mace to fight with Daṇḍanāthā. A severe war started between Vārāhī (Daṇḍanāthā) and the demon king. There was the tumult of exchanging blows with mace and great sound of thunderbolts. After fighting like this for a while, Daṇḍanāthā thinking that the great demon was excessively powerful dragged him with her plough and raised her pounder held in her stout arm. Thinking that he will die hit by the pounder Bhaṇḍāsura recollected the words of Lakṣmī thus: "What was spoken by Lakṣmī earlier cannot become false. How can I die hit by the unfailing pounder? The Great Devī Tripurasundarī who fulfills the desires of Her devotees should kill me in the war and this is my desire from a long period".—As the demon was thinking thus an incorporeal voice said thus: "Oh Daṇḍanāthā! Bhaṇḍāsura is not at all to be killed by you in the war. Hence withdraw your unfailing pounder."

Then Bhaṇḍāsura, who was defeated by Daṇḍanāthā, disappeared. The army of the demons severely hit by the śaktis was driven away. Seeing the collapse of the demons the śaktis sounded many instruments declaring their victory.

Then a leader of the śaktis by name Jaya sent a group of śaktis to Devī Lalitā. Those śaktis who were dead or injured were quickly brought back to life and set right by Amṛteśī. Then gathering the happy army Daṇḍanāthā accompanied by Sampatkarī and Aśvārūḍhā quickly proceeded in her chariot with sounds from elephants and instruments declaring her triumph, to meet Devī Lalitā.

Then Daṇḍanāthā along with her battalion went to Mantriṇī Devī and informed her about the victory after bowing to her. The pleased Mantriṇī embraced Daṇḍanāthā and honoured her with presents. Then Mantriṇī along with Daṇḍanāthā went to the Great Empress Lalitā and reported about their victory which brought joy to the śaktis. 1, 2

Then Sammohinī and others, the wives of Bhaṇḍāsura jointly said thus: “Oh Lord! Why are you looking helpless today? How has the prediction of Nārada gone wrong?” 5

Hearing his wives, Bhaṇḍāsura knowing his auspicious desire and realising that his wives have correctly understood the words of Nārada said thus: “Oh Dear wives! Listen. Why should I be depressed after attaining my want? Whatever Nārada has told you is to my liking. Very soon killed by the Great Devī, I will reach Her abode. To keep this as a secret to the demons, I am looking sad.” 6 to 9

Then the wives again said thus: "Oh Lord! We will tell you our desire. If it is certain that you will be killed in the war by Her, we are also prepared to be killed by Her. If so take us, who are dear to you along with you. We have shown the way. Otherwise what will be our fate? Please tell us. Hearing his wives, Bhaṇḍāsura filled with ecstasy said thus: "Listen to my truthful words. I had thought about this long ago which will not change for the reason that I am going to say. By the grace of Devī Lakṣmī, I can remember my previous life. She had told me that Devī Tripurasundarī will take care of us and will fulfil all the wants of devotees taking shelter under Her, even if they are impossible. Hence our desire will be fulfilled. I desire to go to Her Abode along with all of you and there is no doubt about its happening." 12 to 16

"Even then I have another desire that I should go to Her Abode along with my children and others. This may also happen but I am worried. With Her grace somehow we will achieve our wants. It is impossible in this world to bear the separation from friends and relatives without whom even a second will look like myriad years. Hence I am praying that I should never be without my relatives. All of you should always pray for this. The Devī will fulfil the impossible wants of Her devotees. This matter should not be disclosed to others. I have thus become pure minded. Oh Queens! Leave aside grief. Good time has arrived." Saying this Bhaṇḍāsura entered the huge assembly by sun set.

Then His Brothers, Viśukra and others and the ministers, sons, servants and the members of the assembly who shone like stars arrived there and after bowing to the king occupied their respective seats. Viśukra seeing the depressed king lauded him and with folded palms bowed and said thus: "Oh Lord Bhaṇḍāsura! The deed by Devī of killing the demons to achieve Her end is unrighteous." Even Viśukra the most intelligent follower of Śukrācārya spoke against his self belief. During unfavourable period a belief is transgressed. The mind naturally follows the impending events.

Addressed thus, Bhaṇḍāsura spoke again in the assembly of demons thus: "Oh Viśukra! What can I say when the time is unfavourable. I, who am the lord of hundred and five universes had time and again defeated Viṣṇu and others and by just hearing whose name Indra will never sleep, have been vanquished in meaningless war by a group of women. You are questioning me who am almost dead, why I am depressed. Death is commendable than this type of defeat." 29 to 32

Hearing these words, Viśukra spoke thus: "Oh Lord of the demons! It does not befit you to utter helplessness. Who will not be compassionate towards a weak woman? It is a natural code of practice not to use weapons on women. Either you or me or your sons or even a low ranking demon ordered by you can very quickly destroy the entire army of the śaktis. I confirm this by touching your feet. You can be sporting with the divine damsels in your harem. I will go and conquer Her and again see your feet." Saying thus he looked at Kuṭilākṣa, the chief of the army, who was by his side. 33 to 37

Then Kuṭilākṣa bowed with folded hands to Viśukra and said thus: "Oh Heir apparent! Why are you talking like this when I am alive? You please relax with the king, Viṣaṅga and the sons of the king. I will set out with the army and its leaders and conquer Her. If not, I promise that I will never return." Saying thus and bowing to them he went out of the city accompanied by many akṣauhiṇī-strong army and leaders. 38 to 40

Then another mighty leader of the army named Durmada accompanied by ten Akṣauhiṇī army and riding a camel and holding a mace joined Kuṭilākṣa. Sitting as if on the pinnacle of arrogance, he bowed to Kuṭilākṣa and said thus: "Oh Chief of the army! Please stay here along with your army. It is improper that you should proceed to win a weak woman. Within no time I will bind and bring that leader of the women. If I do not bring Her soon, then you can proceed and try." Saying thus Durmada set out with great speed sounding again and again musical instruments heralding triumph and reached early in the morning the front line of the army of the śaktis.

Hearing the tumultous sound of the army of the demons preparing to fight, Sampatkarī and Aśvārūdhā went to Devī Lalitā, Mantrinī and Daṇḍinī and after bowing to them, informed about the readiness of the demons to fight. Pleased with the permission granted, both of them followed by countless śaktis proceeded to battle.

There Devī Sampatkārī was riding the mammoth Raṇakōlāhala which was tall like the Himālaya mountain. With a golden hue she was dressed in a red garment and decorated with rubies. She was an ocean of beauty with waves of youthfulness. She was twanging her bow set with gems shining like a rainbow. To parch the ocean of demons, she set out, like the Sun from the eastern mountain, shooting arrows like the rays of the Sun. Innumerable śaktis similar to her moved with her on elephants shooting arrows all around, each of them wielding three goads and shouting and moving on elephants. One of them seated on an elephant was directing the army towards the enemy. Many were face to face with the enemy. With such a huge army Sampatkārī entered pervading the war field as if she would devour the army of the demons. 49 to 55

The mountainous elephants, with naturally split temples, and which never move away from war approached the army of the demons. Then in both the armies were heard sounds of instruments and of the colliding weapons snatching as it were the lives. 56, 57

The demons were riding on chariots, elephants, horses, donkeys, camels, deers, eagles, crows, vultures, owls, beautiful peacocks, cats, mongooses, lizards and ghosts. The demons were wielding fierce spears, swords, discs, javelins, iron clubs, tridents, bolts, missiles and cudgels. With these demons fought the army of the śaktis with intense fervour and with eyes red with rage. Both the armies were exchanging bitter words. The śaktis were uttering many words like "You are done. Stand with valour. Do not show your back" and killing many demons. Even the demons were similarly destroying the śaktis. 58 to 62

While the battle in which the lives were pledged was continuing the śaktis were chopping off the hands, the legs, the heads and cutting into two the bodies of the demons. Similarly the śaktis were also killed by the weapons of the demons. Even though crippled they were biting their lips with anger and hitting the enemies with weapons, teeth and fists. Those who lost their weapons were snatching them from others. Some others were fighting using the wheels of the broken chariots.

Durmada holding a mace and seated on a camel, seeing his entire army destroyed, sent a strong speeding golden hued camel, as tall as ten palmyra trees looking like the god of death into the army of the śaktis. This camel entered the army of the śaktis with great speed. Its tongue was dangling out of its jaws like a mass of flesh. It was making a big sound like the churning of an ocean. It was spitting frothy saliva and urinating frequently. Moving around among the śaktis it was destroying by its chest, feet, face and teeth the herd of elephants.

Then the great elephant approaching the camel, the carrier of the demon, repeatedly struck it with its temples and the tip of its tusk. The camel also fought back with its teeth, head and hoofs. Thus a tumultuous fight went on between the camel and the elephant. Then the elephant caught hold of the camel and pushed it to the ground and killed it by trampling on it. 76 to 78

Seeing the vast sky-like army of the demons approaching again, Aśvārūḍhā with her huge army of horses set out to fight. Many kinds of tall horses were looking like waves. With horses of the same colour grouped together the army was shining. Golden-hued śaktis were mounted on frothy white horses and dressed in blue garments. They were proud of their youthfulness and wielding swords and shields. Some with moon-like hue were riding horses black like clouds of dissolution and dressed in red garments and ornaments. They were shining with sapphire-decked crowns and wielding bows and arrows. Some others red complexioned moving speedily on green coloured horses were dressed and decorated with pink garments and jewels. A few others were wearing the same coloured garments and ornaments as the horses. Thus the army of the śaktis proceeded, looking like the variegated twilight horizon and a sea overflowing its shore and quickly captured the army of the demons. 2 to 8

The sound generated by kettle-drums, trumpets, cow-horns, war-drums, hoofs of the horses, and cymbals mixed with the loud shouts like 'Hum' and patting filled the interspace between the earth and the sky.

Then started a frightening war demanding lives. The directions were deafened by the sounds from the sword fight. The dust rising from the pounding of the hoofs of the horses surrounded the sky like the clouds of destruction and for a moment it was looking miserable like the new-moon night.

The darkness from the dust subsided by the shower of blood arising out of hitting with weapons and the war continued. The śaktis and the demons were killing one another. The strong śaktis stole the show by rendering the demons powerless. Battered by the śaktis, the army of the demons was getting destroyed. The great demons having lost their legs, hands, ears, stomachs and backs threw the weapons all around and ran away from the war shouting—'Alas! We are dead!'

Seeing his army destroyed, the enraged Kuraṇḍa riding his horse and twanging his bow discharged arrows on the śaktis and destroyed them in thousands. The army of the śaktis looked like a broken bridge by the flood of arrows shot by Kurāṇḍa. Then Kurāṇḍa faced Āśvārūdhā.

Thus spoken by Kurāṇḍa, the angry Āśvārūdhā struck him with three sharp arrows. With one arrow she severed the head of his horse. With the second arrow she pushed his crown to the ground. With the third arrow she struck him fast in his chest. The great demon Kurāṇḍa having lost his horse and the crown and strongly hit in his chest fell unconscious like a tree with its root cut off.

24 to 26

Hearing this Āśvārūḍhā said again thus: "Oh Demon! Fie upon you who are still alive. Intentionally you are left with life just to talk to me. Look at this arrow which takes away the life and pride of the enemy." 28, 29

Hearing Āśvārūḍhā, the demon burning with anger broke her bow with a curve-tipped arrow. She in turn broke his bow with a sword. The demon broke her sword into two by his sword and again hit severely her horse by which it receded. 30 to 32

Meanwhile the angry Āśvārūḍhā bound him with the rope and pulled him and hit him on his head with the lustrous goad by which the demon died with split head. 33

Hearing about the death of Kuranda, Kuṭilakṣa the chief of the army seeing near the leaders Karanka and others said with red eyes thus: "Oh Karanka and others! Five of you go with your army and quickly bring that woman either bound or dead. All of you are having the magical power of Sarpiṇī by which you are indeed unconquerable by gods and demons." 34 to 37

Thus ordered Karaṅka and others bowed to their army chief and proceeded to fight, each followed by twenty-akṣauhiṇī army. These demons were looking fearsome— Karaṅka in the chariot of donkey, Kākamukha on the elephant, Vajraloma in the chariot of eagle, Vajradanta on the camel and Vajravaktra on the donkey. 38, 39

Then both armies mingling with each other hit one another. Frowning and biting their lips with anger they were cutting with the swords, piercing with long spears, splitting with bunch of arrows, crushing with bolts and destroying one another using massive weapons. The extremely enraged elephant and horse battalion of the śaktis destroyed very soon the army of the demons. 43 to 45

Seeing their army getting utterly defeated by the demons, Aśvārūdhā and Sampatkari fought with the demons. Karaṅka and other mighty demons watching their army being conquered by them, released the great magical power Sarpiṇī who was fearsome wearing serpents and making loud sounds and creating varieties of serpents to kill the śaktis in the war field. By the bunch of serpents produced from her face, eyes and so on she destroyed very quickly the śaktis. 46 to 50

Seeing the terrible destruction some śaktis ran quickly to report the situation to Daṇḍanāthā. Reaching her who was by the side of Devī Lalitā, they bowed also to mantriṇī and said thus: "Alas! The demons are fearsome. Oh Daṇḍanāthā! We went along with Sampatkari to fight with the demons. A great war demanding lives was fought. Durmada was killed by Sampatkari. Kuraṇḍaka was done away by Aśvārūdhā but for his fame. We destroyed the horrid army of the demons." Thus the demons were vanquished. 51 to 55

Hearing their words, the angry Daṇḍanāthā started to go and kill the demons by her fierce pounding rod. Knowing that the Sarpiṇī was invincible, Mantriṇī stopped Daṇḍanāthā and quickly apprised the matter to Devī Lalitā. Then the Great Mother meditated and yawned. From the jaws of Her opened lotus-like mouth came out with great speed a golden hued great śakti who was in the form of a Mongoose, the goddess of speech decorated with diamond jewels and seated on Garuḍa. 59 to 62

Then Nakulā destroying all their weapons and vehicles cut off their heads by one stroke of her sword. With their heads chopped they fell dead. The remaining demons in fear ran helter-skelter. 70 to 73

Then knowing from the demons about the death of Karaṅka and other leaders, Kuṭilākṣa sighed and worried immensely thus—"It looks to me that the great śakti is really invincible. The mighty Durmada and Kuraṇḍa are dead in the war. Let it be so, I should not worry about it because victory cannot be one sided. But how was it that Karaṅka and others who were indomitable and who were supported by the unfailing Sarpiṇī were done away in the war? The leader of the śaktis known as Lalitā sitting in Her place has by Her assistants destroyed our strength. Alas! What will not happen if the fate is unfavourable? It is astonishing that Karaṅka and others were killed by a woman. Our army has been reduced to one fourth. Our strong leaders are dead. But how is it that not even one leader of the śaktis is dead? Having promised the king that I will defeat the śakti, how can I, like a coward inform him about my inability?" While Kuṭilākṣa, the chief of the army, was thus brooding Viṣaṅga incited by Viśukra reached there. 1 to 8

Seeing Viṣaṅga, Kuṭilākṣa the chief of the army stood up and after serving him with a seat and so on, took his own seat. Seeing the sad

Kuṭilākṣa, Viṣaṅga told him about the intention of the Devī to fulfil the request of Bhaṇḍāsura and that Bhaṇḍāsura is deluded by Her generosity.

Hearing Viṣaṅga, Kuṭilākṣa narrated the huge destruction of the demons and the safe condition of the śaktis and the impending danger.

Hearing Kuṭilākṣa, Viṣaṅga laughed saying “This is all delusion” and himself deluded by the illusion of the Devī, spoke as if he was wise, thus: “Oh Chief of the army! Listen. I have come here knowing the matter. We cannot defeat a strong side without skilled planning. Victory is dependent on skill which in turn depends on intelligence. With my sharp intelligence I have decided about a plan to defeat the śakti. Abandon the darkness of your sorrow by depending on the Sun of my words. I believe that the śaktis will die with my plan.

“Listen. I will tell you about my plan of winning. She can be won only through fraudulence. I will tell you what I have decided. Let our well-armoured huge army along with Viśukra and the sons of the king proceed in advance to fight at the end of today itself. All the śaktis will come to fight with us and Lalitā will be alone. Then during the night, accompanied by many demons, I will get on to the back of Her chariot from a side and destroy a few of Her bodyguards and forcibly capture alive the weak and wicked Lalitā who is the mother of the group of śaktis. If She cannot be caught alive, I will hit Her hard with the mace and kill Her. Whether She is captured or killed, it amounts to the destruction of Her army which can be annihilated by you. I have known with my sharp brain for a long time that the tender-limbed Empress Lalitā will be unable to fight with me. Oh Friend! I hope you have no contrary thoughts about my plan.”

Hearing the words of Viṣaṅga, Kuṭilākṣa the chief of the army deluded by the illusion of Devī Tripurasundarī foolishly believed in the defeat of the Devī. With ecstasy he stood up and quickly embraced Viṣaṅga and said thus: “Oh Laudable among the clan of demons! Well done. I know you are most intelligent. It is really rare to find a person who brings victory by his intelligence. Even Śukrācārya and Bṛhaspati are not as intelligent as you are. You are going to achieve the task of the king. May you live long. Quickly go and inform the king and return along with the ministers, the sons of the king and Viśukra, to fight. The Sun is already in the process of setting in the western sea. While we will be fighting with the army of the śaktis you will by your strength and intelligence achieve your plan.” 27 to 32

After Kuṭilākṣa uttered these words, Viṣaṅga entered the city and apprised about his plan to the king and Viśukra as well and having the consent of those leaders who were under the spell of illusion, returned soon to the war field where the huge army of the śaktis had gathered. He was joined by the sons of the king, Viśukra, the ministers and Kuṭilākṣa. 33 to 35

Knowing from a messenger about the secret preparations of the demons and the congregation of their entire army, Mantriṇī informed the developments to Devī Lalitā. 36, 37

Ordered by Devī Lalitā, Mantriṇī said thus to Daṇḍinī—“Oh Child! The preparation by Bhaṇḍāsura appears to be huge. Except the leader of the demons, all have joined to fight. We should also go there with our entire army. Prepare the army of the śaktis in an extraordinary way.” 38, 39

Instructed thus, Daṇḍanāthā (Kolamukhī) bowed to Devī Lalitā and set out for war along with Mantriṇī and the entire army of śaktis. Replete with elephants, horses and chariots, the army of the śaktis as it proceeded looked like an ocean that submerges the worlds during destruction. The sound from the musical instruments, elephants, horses and chariots mixed with the roaring of the lions was verily increasing. 40 to 42

Hearing that world-annihilating huge sound, the demons generated a reciprocal big sound. The mixed sound from the armies pervaded heaven and earth and killed the cowards and dried up lakes. 43, 44

Then a severe war started between the armies of the śaktis and the demons. The demons by using wonderful weapons were destroying the śaktis. Similarly the śaktis with the weapons were smashing the demons. Some were getting pulverized by arrows, some were cut in their middle by swords, some were pierced by spears, some lost their neck, stomach and arms by discs, some were pounded by bolts, spiked clubs and so on, some were quickly bound by unfailing ropes, some heads were split by axes and some were struck in their chest by javelins and goads.

A well matched war between them went on for some time. Then destroyed by the śaktis, the demons ran away wailing thus—"We are ruined. Alas! we are really ruined." Chased by the śaktis, the demons were desiring to surrender. 51, 52

Seeing the demons running away, Viśukra the brother of Bhaṇḍāsura addressed Balāhaka and others who were by his side. Knowing about their immeasurable strength he invited their attention and said thus: "Oh Balāhaka! Look at these demons who have all been killed by the śaktis and suffering like orphans. You proceed with your brothers and destroy the enemies. Because of your penance, Sun has really given his power in your eyes. You go and burn them by your glances at them." 54 to 57

Ordered thus, he proceeded along with his brothers to torture the śaktis. Balāhaka, Kālamukha, Vikarṇa, Vikatānana, Sūcīmukha, Karālākṣa, and Karaṭa, the seven brothers possessing extremely cruel power had obtained by propitiating the Sun god the boon to burn and kill a person by their glances. These seven brothers with such a power simultaneously entered the army and started destroying the śaktis by casting their cruel glances on them. 58 to 61

अथ ताः शक्तयः सर्वा दैत्यानामवलोकनात् ॥ ६२ ॥

The entire army of the śaktis in the battle field excepting Mantriṇī and Daṇḍinī was thus overpowered by extreme thirst and heat and their elephants and horses were collapsing due to heat. Observing that, the power in the eyes of the demons was not affecting Mantriṇī and Daṇḍinī because of their glory, Daṇḍinī reported to Mantriṇī about this.

Mantriṇī also realised after applying her mind that the power of the demons was because of the blessing from the Sun. Mantriṇī thought about the śakti named Tiraskariṇī who had not come to fight in the great war to protect the Śrīcakra of Devī Lalitā.

Just by that remembrance Tiraskariṇī appeared riding on a collyrium-coloured horse. With a dark blue complexion dressed and decorated with a blue garment and jewels, wearing a blue garland and enveloped by pitch darkness, she was accompanied by crores of similar śaktis. No one on the earth can see her but for her consent. After arriving she bowed to Mantriṇī and said thus: "Why was I remembered"? Mantriṇī who was questioned thus told her about the strength of the demons and sent her to destroy them. Again for the pacification of the śaktis, Mantriṇī ordered Amṛteśī who was like an ocean of nectar to follow Tiraskariṇī. 68 to 71

Ordered thus, Tiraskariṇī riding an invisible horse and herself invisible and followed by a similar group of śaktis destroyed the army of the demons by showering weapons on them. Then she created a missile named 'Andhaka' by which the demons became blind and were unable to see anything. Then Tiraskariṇī by fighting for a long period with them, who were filled with prowess and continuing their fight, simultaneously beheaded them with rage by a sword. 72 to 75

With the destruction of Balāhaka and others, the gods amidst sound of kettle-drums showered heavenly flowers on Tiraskariṇikā and rejoiced at the elimination of the tormentors of the world. Then Amṛteśī revived the dead śaktis by a shower of nectar. Conquering thus the demons with eyes like the Sun, Tiraskariṇī bowed to Mantriṇī and Daṇḍiṇī and announced her victory. Mantriṇī and Daṇḍiṇī embraced her and lauded her by saying thus: "What you have done is an altogether impossible task". While Balāhaka and others were thus killed, the Sun started setting. 76 to 80

Even though the demons with solar power in their eyes were killed by Tiraskariṇī, Viśukra, Kuṭilākṣa and others deluded by the illusion of Devī Tripurā were happy imagining victory and fought with great strength the śaktis by sending Viṣaṅga and his troop to catch the śaktis from behind. Viśukra faced Mantriṇī, the chief of the army faced Daṇḍinī, the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura faced Bālā, the ministers faced Tiraskariṇī and Ulūkajit and others fought with Sampatkari and Aśvārūḍhā. The demons thus jointly fought with the śaktis. 1 to 4

At Sunset, when darkness was enveloping all over, a severe fight went on for some time in the twilight between the śaktis and the demons. Then as the darkness grew dense covering the directions the severe fight between them continued, illumined by the stars. They fought mutually employing many weapons and making sounds. 5 to 8

By the intense collision between the two armies arose dust which covered the sky lit with stars. Then seized by the darkness the śaktis and the demons blinded by rage fought in confusion. Some were shouting insults, some were chasing the enemies, some were hurling weapons which were being destroyed by others. A severe war guided by sound alone continued where the demons were killing demons and śaktis were killing śaktis. Thus an intolerably cruel war filled with frightening wailing went on. Some were killed by weapons, some were ground by chariots, some others were struck by horses and some crushed by elephants. In such an extremely attacking war one could neither recognise each others army nor the beginning, middle and the end of the army. 9 to 15

Seeing the irregular war Mantriṇī remembered goddess Jvālāmukhī who was born out of the aspect of Devī Tripurasundarī. Just by that remembrance Jvālāmukhī appeared in the battle ground. She was like a burning mountain pervading the directions with flames. Illumined by her body, the entire darkness vanished. Then the śaktis and the demons fought properly. 16 to 18

Riding chariots they covered Bālā by shooting special arrows in all directions just like the mist covering the Sun. 21

Then Bālā also with the power of her weapons quickly destroyed the heap of weapons of the demons just like darkness by Sunrise. Then by using four sharp arrows killed individually their horses. With one arrow each the charioteer was killed. With another arrow their bows were broken. With one more arrow she effortlessly pierced their chests. Having lost their horses, weapons and hurt in the chest by the arrow they fell unconscious as if dead. 22 to 25

Ulūkajit and others, the sons of the sister of Bhaṇḍāsura, sixty of them were experts in war and possessed fearsome prowess. With these demons fought Aśvārūdhā and Sampatkarī showing extremely astonishing talent. Each of them fought with thirty demons separately. Aśvārūdhā after fighting for a long period bound them by a rope and cut off their heads individually with a sharp sword. Similarly Sampatkarī piercing the demons in their chest by spears despatched them quickly to the abode of Yama, the god of death. 26 to 29

Then Ugrakarma and other ministers fought with Devī Tiraskaraṇikā using many weapons and missiles. Fighting with the ministers, the angry Tiraskaraṇikā with a sword quickly separated their heads from their body. 30, 31

Then Daṇḍanāthā seated in her chariot fought with Kuṭilākṣa. Both showered against each other wonderful arrows and their weapons got mutually destroyed. Kuṭilākṣa, the chief of the army of Bhaṇḍāsura, who was well trained fought Daṇḍanāthā with force and anger. 32 to 34

Fighting with him, Daṇḍanāthā killed the eight horses of his chariot by releasing deep-drawn arrows from the bow. With one arrow she killed his charioteer and hit him in his chest with another by which he became unconscious for a while. Again gaining consciousness he jumped up with his mace and with all his strength struck that thunderbolt-like iron mace on the head of the lion which was tied to the Kiricakra chariot and roared like a lion after killing an elephant. 35 to 38

Hit by the mace, the lion became unconscious for a short time and gaining consciousness again stared with anger at the demon who was standing there and mauled him on his chest with its paw. By this, his chest was torn and he bled heavily. Again the demon jumped on to the chariot of Daṇḍanāthā and fought with anger with her bodyguards.

Then Jambhinī, the chief guard of Daṇḍanāthā opposed the great demon who was fighting in the Kiricakra chariot. After a long-drawn fight, the powerful Jambhinī struck Kuṭilākṣa, who was intensely fighting, with an arrow, by which he was paralysed with pain for a moment. Again he flew with his mace and strongly hit Jambhinī on her head by which she sat down near the chariot. Seeing her condition the śaktis wailed as alas.

At that time the demon snatched her bow quickly and broke it. After standing up, Jambhinī seeing her bow broken picked up her huge mace and was burning with rage. Then a fierce fight with mace started as if Indra and Tvṣṭra were fighting. The gods and demons who were witnessing were wonderstruck. Realising that the chariot was small, they fought on the ground.

The long drawn mace fight with the sound produced by hitting each other made the cowards shudder. A shower of fire was generated by the colliding maces. With acts like overpowering, jumping and so on the mace fight looked beautiful.

Then as he was jumping with great speed to hit her, she struck him powerfully with the mace on his head. With a flood of blood oozing out of his swollen eyes, tongue and face he fell on the ground with all his joints loosened and embracing his mace and rolling on the ground he quickly died. 51, 52

Seeing the chief of the army dead, the demons ran away. The gods and śaktis rejoiced over the destruction of the enemy. After killing Kutilākṣa, Jambhinī bowed to Daṇḍanāthā and stood by her side. The happy Daṇḍanāthā embraced her and looked at her lovingly. 53 to 55

The powerful Mantrinī vehemently fought with Viśukra. The strong Viśukra, the heir apparent, battled in an astonishing way with Mantrinī. They destroyed each other's weapons and missiles. Observing the long-drawn awe-inspiring battle by the powerful demon, Mantrinī exhibiting her skill simultaneously destroyed very quickly his chariot, horses, charioteer, bow, crown and the flag by a bunch of arrows. 56 to 59

Then Mantriṇī with an arrow broke into two the sword of Viśukra who was approaching her and destroyed his shield by another arrow. Then Viśukra was approaching with folded fist. Mantriṇī hit him in his chest by a huge sharp spear by which the hero was thrown two krośās away just like a mountain by the annihilating wind and revolving and vomiting frothy blood fell deeply unconscious. (One Krośa is 1/4 of an yojana. Approximately 1 Kilometer). 61 to 64

When Viśukra was thus struck, the army of the demons ran in ten directions dropping the weapons and abandoning the vehicles. The demons carried the unconscious Viśukra to the city. 65, 66

While Viśukra and others were fighting with the entire army of the śaktis, Viṣaṅga happily thought that Devī Lalitā will be alone in Her Śrīcakra chariot along with a few close bodyguards and could be conquered. Hence he set out accompanied by Damana and others, the leaders of a fifteen-akṣauhiṇī army, with a small army and many weapons. Watching the sound from the foot steps of the elephants, Viṣaṅga proceeded on an inebriated elephant along with others riding elephants. All were dressed and embellished in blue and each on an elephant assembled and followed the army of the demons about two yojanas behind. 67 to 71

Then all of them joined together about a krośa distance behind the Śrīcakra chariot and within no time Viṣaṅga and other demons reached the back of the chariot. 74

Devī Lalitā, the embodiment of consciousness, knowing the intention of the demons informed the śaktis about that and remained sporting in Her chariot as if unaware of the situation. Hearing the war message, the śaktis without fear slept in the Śrīcakra chariot in their respective places. 75, 76

Thousands of śaktis with raised swords were already secretly going around the chariot. Some śaktis seeing the group of demons on the elephants surrounding the chariot, called out loudly inviting the śaktis and the śaktis entered the army of the demons and attacked them with swords and rebukes. Then a fierce war started between the śaktis and the demons.

Then Ānimā and other śaktis in the enclosure of Śrīcakra hearing the call from the external śaktis, realising the attack by the demons, riding their respective vehicles and equipped with weapons and missiles vigourously battled with the army of the demons. 1, 2

Then the śaktis in the Śrīcakra one by one heard the call and Kāmeśvarī and other Nityās reported the matter to Devī Lalitā. Ordered by Her they set out with rage to fight the demons. Considering that it was difficult to fight in darkness, Jvālāmālīnī the fourteenth Nityā whose mountainous body was enveloped by flame, exuded flames as ordered by Kāmeśvarī. That flame illuminated a yojana (3 miles) all around and the śaktis fought with the demons. 3 to 6

The śaktis with many weapons killed the demons who had come to fight and quickly despatched them to the city of Yama. Then the remaining demons who were trying to run away were surrounded by the śaktis and could not find an exit and hit by the saktis they wailed loudly. 7, 8

Seeing the destruction of the demons, Damana and other powerful demons shot many arrows and strongly obstructed the śaktis and with massive weapons started killing the śaktis in large numbers. The śaktis who were heavily hit by the demons showered arrows just like the rain on the mountain peak by rain-bearing clouds. While the śaktis fought with Damana and others for a short time, the powerful Damana by pouring weapons and missiles made the śaktis miserable. The śaktis losing their arms, weapons, limbs and lives were unable to withstand the killing downpour of the weapons by the demons. Some śaktis fell unconscious, some died, some others were cut to pieces and some were slit to death.

Seeing the collapse of the śaktis, the most powerful Kāmeśvarī and other deities of the lunar phase got angry and riding the chariots fought with the fifteen demons Damana and others. Equipped with many weapons and filled with strength and valour they destroyed the weapons and missiles of the demons by counter-weapons and missiles and with great skill, shot arrows at the delicate organs of the demons.

Thus struck by the śaktis, the demons got extremely furious and fought in an astonishing manner filled with might and violence by shooting arrows that emitted sparks of fire resembling submarine fire which would burn the worlds and glowed in the war field. 18, 19

Then the Nityā deities fighting with the wonderfully powerful demons, destroyed one by one their horses, chariots, charioteers and flags and breaking their bows with sharp spears and with great strength severed their heads. When Damana and other demons were killed the remaining demons with fear ran away in ten directions. 20 to 22

Then the valiant Viṣaṅga seated on an elephant, angrily fought alone with the many Nityā śaktis. Kāmeśvarī and other Nityās surrounded him who was bravely fighting and hit him with showers of arrows.

Then Kāmeśvarī said to Viṣaṅga, who was engaged in fighting, thus "Oh Vile demon! Stop fighting which will put an end to your life. Abandon your weapons and safely walk back quickly. It looks improper that you are battling alone with many." 25 to 26

Hearing Kāmeśvarī, Viṣaṅga laughed loudly and said thus. "Oh Wicked Woman! What are you talking in vain without shame standing at a distance. All alone I will soon destroy the entire army of the śaktis and surely carry alive Devī Lalitā by binding Her. First I will destroy your weapon. The delay in doing so has been due to my compassion towards women." Saying thus he struck them individually with sharp spears. Hearing him Kāmeśvarī said "If that is so, let there be war with each of us individually and immediately with me". 27 to 30

Saying thus to the demon, Kāmeśvarī spoke again thus: "Oh Bhagamālīnī and others! Listen. I will fight with him and you carefully guard him from escaping." Saying thus she hit him with an arrow and addressed him thus: "Oh Foolish Demon! Without any compassion towards me fight with all your might. Let me see your prowess. If you are a man, you will not run away. I will never torture you who are injured, but allow you to escape. So shedding your shyness fight like a man." Saying thus she hit him with sharp spears. 31 to 36

Then as Viṣaṅga picking up a frightening huge sword was approaching Kāmeśvarī, she cut that large sword by a sharp arrow into three pieces and with a smile said to him thus: "Oh Demon! Are you not very powerful? Why are you fighting like this? Why are your weapons not falling on my body? Are you extremely compassionate towards me? Why have you lost your weapons? How will you conquer us and carry Devī Lalitā by binding Her? Your weapons are futile to achieve victory. Hence run away from my presence if you are a man." 41 to 44

Hearing the bitter derisive words of Kāmeśvarī, Viṣaṅga raising his fist went near to kill her. Then again with three arrows she forcefully struck him in his foot, chest and fist by which he was unable to move, see and release his fist and ashamed he quickly disappeared. Before that Kāmeśvarī obstructed his passage by creating a net of arrows all around which was astonishing. 45 to 48

Prevented all around thus, the demon spread his magical power. He created varieties of fearsome showers of weapons, boulders, blood, serpents, dust, burning charcoal, mountains, great devils, demons and ghosts. Kāmesvarī with her weapons destroyed that magic as they were being created. 49 to 51

Then Kāmesvarī quickly bound the demon who was still hiding by a consecrated rope and pushed him on the ground in front of her. The demon who was bound and dropped at her feet bent his head with shame and closed his eyes as if dead. Kāmesvarī ordered the śaktis to carry the bound Visanga to the Sricakra chariot and she also accompanied by the Nityās moved near the feet of Devī Laṭā. 55 to 57

Seeing Visanga who was bound and brought there, the śaktis charged with great anger said thus. "Let him be killed, injured, cut to pieces and split". Hearing them, Dandanāthā thought about killing him. Then as desired by Srimatā, Mantrini said thus. "Killing a bound person is improper because he is considered as if dead. Let him go and narrate his plight to Bhaṇḍāsura". Saying thus Mantrini ordered his release and said to him thus: "Oh Demon! Do not again practice such deceit which will be despised by valiants." Hearing Mantrini, the ashamed Visanga bent his head and quickly marched away without again looking back.

Deliberating on this, Daṇḍanāthā said to Mantriṇī thus: "Oh Devī! A great dreadful war was fought with the demons. Only a small portion of the night is remaining. Again a most ferocious war might happen after Sunrise. The demons fight fraudulently. Hence we must go with our entire army. However the Śrīcakra chariot has to remain alone here. There is no danger to the glory of the Great Devī Lalitā. Even then I feel it as improper. Giving a serious thought to my words, please organise what has to be done about this." 67 to 71

Hearing Daṇḍinī, Mantriṇī after analysing clearly, agreed with her and bowing to Devī Lalitā said thus: "Oh Mother! Please hear me. Daṇḍinī says that after sunrise we have to again go to war taking the entire army. Then without guards this chariot alone will shelter You. This looks improper. The śaktis after fighting, want rest during night. But disturbed by the deception of the demons they would never have rest. If you agree with me, just grant me permission. I will find a plan by which the enemies cannot attack us." 72 to 77

Thus requested by Mantriṇī, Devī Lalitā directed her to go ahead.

Then Mantriṇī ordered the fourteenth Nityā by name Jvālāmālīnī to create a fort that would prevent the enemies. Taking the order, she created a fort of fire which encircled the army of the śaktis. This tall formidable fort of fire was extending its flames one yojana outwards but it was cool within to the śaktis. Seeing this fort the śaktis who were tired fighting forgot fear and slept comfortably. Mantriṇī ordered one thousand śaktis to protect the Śrīcakra. Devī Lalitā was thus situated in the centre of the fort of fire.

The released Viṣaṅga reached the army of the demons. Extremely grieved, helpless, depressed and dull, he sat alone sighing in some lonely place. Hearing about the death of Kuṭilākṣa, the chief of the army and the ministers, he was drowned in an ocean of sorrow. 1, 2

At that time Viśukra along with the sons of the king reached there and seeing his brother Viṣaṅga sitting with a sad face, questioned him thus: "Oh Dear! Why your face is sullied today? Tell me everything that happened in the unjust war." 3, 4

Hearing the words of his brother, Viṣaṅga sighed and said thus: "Oh Brother! What can I tell you? I had never faced this type of plight. I assume that the time has come for the destruction of the demons. It is really surprising that the demons who could fight with Viṣṇu have been vanquished by a group of women just like a lion defeated by jackals. It is improper for me to live under this bad condition. What should I do? I was not killed in the war. Those Kūṭilaksa and other demons who died are fortunate because they did not suffer defeat and lived. By clearing their debt towards their king they have attained place in heaven and fame in this world. Fie upon a demon like me who is neither living nor dead.

“Oh Brother! What is the gain in talking much? I will tell you the gist. Listen. A bad period has befallen the demons. Hence defeated by the women I will not like to live.

At the beginning of the night, I went along with my army and tried to win Her by attacking Her chariot sidewise. While we were trying to capture Her by climbing the chariot, the army of saktis who were guarding it by going around it opposed us with deadly swords. Even as we were abusing them, they fought vehemently though stumbling in that darkness of poor visibility.

“The astonishingly powerful and prominent śakti Kāmeśvarī among them started fighting with me and in half-a-minute bound me. None of my strengths and magical powers was effective against her. Tied and dragged, I was pushed at the feet of Devī Lalitā. Then I was released by Her compassionate minister Mantriṇī whose complexion was dark green, whose body was the essence of beauty and whose voice was melodious. Hence there is no point in my living after losing my fame and vigour.”

Hearing that talk, Viśukra smilingly said thus: “Oh Dear! Your thinking power has been destroyed by Lalitāmbikā in respect of achieving the wants of Bhaṇḍāsura. You are unaware of the ways of winning the war. Sometimes even the extremely powerful are defeated by ordinary persons which is neither surprising nor acceptable to the brave one. A person walking on the ground sometimes stumbles even during the day. The immovable ones will never stumble. Nothing can be concluded by this. It is difficult to predict victory or defeat in war. Only the final result can determine victory. Victory in between cannot be considered as victory. Alas! What can I tell you about the impact of delusion on you? I can only say that brave and properly deliberated thoughts will bring success. Keep away from negative thoughts that spoil progress. Listen to my plan which will end your sorrow.”

I have learnt it from Śukrācārya and I will now construct it as stipulated. By discharging it the army of the śaktis will be ruined. I will inscribe it on a stone and give it to you. You should cleverly install it in the army of the śaktis and quickly return. By this the endeavours of the śaktis will go in vain and they will lose their strength. Then we can march with our army and easily destroy the śaktis. Have no doubt about this plan. Rise and discard your worry born out of sorrow that kills your valour.”

Then Viśukra informed his plan to Bhaṇḍāsura and obtained his permission. Then he inscribed the Vighnayantra on a stone slab after purifying himself. He worshipped in that diagram the demonic goddess who generates obstacles by offering wine, flesh and many other articles. He smeared the ash from the grave yard on his naked body and drank the wine from a skull adopting perverted practices. Facing south he chanted the mantras by wearing a garland of goblin's bones, and surrounded by a group of naked women. Thus accomplishing the missile, he gave it to Viṣaṅga and said thus: "Oh Dear! Implant this in the middle of the army of śaktis with its front facing the great chariot of Devī Lalitā and return quickly."

Taking the unfailing Vighnayantra, Viṣaṅga reached the enemy camp at the end of the night and saw the invincible fort of flame and the śaktis at its door. Out of fear he stood far away and after thinking flew into the sky and being unable to cross that fort threw the yantra with great force inside and returned. Assuming that he had completed his task, he reported the matter to his elder brother.

Viśukra thinking that the śaktis would have been quickly destroyed by the unfailing Vighnayantra imbued with great power, came outside the city along with the entire army, his brother, the sons of the king, leaving behind women, aged and children. Deputing an army of an Akṣauhiṇī to guard the Śūnyaka city, all the demons biting their teeth set out to fight.

They very quickly reached the flame fort. Seeing that unapproachable fort they made up their mind to split it. Viśukra and other leaders discharged missiles of wind, mountain, moon, ice, earth, ocean, water, rain and showers on the flame fort which totally destroyed all of them like a straw by the fire of dissolution. 51 to 53

Realising the formidableness of that fort, Viśukra and others decided to fly high and enter it. As a demon flew high to enter into it, the flame fort grew taller than his flight. Thinking that it is not possible to fly and enter, the demons reached the gate of the fort. The flame burnt the demon who tried to enter the gate. 54 to 56

Thinking that it is impossible to go through the gate, the demons discharged weapons and missiles through the gate. Coming to know about this, Daṇḍanāthā ordered the śaktis to get ready. 57 to 58

All the śaktis were affected by the Vighnayantra and became lazy. Some were sleepy. They did not care for the orders by Daṇḍanāthā. They were thinking thus: "Why should we fight? Why should we kill the demons? The demons have not offended us. Why should we oppose them? Why should we fight with the demons to achieve the ends of gods? Why should we not fight with gods to help the demons? Daṇḍanāthā and Mantriṇī are by nature irascible and having drunk they are irrational. Even Devī Lalitā who is always engaged in amorous pastimes with Kāmeśvara has lost Her discriminating power and She always considers as good the suggestions of the intoxicated Mantriṇī. What to talk about Bālā who is always interested in sports. 59 to 65

"The influence of illusion is astonishing. Why did we kill the demons? By engaging in futile cruelty we will perish soon. Let us go to sacred ponds and as ordained happily have atonement for the sins of torturing the demons". Some śaktis thought thus: "Enough of this grief-generating war. Let us go to sacred places and achieve our wants by performing penance." 66 to 68

Some other śaktis said thus: "Enough of this war which destroys our body. Let us obtain a suitable husband and enjoy forever." They were talking thus resorting to separate views and said to Daṇḍanāthā thus: "We will never fight this useless war and we are not bound by your orders. If you get angry with us, then we will fight with you. Do not

Seeing the condition of the śaktis, Daṇḍanāthā was wonder-struck. She thought about how suddenly the śaktis had gone mad and quickly reported it to Mantriṇī. Mantriṇī was also surprised hearing about the delirium of the śaktis and went to the Great Empress Lalitā and bowed and submitted thus: 76 to 78

“Oh Mother! A most surprising obstacle is confronting us. This should be really the mischief of the wicked demons. The loss of intelligence of the śaktis is frightening. The demons, fully equipped, are outside the fort. Excepting Daṇḍanāthā, me and the śaktis in the Śrīcakra the rest of the śaktis with a changed behaviour are furious. Quickly order what has to be done. We cannot afford delay. Though You can by a mere movement of Your eyebrow destroy all the demons, we do not want it so. With mercy, suggest a remedy quickly for this problem.” 79 to 83

Requested thus by Śyāmalā (Mantriṇī), the Universal Mother Parameśvarī sportively and smilingly cast Her loving glances bright like the rays of myriads of moons and showering the ambrosia of amorousness on the face of Kāmeśvara which was like an ocean of beauty. 1, 2

Then with the mingling of the smile of the Devī with the face of Kāmeśvara was born the elephant-faced Gaṇapati red in complexion. In his right hands he was wielding the mace, the trident, the conch, the lotus and the tusk. In his left hands he was wielding the Citron, the bow, the disc, the noose and the bunch of grain spike. In his trunk he held a pot filled with gems. He was dressed in a red garment and wearing effulgent ornaments. He had three eyes. He was decorated with the digit of the moon on his gem-set crown. Embraced by Śakti, his consort, he was dripping with ichor. Bowing to Devī Lalitā with folded hands he spoke thus: "Oh Devī! Tell me about my role in the war. With Your grace I will achieve success even if it is highly impossible." 3 to 7

श्रुत्वैवं प्राह गणपं ललिताम्बा महेश्वरी ॥ ८ ॥

Hearing him Devī Lalitā said thus: "Oh My Son! Go and destroy the magical spell of the demons." 8

Ordered thus, Gaṇeśa swinging his trunk searched and quickly reached the Vighnayantra. As the saktis were watching, he angrily broke the yantra which was hard like diamond with his tusk and in a minute powdered it. Then going out of the gate of the burning fort he was excited to fight. 9 to 11

Entering the army of the demons, Gaṇeśa fought with them. He crushed some with the mace, cut some with the disc, split some with the spear and tore some with arrows. He killed thousands of demons with his tusk. He quickly destroyed the leaders of the demons. The army of the demons was driven away by the wind generated by the flapping of his ears. By the wind of his inhalations, groups of demons were drawn within and helplessly they entered the trunk duct and with their joints crumbled, there some died. Some who went unconscious were thrown out by exhalation and killed. Some died hit by the flapping of his ears. Some were thrown away and killed by the swinging of his ears. 12 to 17

Having thus destroyed the army of the demons, Ganesvara reached the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura and floored them by hitting them with the mace. He injured Viṣaṅga severely by piercing his chest with the tusk. Seeing the sons of the king and Viṣaṅga becoming unconscious, the demons wailed and ran away from the battle taking Gaṇeśa as the embodied god of death. 18 to 20

Then the angry Viśukra raising his mace strongly struck with all his energy the temple of Gaṇeśa by which Gaṇeśa bled excessively. The enraged Gaṇeśa with a spear pierced with great force the chest of Visukra. Viśukra fell unconscious. Having thus defeated Visukra, Gaṇeśa proceeded towards the chariot of Bhaṇḍāsura. 24 to 27

Seeing Gaṇeśa approaching him to fight, Bhaṇḍāsura considering the powerful Gaṇeśa as invincible by all the gods and the demons thought thus: "My desire is to be killed by the weapons of Devī Lalitā and thus reach Her abode. For this I think this Gaṇeśa is an obstacle. But how can I achieve my desire? Long ago this Gaṇeśa had really fought with a powerful demon in the form of an elephant. I will create a similar demon so that Gaṇeśa can fight with him and then I will proceed to fight with Devī Lalitāmbikā."

28 to 32

इति निश्चित्य ससृजे गजदैत्यं महान्दुतम्। पर्वताभं महाभीमं परिघोद्यत्सुपुष्करम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Deciding thus, Bhaṇḍāsura created Gajāsura who was astonishingly huge like a mountain, who was extremely powerful and was holding a bolt in his trunk.

That Gajāsura instructed by Bhaṇḍāsura rushed towards Gaṇeśa. Reaching Gajāsura, Gaṇeśa fought with him.

While Gaṇeśa was thus fighting, as a result of the destruction of the Vighnayantra, the śaktis returned to normal senses and proceeded to fight. Seeing Bhaṇḍāsura well prepared to fight by gathering his army, Devī Lalitā Herself after deliberation set out to fight accompanied by Daṇḍinī, Mantriṇī and the entire śakti force, who were angrily gnashing their teeth.

To begin with Devī Sampatkārī riding her elephant by name Raṇakolāhala and accompanied by the elephant force proceeded with zeal. Then Devī Aśvārūḍhā riding her horse Aparājitā and followed by the horse force started with excitement.

Meanwhile, Bālā who was excited to fight, but prevented by Devī Lalitā, bowed to Her and said sweetly thus: “Oh Mother! Please permit me who has decided to fight and who is always eager to fight. You are stopping me even when a great war is ahead. I will touch Your feet with my head. Please allow me to fight. Though anxiously waiting from a long period to fight, I am not getting the permission. On the first day of the war I was never satisfied because I was unnecessarily prevented by Daṇḍanāthā. Today, please fulfil my long-pending desire to fight for which I am well prepared.” 40 to 44

Hearing Bālā, The Supreme Devī Lalitā smilingly looked at Mantriṇī. Grasping the intention of Devī Lalitā, Mantriṇī said to Bālā thus “Oh Bālā! If you want to fight then listen to me. If you desire to fight alone with some one, do so by taking Daṇḍanāthā and me along with you. In the war without us you should not enter the army of the demons. We will be with you to take care of you. Tell me with whom you would like to battle.” 45 to 48

Hearing Mantriṇī, Bālā spoke again thus: “I will fight with the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura. No one else should discharge an arrow at them. Fighting alone I will kill all of them. None should ever destroy their chariots, vehicles and weapons.” 49 to 51

Hearing Bālā, Mantriṇī again said thus: “As permitted by Devī Lalitā you fight with one person. It is improper that you fight with the thirty sons of Bhaṇḍāsura who are very strong equalling Bhaṇḍāsura. With a fierce build, all of them are expert tricksters in war. You can choose one of them to fight with.” 52 to 54

Hearing Mantriṇī, Bālāmbikā with folded hands bowed and requested for permission to fight with all the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura. Seeing the beseeching Bālā, the pleased goddess Lalitā embraced her with love and gave her permission to fight. 55, 56

Then Bālā spoke again to Devī Tripurasundarī thus: “Oh Mother! Please listen to me a second time. Daṇḍinī should not stay with me in the war field because earlier she had spoiled my zeal to fight. If at all she goes with me let her stay behind me so that she will not obstruct me. If she were to again spoil my war, You will see her quickly defeated by me.” 57 to 59

Understanding that Bālā who was talking thus was angry, Daṇḍanāthā bowed to her and spoke to her softly and skillfully thus: "Oh Devī! Forget your doubt about me. I will accompany you to the war and watch you fight and do what pleases you by staying either in the front or at the back as ordered by you. I will not be an obstacle to you in the war."

Hearing Daṇḍanāthā, the happy Bālā soon embraced her and excited to fight proceeded quickly in her chariot. Mantriṇī and Daṇḍanāthā seated in their respective chariots proceeded on either side of Bālā followed by the army of the śaktis.

Then Devī Lalitā seated in the chariot named Śrīcakra, set out to war along with the required weapons. Behind Her, Tiraskariṇī riding a densely dark horse, which had the speed of the wind, took along the ocean-like countless army of the śaktis.

The cracking noise of the iron weapons emitting showers of sparks was frightening. Voices like—"You are dead. I will kill you. Stop. Do not run away. Show your strength. See my valour." and so on were heard all over. Some lost their limbs by arrows, some were cut by axes, some pierced by spears, some cut by swords, some crushed by bolts, some throats cut by discus, some hit by iron clubs, some killed by tridents and flats, some cut by javelins, and some heads broken by maces. Thus thousands of demons were severely attacked by the śaktis and a river of blood flowed.

Thus heavily tormented by the śaktis, the army of the demons wailed and ran away. Unable to bear the injuries from the weapons of the śaktis, the army of the demons which was pounded was reducing like the water in a breached dam.

Seeing the destruction of the army of the demons, Caturbāhu and others, the thirty sons of Bhaṇḍāsura, equal in valour to Bhaṇḍāsura, well versed in handling weapons and missiles and of unbearable prowess in war, seated in chariots showered arrows on the śaktis who seized by those schorcherers were unable to bear the flame from the weapons of the demons.

Thus inquired by sage Agastya, Hayagrīva started narrating the great war by Gaṇeśa. "Oh Agastya! Listen. I will tell you the most wonderful legend filled with the great prowess and elegance of Gaṇeśa. Gaṇeśa fought for a short duration in an unbearable manner, with the demon created by Bhaṇḍāsura. 3 to 5

अथ दैत्यः ससर्जाऽन्यान् दैत्यानात्मपराक्रमान्। तुल्यरूपांस्तुल्यजवांस्तुल्यसाहसविक्रमान् ॥ ६ ॥

"Then the demon created many other demons who were equal to him in looks, speed, strength and skills. Seeing many of them fighting, the angry Gaṇeśa also created crores of other Gaṇeśas who were equal to himself in all respects. Each Gaṇeśa fought astonishingly with one demon separately using various weapons and missiles. 6 to 8

दैत्याः शक्तिगणाश्चाऽपि तयोर्युद्धं महाद्भुतम्। ददशुः प्रेक्षका भूत्वा युद्धसंरम्भविस्मृतेः ॥ ९ ॥

"All the demons and the śaktis watched their great fight forgetting their own war activities. 9

Then the Gaṇeśas struck the demons with their weapons. Some demons were killed by spears, some cut to pieces by discs, some with maces, some torn by the tusks, some by dashing with their chests, some by trampling and some by hitting with the temple. Thus all the demons created by the demon were destroyed by the Gaṇeśas. 10 to 12

Then the mighty Gajāsura stood alone and fought with Gaṇeśa. Gaṇeśa seeing the demon who was single as earlier, immediately absorbed all the Gaṇeśas within himself. Then a great frightening war started between them using many weapons and missiles. 13 to 15

Then the great demon by his magical power grew very tall with thousand faces and twice as many arms wielding many weapons. Moment to moment he discharged thousands of weapons which were all destroyed by Gaṇeśa even as they were being created. Seeing the magic of the demon the enraged Gaṇeśa simultaneously destroyed the thousand weapons held by the demon. 16 to 18

Then Gaṇeśa and Gajāśura battled with maces hitting each other. Hit by Gaṇeśa's mace, the mace of Gajāśura was broken to pieces. Then the demon without a weapon rushed with his raised fist to kill Gaṇeśa. Gaṇeśa flung his mace at him which without injuring him even a bit dropped on the ground after striking his body. Then weapons like disc, trident, bolt and spear which were charged on him fell futile on the ground after touching his body like a shower of stones on a rocky mountain. 19 to 23

Seeing the demon invincible by all weapons, as Gaṇeśa was worrying the demon hit him with his fist. Then a fierce fist-fight began between them emitting fire from the collision of their fists. Then Gaṇeśa by his arms bound the demon and pushed him on to the ground and trampling him by the foot pierced his chest by the tusk by which the demon died in the war. 24 to 27

Seeing the approaching Gaṇeśa, Bhaṇḍāsura fearing about his strength prayed to Devī Lalitā thus: "Oh Mother! This body of mine should be destroyed by You in war. Fulfil this desire of mine who has surrendered at Your lotus feet." 29, 30

Understanding the desire of Bhaṇḍāsura, Devī Lalitā seated in the Śrīcakra chariot, in order to fulfil the wants of Her devotee remembered Gaṇeśa. Knowing about the remembrance by the Devī, Gaṇeśa came there and bowed and said thus: "Oh Mother! Why did You remember me while I was fighting." 31, 32

Hearing Gaṇeśa, the Supreme Devī Lalitā said thus: "My child! Enough of your fighting. Now stay by My side. Let other goddesses who are eager fight with the army of the demons." Ordered thus, Gaṇeśa refrained from the fight. 33, 34

Then seeing the army of the śaktis being enormously destroyed by the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura, Bālā pouring arrows at the demons entered to fight. The sons of Bhaṇḍāsura accompanied by a countless army surrounded Bālā of astounding valour. Crores of arrogantly roaring demon soldiers showered on Bālā, who was seated in the chariot, many types of weapons. 35 to 37

Then Daṇḍanāthā addressed the śaktis thus: "Listen. I will convey the orders by Bālāmbikā. None of you should discharge weapons on those demons with whom Bālā fights. If you do so, you will be punished by me. You should be watching her fight without interfering." Declaring thus, Daṇḍinī along with Mantrinī stood by the side of Bālā to watch the glory of her war. 38 to 40

Bālā was pleased by the ruling given by Daṇḍanāthā. She wonderfully fought alone with countless demons. The Siddhas and gods from the sky, watching her fighting alone with many, were surprised. 41, 42

Then Bālā was covered by the bunch of weapons released by the demons just like the rising sun by a group of clouds. Seeing her covered by weapons, the śaktis were stupefied. 43, 44

Then instantly Bālā destroyed that shower of weapons by showering counter weapons and again hit the demons. Then the skilled Bālā of astounding valour, simultaneously destroyed the weapons and vehicles of multitudes of demons. She cut off the weapons of the demons even as they were holding them. Again discharging sharp arrows she quickly killed the demons. Even a sharp observer could not notice her picking, placing, stretching and releasing of the arrows. But from the middle of her bow were continuously emerging in all directions sharp arrows just like moths from the holes in the earth. The heads the demons were dropping in bunches making crackling sounds like the ripe fruits falling from a coconut tree. 45 to 50

Some demons lost their hands, legs, thighs, chests and other their throats and stomachs. Continuously struck, they looked like thousand-eyed Indra. (Means that they were cut to thousands of pieces). Some cut to pieces were powdered. Some pierced in their chest lost their lives and stood like paintings holding the weapons. Some flung away by the speed of the arrow died and looked like fleeing out of fear of war. Thus within a short period, myriads of demons killed by Bālā fell down. There was not even one demon who even though strong could protect himself. Hence there was no scope for any one to fight and discharge weapons. The demons had not believed that all alone Bālā could fight so severely even though they had witnessed the fight of crores of śaktis. 51 to 56

शक्तिसेना नभःसंस्था देवाद्याश्च समन्ततः ॥ ५७ ॥

Then, as Bālā was slaughtering the demons, they dropped the weapons and ran away frightened. They were shouting thus: "Alas! We are ruined. She is really not a young girl. She is the personified god of death who has arrived to torture us. Today the entire army of the demons will be wiped out soon." Saying thus and wailing they ran helter-skelter, but obstructed by the downpour of weapons they did not find an exit. Hit by the arrows they fell in bunches on the heap of dead bodies and hid themselves there fearing death. 58 to 62

When the army of the demons was getting depleted and fleeing, the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura hearing about the small residual army arrived there on chariots pulled by lions and wielding great bows. Enraged very much they surrounded Bālā simultaneously just like the dark-clouds roaring like a lion cover the Sun and showered arrows on Bālā. 63 to 65

Bālā fought sportively with the many who were equal to Viṣṇu in prowess. Mantriṇī, Daṇḍinī and others were astonished to see the valour of Bālā and reported to Devī Lalitā thus: "Oh Devī! Bālā will really not spare any one whether he is Bhaṇḍa or his brothers or his sons along with the army chiefs. Today, she, playing as it were, will undoubtedly wipe-out the demons." 66 to 69

Fighting thus for a while with the valiant sons of Bhaṇḍa she gradually destroyed in one stroke their chariots, flags and umbrellas. Countering their showers of arrows she broke their bows by great arrows.

Then even as the enraged sons of Bhaṇḍa tried to kill Bālā with swords, maces and so on, Bālā cut off their weapons. Rendered weaponless the demons experienced the amazing prowess of Bālā and were worried.

Seeing the sons of Bhaṇḍa under the grip of Bālā the great death, Viṣaṅga and Viśukra followed by a huge army quickly reached there to save them announcing thus: "Do not fear. We have arrived to save you". Bālā saw them uttering this and showering weapons like dark clouds.

Seeing that, Bālā with great joy easily warded off the thronging weapons. Then she drove away the army of the demons by a wind missile just like the clouds by a gale and destroyed them. Then seeing the two demons Viṣaṅga and Viśukra approaching fast holding mace and sword, Bālā instantly destroyed their chariots and elephants. Then she massively struck their chest individually by which they fell on the ground like a mountain struck by a thunderbolt.

Meanwhile the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura were going back to get weapons. Seeing them going away, Bālā quickly destroyed their chariots. Then striking with sharp arrows their shanks who started walking, Bālā said thus: "Oh Sons of Bhaṇḍāsura! How are you brave demons showing your backs in the war? Does running away befit you? Tell me." 81, 82

Hearing the unbearable, bitter, derisive words the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura with pride and angry eyes returned to fight and said: "Oh Foolish Girl! Encountering us who are like the gods of death, you are somehow alive because of our compassion towards you as a young girl. Fie upon you! Now stay firmly. We will destroy your arrogance." Seeing them running towards her after saying that with raised fists, Bālā severed their heads individually with sharp arrows. Their heads dropped like ripe palm fruits. A loud wailing started amidst the army of the demons. Indra showered fragrant flowers on Bālā. Slogans of victory were heard everywhere among the śaktis. 83 to 88

When the sons of Bhaṇḍāsura were thus killed, seeing the enthusiasm of Bālā to fight again, Mantriṇī and Daṇḍinī said thus: "Oh Devī Bālā! Let us see Devī Lalitā and bow and report to Her. Taking Her permission we will quickly return to fight. Meanwhile let the angry demons assemble to fight. You have achieved a difficult task which we would never have done." Saying thus they reached Devī Lalitā along with Bālā and climbed the Śrīcakra chariot and after bowing to Her, the Supreme Mother, narrated the most wonderful prowess of Bālā in the war. 1 to 4

Hearing about the death of his children, Bhaṇḍāsura was grieved very much. But again analysing soundly and picking up courage thought thus: "Alas! How am I deeply deluded and lost my memory? Why am I sad unnecessarily when Devī has fulfilled my want? She has done exactly according to my request. My sons would have grieved for me. Hence killed by the Devī they have attained salvation prior to me. I had earlier requested the Devī that I will reach Her abode along with my kith and kin.

"Now the Devī who fulfils the desires of the devotees has granted my wants. Why in vain is this great delusion possessing me? Enough of this confusion. Oh Devī! I have surrendered to you. Oh Great Devī! Fulfil my remaining desire. After killing my brothers along with the residual army, purify me and my wives in war by the flames of Your weapons and place us close to Your lotus feet. Burnt by the fire of Her arrow, when will I see the face of Śrīmātā which is wearing the digit of the moon, which is beautiful with three eyes, which has angry red eyes and frowning brows and attain the sorrowless nectarian place which is rare even to yogis." Praying thus and meditating on the form of Devī Lalitā which is beautiful like myriads of cupids, Bhaṇḍāsura for a moment went into trance.

Meanwhile his brothers reached there and saw him non-moving like a log and thought that he was unconscious by the bereavement of his sons and spoke to him consolingly. 18, 19

Hearing their pacifying words, Bhaṇḍāsura came out of the meditation and opened his eyes and saw his brothers standing before him. To conceal his real mind and laughing within, he exhibited to his brothers deep sorrow concerning the death of his sons thus: "Oh Sons! How have you departed discarding all affinity; Your father is helplessly drowned in the ocean of sorrow. Hearing about your death, how can your mothers, with concern and love, live with their hearts broken." 20 to 23

Seeing the lamentations of Bhaṇḍa, his two brothers deluded by the illusion of the Devī said thus: "Oh Lord of the demons! Enough of this sorrow which steals our courage and valour. Seeing you, the lord of innumerable worlds wailing, our body is burning like dried cowdung by the fire. Oh King! Stay happily with courage for some time. We will go and by one stroke of sharp arrows kill that Lalitā the killer of your sons. We will quickly bind and bring Her, who has plagued the demons, either alive or dead. 24 to 28

Saying thus, the two valiant brothers Viśukra and Viṣaṅga angrily proceeded holding arrows and bows in their chariots followed by two-akṣauhiṇī huge army. Individually they attacked the army of the śaktis from the sides. Viṣaṅga with one-akṣauhiṇī force attacked the Śricakra chariot from its left side. Viśukra attacked it soon from its right side. At the time of Sunrise on the third day of the war, all on a sudden they encountered the army of the śaktis and loud noise started on either sides of the śaktis. 29 to 33

Then Mantriṇī and Daṇḍinī hearing the war sound were alarmed and said to Devī Lalitā thus: "Oh Devī! The loud and frightening sound of encounter between the śaktis and the demons is heard. The deceptive demons without prior warning have attacked during odd hours. Oh Maheśvarī! Hence permit us. We will go there quickly." 34 to 36

Permitted by Devī Lalitā, Mantriṇī and Daṇḍinī bowed to Her and set out to fight followed by their individual army of śaktis. Dandini of fierce valour, who was on the right side of Devī Lalitā exited from the southern gate of the Śricakra in her Kiricakra which was tall with five cascading platforms and pulled by two lions on either sides and a bison in the front and driven by Bhairava himself. On either side of the Kiricakra accompanied the war-longing Svapneśvarī and Kālasankarsā in chariots pulled by lions. Followed by innumerable Vātukas, Kālikas and Vārāhis, Daṇḍanāthā proceeded to fight. 37 to 41

Similarly out of the north gate of Śricakra proceeded Mantriṇī in her very tall Geyacakra chariot which had seven cascading platforms and which was driven by four green horses. A smiling Śhyāmālā was the charioteer. Śaktis by name Śukas, Sārikas and Śhyāmalas were on the right side. Sangīta Śyāmala and Sāhitya Śyāmālā were on the left side. Laghu Śhyāmālā was at the back in the Geyacakra. Myriads of Śyāmalas born out of the body of Mantriṇī, proceeded surrounding the Geyacakra. All of them set out well equipped to fight. 42 to 46

All the śaktis of Śyāmālā were beautiful sixteen year girls wearing red silk garments and ornaments of nine gems. By their smile and glances they were enticing the entire world. Their eyes were moving round as a result of intoxication by drinking wine. They had known the beauty of literature and enjoyed music. They were interested in amorous sport and comedy. The army of Mantriṇī was splendid like a garland of Tamālā with blossomed flowers. 47 to 50

Then the armies of the śaktis and the demons encountered like seas breaching the shores. The sound from the drums, slogans and striking on the arms and the loud sound from the chariots and the neighing of the horses of both the armies were deafening the directions. 51 to 53

Some were pierced by arrows, some hit by bolts and some with all their limbs cut, died. The limbs of some were cut by discs and some heads were severed by axes. Some were strung like beads to spears and others were injured in their heads and stomachs by the leaders of the śaktis. 56 to 58

Seeing the demons getting destroyed by the śaktis, Viśukra with angry red eyes chased the śaktis by showering arrows from his chariot. It was like the downpour from the clouds during rainy season. Even the śaktis opposed the powerful Viśukra. 59 to 61

Then Jīmūtakāya, Devāri, Karambha and Śikhībhaṣaṇa, the sons of Viśukra who were as powerful as their father, entered the army of the śaktis and struck them. Seeing the śaktis thus tormented by the sons of Viśukra, Śukaśyāmalā and other śaktis attacked them by showering series of arrows. 62 to 64

Then without a weapon, as Viśukra punched her horses on their head by his fist, she hit his head with arrows by which he fell unconscious on the ground. When he was slightly conscious, Laghu Śyāmālā jumped out of her chariot to catch him and caught his arms. By then, regaining consciousness and realising that he is being captured, he struck Laghu Śyāmālā with his fist by which she became a bit unconscious. 76 to 80

At that moment, the śaktis situated in the chariot becoming aware of the proximity of the enemy attacked him in myriads. Then the eminent demon thinking that it would be impossible to stand their attack jumped into his own chariot which was near his army. There seeing his dead sons, he lamented for a while and burning with extremely enraged red eyes he tortured the śaktis by showers of arrows. 81 to 84

Seeing Viśukra killing the śaktis, Mantriṇī showered arrows from her cloud-like bow on him as if on the peak of a high blue mountain. Jambhīnī fought with Karālavaktra. After fighting with her for a long duration using weapons and missiles, Karālavaktra hit her vehicle, the pig with a mace by which with broken head it fell with the knees on the ground. Then the enraged Jambhīnī severed with a sword the head of Karālavaktra. 8 to 10

The mighty Visikha firmly confronted Stambhīnī. Riding an antelope she struck Visikha on his head with three arrows that looked like three peaks on his head and he bled profusely. Even he with anger snapped her bow-string many times by sharp arrows. Then the enraged Stambhīnī with a sharp arrow having feathers of eagle struck his camel and despatched it to the abode of death. Instantly with three sharp arrows she simultaneously broke his quiver, crown and the bow. The furious demon hurled a trident at Stambhīnī which she broke with a spear and felled his head. 11 to 17

Seeing the mule destroying the śaktis, the angry Andhinī hit it with a long-stretched arrow by which it fell unconscious. Meanwhile Vibhaṇḍa who gained consciousness, with extreme fury hit strongly her vehicle, the bison, which burning with anger threw him away by its horns. Flung by the bison, Vibhaṇḍa moved in the sky and fell unconscious at a distance of more than a yojana. 23 to 27

At that time his great mule braying and grunting rushed towards the bison and kicked it by its hind legs and bit it on its neck. The enraged bison pushed the mule on to the ground and pierced its stomach by its horns. With its intestine and eyes damaged, the mule died. Then getting out of stupor, Vibhaṇḍa kicked the bison. Andhinī with great fury severed his head by an arrow and Vibhaṇḍa lost his life. 28 to 32

The dark cloud-hued Bhairava attended always by eight Bhairavas resembling his own form followed by myriads of Bhairavas each wielding a trident and a stick, decorated with moon on their head, dark like cloud, wearing serpents and covered by elephant hides entered the ten-akṣauhiṇī huge army of Indraśatru and by their power destroyed it completely. Some demons were pierced by spears, some hit by sticks, some torn by nails and some punched by fists. The Bhairavas wore as garlands the intestines of the demons. 38 to 41

Seeing his army destroyed, the angry Indrasatru crushed the Bhairavas with his mace. Seeing this Manthāna, Asitānga and other Bhairavas, encountered the mountain-like Indrasatru who was riding a serpent. Indrasatru opposed all alone all of them. His diamond-like body was not injured by the tridents and sticks dropped on him just like a rocky mountain hit by fruits. Seeing the frightening demon unhurt, the leader of the Bhairavas fought with him and as the demon holding a mace was jumping into the sky to kill, Bhairava pierced him with a trident and killed him. 42 to 47

Lamenting the death of his sons, Viṣaṅga with utmost fury followed by a huge twenty-akṣauhiṇī army suddenly engulfed the śaktis like a consuming fire. Amidst sounds of drums he showered weapons on the Kiricakra and rendered dark the directions. His weapons looked like a swarm of moths flying above a great burning fire. 58 to 60

Realising that Daṇḍinī was invincible by weapons and missiles, the great demon Viṣaṅga created magical spells which caused fear universally. He created darkness and stupendous sounds. He showered dust, boulders, fire, diamonds, blood, filth, and skulls. He created a huge army of demons and with thousand legs, arms and faces manifested in hundreds of frightening forms. 71 to 73

Meanwhile Bhairava, the charioteer addressed Daṇḍinī thus: "Oh Devī! Stop your show of fear towards demons. Look at the worried and frightened śaktis. Destroy his magic by an anti-magical missile. Evening is nearing and then it would be difficult to undo his magic." 78, 79

Then Viṣaṅga holding a mace approached her and seeing him, the angry Daṇḍinī instantly severed his head with a sword just as Indra did away Tvaṣṭra (Vṛtrāsura) using the Vajrāyudha. When the dreaded Viṣaṅga was thus killed the gods sounded drums and showered flowers. The directions got brightened and the Sun looked brilliant. 80 to 84

Hearing about the death of his brothers and their sons, Bhaṇḍāsura grieved out of delusion. Then thinking properly he laughed about himself and thought thus: "Alas! What can I say about myself worried like this? Devī has fulfilled my old request. I am sure, She will fulfil my remaining requests. Hence I will go with my remaining army and face Her. I should not delay. Success is thronged with impediments. How great! The Supreme Devī will grant all the desires of a devotee who secretly begs Her. She who is the manifestation of comprehension is really the Divine Cow (Kāmadhenu). Discarding Her, who is the Inner-Being of all, who grants more than our desires and who confers Supreme Bliss, the unfortunate one longs in vain for sensory satisfaction which is the dreadful essence of sorrow that feeds one to death. I am really fortunate and accomplished as I will quit this filthy body keeping my eyes on the lotus feet of the Devī Lalitā and attain without doubt the highest Abode of Bliss." 2 to 9

Thinking thus, the Lord of the demons, to conceal his mind acted as if furious and gathered his entire army and set out to fight riding his huge chariot pulled by thousand lions and hoisted with white umbrella and fanned by attendants. He was followed by fifty mighty leaders of the army. Amidst sounds of war drums enhanced by slappings on shoulders intensified by the loud sound from the series of chariot wheels and the neighing of horses combined with the roaring of the lions that filled the universe, he set out to triumph making the earth tremble as it were.

Then the śaktis saw the huge ocean-like army of Bhaṇḍāsura which was unlimited, invincible and making a dreadful dignified sound. Seeing the arrival of Bhaṇḍāsura to fight, Mantrinī reported to Devī Lalitā thus: "Oh Great Empress! Bhaṇḍāsura has himself arrived along with well-equipped army and leaders to fight. If You think so, this is the appropriate time for Your victory."

Next moved the great Śrīcakra with nine cascaded platforms surrounded by Animā and other śaktis. It was tall with a pearl-set umbrella and flag with lotus emblem. Embellished with nine types of gems it was pulled by horses representing the senses. Devī Mahātripura-sundarī, the Empress of Śrīcakra was shining as She drove it holding a driving lash symbolising wisdom. 21 to 23

The two armies facing each other were looking uniquely elegant like oceans crossing the shore and receding. The dust generated by the pounding of the earth by the chariots, horses, elephants and soldiers, created darkness like a new-moon night. Crushed by the weight of the army it looked as though the darkness within the earth's core had come out or tortured by trampling, the earth itself out of fear had risen to reach her lord. The rising dust looked like an army in the sky for want of space on the earth. Such were the surmises by the gods watching from the sky. 29 to 34

Amidst sounds from war drums mixed with beating the shoulders and roaring, a frightening war started between the śaktis and the demons. Both discharged weapons like arrows, spears, double edged swords, javelins, swords, flats, tridents, iron clubs, maces, discs, slings, bolts, goads and sticks. The demons shouted thus: "We are ruined. We are suffering the death of our children and relatives. What is the use in living after being vanquished by the enemy? Let us with all strength defeat the śaktis and achieve our goal or else reach the heavenly garden by getting killed in the war." Determining thus the demons fought vehemently. 35 to 39

During the fight the śaktis and the demons were mutually getting killed by weapons. Some died by pores created in their bodies by the arrows, some who vowed to fight reached heaven, the heads of some cut with the sword jumped crackling into the sky like the dragon's head trying to swallow the Sun, some were crushed by clubs, some slit by discs, a bunch of them were strung like beads in a long spear and some heads flew into the sky looking like flapping birds. The war field was looking grand with mutilated bodies spread all around. It looked like a painting on a cloth or a sculpture in stone. The river of blood looked like the red paint spilled inadvertently by the painter. At some places it looked as though the artist has quickly wiped the red lacquer which was spilled by him. At some spots dead bodies pierced by arrows looked really like totally painted statues. Thus the huge army of Bhaṇḍāsura was very quickly destroyed like a moth by the fire called śaktis.

Then the leaders of the demon force, with angry red eyes tortured the śaktis by showering arrows heavily. 51

just like a recluse. Even earlier when you fought with Bālā I observed your extreme devotion towards Her. Please tell me about this frankly. Even after a dreadful defeat which should bring agony, I am not seeing an iota of grief or fear in you.”

To the charioteer who has been serving him from a long time and who is repeatedly asking him, Bhaṇḍāsura with a smile started answering thus: “Oh Demon! Listen. This auspicious Devī Lalitā is the ultimate Transcendental Reality. By getting killed by Her in war I will attain Her Supreme ever Blissful Abode free from sorrow and fear. A being deluded by illusion considers as supreme this earthly existence which is filled with fear and agony. More so this abode of Demons which is characterised by passion is extremely dreadful and one who thinks about this as good is an innocent animal.

Then encountering Sampatkari, Asvārūdhā, Daṇḍinī and Mantriṇī and displaying his excellent war skills and pleasing them one by one, Bhaṇḍāsura said thus! "Oh Goddesses! I am satisfied by your skills and prowess in war. I am eager to fight with your Empress immediately. You can be watching my war with Her. My shoulders feel embarrassed to fight with her juniors. After conquering Her I will battle with you." Hearing his request, the Goddesses consented thinking that he was invincible by them and that it would be appropriate for him to be defeated by Devī Lalitā and allowed him to fight with Her. 1 to 6

Then reaching the Śricakrarāja chariot, Bhaṇḍāsura started his extremely wonderful war. The śaktis were just watching the war. Similarly the entire sky was filled by gods, siddhas and ṛṣis who had arrived in the aerial cars to witness the war. Bhaṇḍāsura getting face to face with Devī Lalitā was very happy and mentally bowed with devotion to Her and soon discharged five arrows which created wonders. The first two arrows fell as bunch of flowers at Her feet. The third arrow became a garland of blossomed lotuses around Her neck. The fourth one showered flowers on Her head. The last one settled on Her crown as a diamond.

Seeing such a worship, Devī Lalitā was very much pleased. All the gods started doubting about it. Hearing from Nārada about the supreme devotion of Bhaṇḍāsura towards Devī Lalitā, Indra was extremely surprised.

Then began a great war between Devī Lalitā and Bhaṇḍāsura and the entire sky was covered with wonderful weapons and missiles. Bhaṇḍāsura, an adept in the usage of missiles fought with valour to please the Great Devī.

Bowing mentally to the Devī who was before him, Bhaṇḍāsura started insulting Her with words secretly filled with praise. "Oh Devī Lalitā! Listen. You appear to me like an actress engaged in deceit like a man putting on a female dress but devoid of female characteristics.

I consider you as neither female nor male. With despicable conduct you have neither shame nor fear. You are not born in a respectable clan because you appear contrary. I think only indiscriminate persons engaged in devious ways will contact you. I consider it as the result of my past actions that you, with such an abominable nature, are seen in front of me. Listen. I will utter the truth. Let matters remain as they are. Somehow you are in my presence. Hence discarding deceit and magic stay firmly in front of me. Do not run away. You cannot cheat me and disappear. Hence taking into consideration my secretly determined desire and seeing my prowess accomplish your vow.” 17 to 26

Hearing his words with concealed meanings, Devī Lalitā was happy and said thus: “Oh Lord of the demons! Listen. What you spoke is quite in order. I will fulfill your wants and drive away your arrogance. The person who has come under my vision will not be born again. If you have any interest in fighting, then be firm totally.” Saying thus She showered arrows on Bhaṇḍāsura. 27 to 29

Bhaṇḍāsura also quickly showered counter-arrows. Appreciating each other their scientific skill in handling the weapons they fought a tumultuous horripilating great war. 30

Fighting thus for a long period, the demon created missiles of fire, water, moon, Kubera, Mountain, rain, Indra, wind, Brahmā and Kumāra. Devī Lalitāparamēśvarī destroyed all such missiles by counter-missiles just like the Sun destroys mist. 31 to 33

Similarly Devī Lalitā instantly destroyed all the new missiles created by him. Then Bhaṇḍāsura created Madhu, Kaiṭabha, Somaka, Hiraṇyākṣa, Hiraṇyakaśipu, Bali, Kārtavīryārjuna, Rāvaṇa, Kumbhakarna, Mura, Grāha, Kamsa and Dvividā and so on, the demons who are the enemies of Viṣṇu and engaged in the destruction of the world. These demons possessed the same characteristics and valour as Bhaṇḍāsura and were keen on troubling the creation by their ignorance. Then Devī Lalitā created from each of Her hand nails the ten incarnations of Nārāyaṇa who very quickly destroyed the demons. 34 to 38

Then again Bhaṇḍāsura created Andhakāsura, Mṛtyu, Kāma and Tripurāsura who are the enemies of Mahādeva. Seeing them Devī Lalitā from Her third eye created the God of gods Mahādeva by whom these demons were destroyed. 39, 40

Then Bhaṇḍāsura created a frightening huge army that was earlier killed by the śaktis. He created Viṣaṅga, Viśukra, Caturbāhu, Karanka, Kuṭilākṣa and so on, just like Brahmā creates after deluge. 41, 42

Then these enraged demons fought with the śaktis. Every one was surprised by the ability of Bhaṇḍāsura. The gods and the śaktis were afraid of the consequences. A great war emerged and as the demons were getting destroyed, Bhaṇḍāsura again and again created them.

43 to 45

Witnessing this, the gods and the śaktis were very much frightened. Then Brahmā and others prayed to Devī Lalitā for protection. Mantriṇī approached Devī Lalitā and bowed to Her and with folded hands requested Her in a sweet voice thus: "Oh Devī! The prowess of Bhaṇḍāsura is dreadful. See the exhausted faces of the śaktis who have been fighting without rest for the past six hours. The demons killed by the śaktis are being instantly created again. Caturbāhu and other sons of Bhaṇḍāsura who were killed seven times by Bālā are fighting again. Viṣaṅga who was killed ten times and Viśukra nine times are fighting again resuscitated by Bhaṇḍāsura. Karaṅka, Kuṭīlākṣa and others who were destroyed many times are again encountering us. We cannot battle any more. Please see the śaktis who are afraid, tired and dull. Hence I request you to protect the world with due concern."

Thus implored by Mantriṇī, Devī Lalitā with a smile said thus:

“Oh Mantriṇī! Do not be afraid. Watch while I destroy the lord of the demons within seconds.” Saying thus, She loaded Her bow with an arrow and invoked the universally dreaded Pāśupata missile in it and discharged it on the army of the demons. That missile soon reduced to ashes the ocean-like army of the demons. 54 to 56

Again Devī Lalitā placed another effulgent arrow in Her bow by which all the directions were filled with flames, the earth trembled, the ocean agitated, the entire creation was frightened, there was a shower of thousands of meteors. Many tigers and so on went round Bhaṇḍāsura in an anti-clockwise direction. 57, 58

Seeing the loss of his ocean like army, Bhaṇḍāsura meditated firmly on the lotus feet of Devī Lalitā and as he was getting absorbed into the meditated, the Devī released the arrow invoked with Kameśvara missile which was very dreadful. It was emitting flames that brightened the universe and looked like the consuming fire which would burn the entire creation. Blinding the eyes of one and all it astonishingly reduced to ashes Bhaṇḍāsura along with his chariot, his Śūnyaka city, all the women, old persons, children, beautiful buildings, animals and so on just like a straw by conflagration. 59 to 64

Brahmā, Viṣṇu and other gods who could not see the trace of either Bhaṇḍāsura or his army or his destroyed city or his children were astounded and shouted slogans of triumph. The śaktis banged the drums in thousands. The gods played on musical instruments. The Gandharva leaders sang. Ūrvaśī and other celestial damsels danced happily. The sages recited hymns. The siddhas repeated the names of the Transcendental Devī. The sages meditated on Her form and others prostrated before Her. 65 to 68

The gods showered blossomed fragrant flowers, the clouds looked peaceful and thundered in a low tone, the wind carried fragrant droplets mixed with the aroma of sandal and saffron giving a pleasing experience, the Sun shone bright, the oceans were placid, the rivers and ponds were limpid like pure minds. With the destruction of Bhaṇḍāsura the universe glowed as if resuscitated after a deluge and was free from anxiety and animosity. 69 to 72

उपेत्य देवप्रमुखाः सर्वे तां ललितां पराम्। हर्षनिर्भरितस्वान्तास्तुष्टुर्विविधैः स्तवैः ॥ १ ॥

Going near the Transcendental Devī Lalitā, the ecstatic gods praised
Her with many hymns. 1

जय जय ललिताम्ब त्वत्पदाम्भोजसेवा फलमिह भजतां किं किन्न दद्यादभीष्टम्।

"Oh Mother Lalitā! Victory to You. What wants will not be obtained by those devoted to You as a result of serving Your lotus feet? You will grant the wants more quickly than the divine trees which are having qualities similar to You. 2

Oh Mother! Your sport illumines the universe. Whence will you feel tired fighting the demons? May You always dwell in our mind which is purified by pure actions. 5

Your swan like feet which cause wisdom among age-old ignoramus drives Brahmā (as well). 6

इति स्तुत्वा दण्डवत्ते प्रणता विधिमुख्यकाः। भूयो भूयोऽपि विविधैः स्तवैस्तुष्टुपुराणिकाम् ॥

After praising thus, Brahmā and others prostrated before Her and praised Her again and again by many hymns. 7

Oh Agastya! Meanwhile myriads of Brahmās responsible for creation arrived there along with Bhāratī and other śaktis. With folded palms on their heads, they bowed and praised Devī Lalitā worthy of praise and said with folded hands thus: "Oh Devī! By the destruction of Bhaṇḍāsura today, hundred and five universes, which were ruled by him, have been protected. In these universes Indra and other gods were imprisoned and some gods had run away. Everywhere only demons ruled. Only vedas and sacrifices propounded by the demons were practised. Oh Śankarī! Worship to gods and sacrifices were not seen any where under his administration and Brahmins had to propitiate the demons. Now as You have killed the demon in war other demons have run away and the lords of directions, Indra and others are established in their portfolios and everything is peaceful." 8 to 14

As the gods were saying thus, Viśvakarma arrived there and after bowing to the Devī, Brahmā and others said with folded palms thus:

 “Oh Creator! As ordered by you I have constructed on the peak of Meru the Śrīpura for the Devī. You may please see that along with the Devī and gods.” 15, 16

Thus requested by Viśvakarma, Brahmā reported the matter to Devī
 Lalitā who requested ‘by all the gods reached there along with the śaktis and the gods. Seeing the city constructed by Viśvakarma which was like a reflection of the Great Śrīpura, all the gods and the -śaktis were wonderstruck. 17 to 19

The gods bowed to Devī Lalitā and requested Her to dwell in the Śrīpura. After taking Her consent, Brhaspati and others arranged auspicious items required for the coronation. 20, 21

After the arrangements, Brahmā at the auspicious zodiacal time assisted by sages performed the sacred sprinkling on the Devī according to the best Vedic procedures. The group of gods, Maruts, Vasus, Fires, Gandharvas, Divine messengers, Lords of the directions, Yakṣas,

Guhyakas, Demons, Siddhas, Saints, Ṛṣis, Manes, Rākṣasas and Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśāna and Sadāśiva from the myriads of universes and Śrīkaṇṭha and Ādiśeṣa were all present at the coronation and served Devī Lalitā in several ways. Myriads of Brahmāṇis, Lakṣmis and Gauris with devotion worshipped Devī Lalitā by individual services. 22 to 28

After the auspicious sprinkling and chanting, as the musical instruments produced enthralling music, as the Gandharvas sang tunes with pleasing modulations, as the celestial courtesans danced, as the saints uttered the sacred names, as the Ṛṣis chanted hymns loudly and as many viewers arrived with effort, Brahmā helped Devī Lalitā to the sacred great throne. 29 to 31

Then Brahmā assisted by Vasiṣṭha and others sprinkled Her with consecrated waters, from various rivers and seas, contained in pots having special nine types of gems. After the coronation, the gods worshipped with worthy materials, the Devī effulgent with many jewels and special garment shining on the Śrīcakra throne supported by the five causal deities. Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Maheśa and others individually prayed to Her by rare hymns and prostrated before Her. 32 to 36

After getting coronated on the throne in the Sripura at the peak of Meru, Devi Lalitā just as in the Great Sripura allocated suitable places to Mantrinī and others. Oh Agastya! Thus the Devi is dwelling on the high peak in Sripura giving instructions to Brahmā and others. The Sripura constructed by the skill of Visvakarma using precious material is marvellous. Requested by Brahmā and others Devi Lalitā out of compassion accepted the umbrella and sandals offered by them. In this manner Devi Lalitā stays here assuming a sportive form, even though She is nothing but concentrated Consciousness and Bliss. 37 to 40

Hearing from Hayagrīva the most purifying legend the exhilarated Agastya got into a doubt and questioned thus: "Oh Compassionate Hayagrīva! I am surprised that the city of the Devi is on top of Meru as described by you. There is no place in the universe which is not known to me. More so on the Meru there is any place unknown to me. The Meru is like the wall on which the world picture is painted. There are seven worlds above and seven worlds below and atop Meru there are abodes of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva and there is not even two inches space on it which I do not know. Then how have you described the existence of Sripura there? Please clarify my doubt." 41 to 46

Saundaryalaharī, Stanza 8

Thus inquired by Agastya, the pleased Hayagrīva said thus: "Oh Agastya! Listen to the profound secret which I will narrate. The Śrīpura will not be visible to one and all. Only those persons, who propitiate Devī Tripurasundarī in the ordained way, will see that place and not others. By listening to Her glory, You have developed devotion towards Her, by which there would be nothing unattainable. Having possessed the ocean (the store house of diamonds), there would be no desire about a diamond. 47 to 50

"Oh Agastya! This is the glory of Devī Lalitā which I have narrated to you. Hearing this glory, one will be absolved of all sins. In the Kali period for people whose mind is polluted and wicked, there is no alternative except listening to the glories of Devī Tripurasundarī. Disappointed persons, by practising Vedic paths will develop devotion towards Viṣṇu, Śiva and other Śaktis and in the end, as a result of maturity, turn to worship Devī Tripurā always. They will realise that She, who is the unique Consciousness and Bliss ruling the entire universe, is their own self and experience the Transcendental Sovereignty and attain immortality. 52 to 57

“Oh Lord! Today I am completely purified by you by drenching me with the flood of sacred water in the form of the legend of Śrī Parāśakti. Really I have been saved from the ocean of worldliness by your compassion. Oh Guru! Oh Sun unto the darkness of misery! Oh Saviour! Prostrations to you. I salute that serene fearless sage Samvarta, who showed me the right path while I was blindly wandering. Till now I wasted my life without understanding the proper goal just like a frog in a dried-up well. you to clarify. I am aware of your compassionate blessings on me. Merciful as you are, there will be nothing that should not be revealed to me, your disciple. How is that the erudite sage Agastya did not propitiate Śrī Parāśakti the universal Devī, because of which the beautiful city of the Devī was not visible to him? How come that it is not visible to even persons practising Veda? Later how was sage Agastya able to see that city? Please tell me about this.” 9 to 12

Thus requested, Guru Dattātreya addressed Paraśurāma thus: “Oh Paraśurāma! Listen. I will tell you a great secret wherein mere erudition will not be of use. The individual beings carry with them the hundreds of impressions acquired by their actions in the previous births. By receiving instructions from virtuous persons, these impressions will surface and will remain as long as that association lasts and there is no other means for this. 13 to 16

“Agastya only after meeting Hayagrīva and listening to the glories of Śrī Tripurasundarī and developing devotion to Her, was initiated by his wife. Till one is initiated, even if he is a worshipper of Śrī Tripurā, he will not be competent to climb the steps of the mansion of liberation. Oh Paraśurāma! Just as a brahmin, without initiation into Gayatrī Mantra, will have no right to perform any Vedic rituals, even here without initiation one cannot progress. Without getting initiated by a Guru and without knowing the procedures of the Guru, even if a person properly performs worship by self learning, he will perish just like a half-prepared medicine kills its consumer. 17 to 21

“The person who masters the mantra of a deity and its application without the help of a Guru will be offending that deity and he will have no salvation here and hereafter. Such an ignorant person has no chance of relieving himself of such an offence. The kings, without ignoring the disobedience of a person, punish him in several ways. 22 to 24

“Persons who advocate only Veda have no eligibility for the worship of Devī Tripurā just depending on the rituals of the Veda because there is no scope for liberation in such rituals. If liberation is attainable in a special way to persons who falsely assume its attainment and have least knowledge about Self, then why cannot such liberation be had by trees as well? The Vedic masters assume that the result, obtained by smokes, is permanent. But, where is it seen that by adopting a sickle means a stable result was obtained? Without the concept of everlasting results they seek satisfaction in limited results wrought with misery 25 to 29

“The Vedas characterised by the worldly tendencies was promulgated by Brahmā for the continuance of the world and for the satisfaction of the gods, just like the poison for a person wanting to die. Since the spiritual portion of the Veda was concealed by Brahmā himself, deluded persons could not know about it. 30 to 32

"Even sanyāsins (renunciates) should propitiate Cicchakti (Absolute Consciousness). If any one discontinues the worship of Śrīvidyā either by ignorance or by insensibility, he will enter the non-returnable world of dark nescience. A sanyāsina should sacrifice all attachments. Oh Paraśurāma! But the practice of this Śrīvidyā which is characterised by liberation should not be discarded by him as he does the Veda. 35 to 37

Further the offenders, ordered by Daṇḍanāthā, will be punished by the terrifying śaktis like Sankarsinī, Karsinī, and Kalasankarsinī, in one of the hells mentioned earlier. The person devoted to Śrīvidyā will attain liberation. 38 to 41

"The salvation secured by a practicer of Tantra method cannot be had by him who practises Vedic methods, because the Vedic action is always extrovert and depends on self-effort without a proper place for Īsvara and suitable to experience sensory pleasures. In the Tantric method the action directed towards the godhead, Īsvara is filled with enlightenment, belief and devotion which confer realisation and liberation. 42 to 44

"By engaging oneself in the prescribed action of Śrīvidyā, a person becomes pure and in the same birth equals Śiva. Even the ignorant, by practising Śrīvidyā through self effort will attain freedom. Without proper initiation one has no right to take to the path of enlightenment. The initiated person will reach the transcendental abode after death. Even the non-enlightend acquire spiritual knowledge through Śiva and become Śiva themselves. Oh Parasurāma! Hence, by practising the sapless Vedic methods, one cannot attain liberation. 45 to 48

If so without Śakti who is his consciousness, Śiva does not exist just like the Sun has no locus standi without his brilliance. How can Śiva exist without Śakti his Consciousness. Bereft of the power of consciousness even a blade of grass cannot exist. The truth is that consciousness is everything and without it there is nothing. Oh Paraśurāma! “The Veda is meant for the three class of people. For the emancipation of all, the compassionate Parameśvara has disclosed the Āgamas like Veda. The deliberation of Parameśvara is Āgama. Gradually these Āgamas uttered by Brahmā pervaded the universe like an ocean. In the course of time, keeping in view the ignorant helpless lot, the Ṛṣis churned the ocean of the Āgamas by their abundant intelligence and brought out the Tantras, the nectar-like essence of Āgamas that are classified according to different climes. 65 to 69

“Only those brahmins who are refined by rituals are eligible for Tāntric worship. Śūdras are directly eligible to practice Tantra. Veda is Tantra and Tantra is Veda. There is not even an iota of difference between them. Thus the Veda contains Tantra and where the mantras and yantras are explicit, such portions are the most prominent in Veda.

“Oh Paraśurāma! The Tantra containing codified allusions is superior to all else. Even in Tantras there are divisions like Vedic portion, Mantra and Brāhmaṇa portions. Hence, methods of Tantra are the best. The Purāṇas contain portions of Tantra. Similarly the Tantra which contains features like creation and so on, is to be considered as the prominent portion of the Purāṇas.

“Therefore understand that the Vedas and the Tantras have originated from the ocean of Āgamas which are the natural reflections of Devī Śrī Tripurasundarī. The universal process is controlled by Her. Even though Agastya was a Vedic ritualist, he did not see the city of the Devī on the Meru for want of initiation. Later by hearing the excellent glories of the Great Devī, he became Her devotee and got methodically initiated by his wife into Her worship and after worshipping Her, secured a place along with Lopāmudrā in the circle of Gurus and attained Bliss. Thus Agastya saw and reached the sacred abode of Devī Tripurasundarī.

After listening to the narration by Dattātreyā, Paraśurāma with a pure mind bowed and with folded palms again said thus: "Oh Lord! Your narration was nectarian and it has cleared all my doubts. But I would like to ask you further about something. After getting initiated and undertaking daily the worship of Devī Tripurasundarī, by what special action either a king or a poor man will achieve great result very quickly? Oh Guru! Please enlighten me on this with compassion who is your servant."

Like Śiva who is pleased by bathing with water, like the Sun by prostrations, like Gaṇeśa by many offerings of eatables and like Viṣṇu by decorations, the Great Devī Parāśakti is pleased by special methodic worship. Listen! I will tell you the best method of worshipping Her."

“A Śrīcakra or a beautiful idol of the Devī should be installed on a well-decorated high platform (mansion) according to one's capacity and worshipped as prescribed either by himself or through a priest. The worship is to be done daily five times, or four times or three times or twice or once during early morning, morning, afternoon, evening and midnight respectively. On full-moon and new-moon days the worship has to be done twice or thrice or five times in a day. On festival days the idol has to be taken round the temple and streets in a chariot or a palanquin with dance and music in front of it. “Oh Paraśurāma! Worship of the installed Śrīcakra brings a lakh time more benefits than the uninstalled one. The devotee should place the idol of the Devī in the Śrīcakra and worship as stipulated. To obtain abundant benefits one should worship all the deities located in the Śrīcakra. Just like the rays of the Sun which originate from the Sun benefit the entire world by destroying cold, darkness and diseases of all creatures, the accompanying deities of Devī Tripurasundarī in the Śrīcakra who are the various aspects of Her are deputed to protect the world and therefore are to be worshipped as ordained. 18 to 22

“Just like the Sun in the sky is the concentrated mass of the rays, Devī Tripurasundarī embodies all Her accompanying śaktis. She is seated in the central point (Bindu) of Śrīcakra. He who cannot worship Her in detail using special worshipping materials, can worship her associate deities using easily available items within his limits. In some manner or other the Devī has to be worshipped in an installed Śrīcakra. He, who having got near an installed Śrīcakra fails to worship it, is to be considered as selfdestroyer and despicable. He who has limitations can worship with one or two or all items like sandalpaste, flowers, pounded rice, water, money, betel leaves, lamps, prostrations and circumambulation. A man or woman, who worships but once the Śrīcakra uttering Her thousand names, will undoubtedly get rid of all sins as declared by Lord Śiva. 23 to 29

After determination, Gaṇeśa has to be propitiated and benedictory mantras to be uttered by brahmins. Then the Devī has to be worshipped along with Her retinue according to the laid procedure. He should worship with five offerings (like sandal paste, flowers, incense, lamp and milk). At the stage of offering flowers, he should utter thousand names of the Devī and conclude with incense and so on. He should repeat this daily till one lakh offering is completed. The same type of flower has to be used daily. The thousand names are to be repeated in even numbers like two, four and so on in one day. He can worship either himself or along with his sons and grandsons or have it done through a brahmin/priest.

In the end, oblations, one tenth of the number chanted, with sweet pudding have to be offered for each of the Śrīsūkta mantra. Bathing by chanting Śrīrudra mantras will also bring many great benefits. 64 to 67

Thus what ever gifts are given by any one to the devotees of the Devi, they will undoubtedly attain commensurable place in the Śrīcakra.

"Oh Paraśurāma! I will now tell you about the best among gifts. Gifting of a Śrīcakra will bring immense benefits. On a full-moon day after worshipping the Śrīcakra with special materials, a austere brahmin devoted to Devi Tripurasundarī should be worshipped along with his wife offering clothes, jewels, sandal paste, flowers, seat and so on and wash his hands with Arghya water. Then he should retrieve the invoked Devi and feed as many brahmins as there are goddesses in the Śrīcakra enclosures. Sixteen Suvāsinis have to be fed by invoking one Nityā in each. According to ones' capacity brahmins have to be fed or sixteen Suvāsinis or sixteen or twelve brahmins. In this way, if the Śrīcakra is gifted the pleased Devi will confer the liberation of merger with Her.

This is the ultimate means to attain liberation because it propounds that devotion brings about liberation and such devotion will not dawn without listening to Her glories. Therefore, this is the first step to reach atop the transcendental mansion. Listening to Her glories is considered as the gateway to liberation. 110 to 113

Similarly without devotion there can be no wisdom or benefit. For a non-devotee there is no ritual, worship and enlightenment. Hence a non-devotee will not have bliss." 114 to 117

“Oh Nārada! Because listening to Her glory is the origin of devotion, one should listen to this portion of Tripurārahasya known as Mahātmyakhaṇḍa. It will wipe off the great sins of those who read and listen to it. Those who desire the blessings of Devī Tripurā should read one chapter or atleast one stanza every day. This will increase longevity and enhance auspiciousness. The poor will get rich and a barren woman will beget a son. Whatever one desires will be fulfilled by listening to this legend. If written and worshipped, it grants erudition and all wants. If contemplated it grants wisdom, devotion and detachment. This Tripurārahasya is the ambrosia obtained by churning the ocean of Āgamas (Vedas) and by drinking this nectar Śiva and others have become immortal and this nectar is the Mother Tripurasundarī the embodiment of the seed letter Hrīm!
